As soon as I realized, therefore, that I saw a swarm of bees, the idea of catching them came into my mind, but before I could form my plan the horn became excited and tried to run away. With a firm hand and a little coaxing, however, I managed to get him to follow the bees.

Now that was not catching the bees at all, and they might fly several miles if unmolested. I must try to do something. With a quick movement I brought down my hand, and with a firm hand and a little coaxing, however, I managed to get him to follow the bees.

While these thoughts were running through my mind the horse and bees were getting over the ground at a good rate, and I had forgotten all about the cattle.

Just as I was about to give up the chase, we suddenly came upon old Bright and Brindle, the two big log-horn oxen, quietly chewing their cud in the shade. The unexpected appearance of the horse, and the noise of bees so frightened them, that they leaped to their feet with bellows and with heads and tails high in the air, raced away, straight ahead, making the woods ring with a ringing bell. In a few minutes the oxen, horse and rider were in the midst of the main herd.

I will leave it to you to imagine the racket made by the following of a hundred head of frightened cattle and the rattling of a dozen ox-bells. My horse reared and plunged, and I could hardly keep on my seat, but, jockily for me, the cattle turned their heads toward home and were soon out of sight.

After quitting the horse a little, I again turned my attention to the bees. Surely there had been no noise, though, if that were all that was needed. There they were, and what a pretty sight! A little bell had turned on a low branch, and hundreds of the little workers hovered around it, raising a low, muffled hum. I saw that each one seemed to have its own little niche to fill up, till presently nearly every bee was quiet. And there they hung, a great ball or cluster at least eight inches in diameter at the thickest and fully twenty inches in length.

I knew now that all I needed was a bag to carry them in and courage to get them into the bag. The bag I could make all right; so I slid off my horse and led him a safe distance from the bees and tied him to a tree. I then took off my riding skirt, and with my knife and a shoestring made a bag to carry them in, and courage to get them into the bag. The bag I could make all right; so I slid off my horse and led him a safe distance from the bees and tied him to a tree. I then took off my riding skirt, and with my knife and a shoestring made a bag to carry them in, and courage to get them into the bag.

I was so nervous that my limbs shook; I had to stand first on one foot and then on the other to steady myself, and my thoughts about the bees were not quieting me, either. However, I had my share of grit and I wanted that swarm badly; they were so handy, too.

In a few moments I was calmer, and I ventured to begin operations. My bag was so large that it was easy enough to bring it up under the cluster to the limb and then to draw the edges over the bees on top of the limb. When I had them covered as well as possible, having the open bag beneath them, I gave the limb a sudden jerk. The cluster fell like a stone, and the top of the bag and held them nearly all captive. My how they roared! If I had let them loose then they might have stung me to death, but I tied the top of the bag tight with my other shoestring and so had them fast enough. I had received three or four stings, but I was so happy that the pain amounted to nothing.

By fastening the bag to a stout forked stick, I was able to carry it. A few stings were buzzed around, but none offered to sting, and I reached home with my prize safe and sound.

"What in the world have you got there now?" said my father, who was just coming from the yard. "Is it another owl?"

"No!" I answered, "it is a swarm of bees that I have caught, and I want to have and keep them for my very own, and have them build straight combs that I can take out any time I want to look at them."

My mother and the boys also came to see what I had, and they all thought that it was a wonder how I had been able to catch them. John brought a hive and a smudge, and as I opened the sack before the entrance, he blew smoke over them. Soon a few bees entered the hive, seeming to get up the cry, "Home is found," which was answered by the other little prisoners, and in less than half an hour they were all at home.

During the afternoon I watched them to see that they did not leave and the next morning was rewarded for my trouble by finding them busily at work.

DEADLY SNAKES.

Various Signs by Which Their Character May Be Recognized.

To distinguish between venomous and harmless snakes is easy in practice, but it is difficult to explain in words alone, as there is one external characteristic which distinguishes them. It is rather a peculiar, varying union of many separate marks that brands the dangerous reptile.

Generally speaking, all snakes may be divided into two great classes—those which have the head covered with numerous small scales and those which have it covered with large, regularly fitted plates. Leaving out the elapids and the poisonous sea snakes, with which the hunter will have nothing to do, all snakes with small head scales move about by night and those with the large plates on the head by day. This may be known by their eyes, for the first have vertical pupils like the cat's, while those of the latter are generally circular in form. The long, active day snake, gliding about from bush to bush or hurriedly taking refuge beneath some protruding rock or tree stump, is harmless. Even should he be coiled in the sunbake he will see from approaching danger. But a serpent nicely coiled in some secluded nook which instead of seeing gathers himself closer together, most probably dangerous, particularly if he be more or less marked with a suggestion of irregular crossbars or whitish or dirty yellow and darker brown or blackish. This is the characteristic coloring of our most dangerous snakes, the rattler, the copperhead and the moccasin.

The following points embrace all the peculiarities of our American vipers, and the last two are especially noteworthy as the crowning proofs of venom:

- (1) Moving about at dusk or by night, generally on the ground, and very rarely ascending trees or bushes. (2) Seldom flying in alarm, but rather coiling for defense. (3) Colors generally subdued to flat, with a semblance of irregular crossbars of lighter and darker shades. (4) Tall short, body stout, neck thin, head flat and very broad, especially behind. (5) Scales holed—each scale has a ridge down the middle, which gives the skin a rough appearance like a rasp. (6) Head covered with small scales, sometimes larger over the eyes or nose. (7) Eyes with vertical pupils like a cat's. (8) Two pits or holes between the eyes and nose, suggesting four nostrils. (9) Two long, curved, perforated fangs in the upper jaw just in front of the eye, one on either side and so placed that they lie backward, hidden from view in a membranous sheath, but erectile at will.

Some of the first seven peculiarities may be found in harmless snakes, but it is only in the vipers that they are united.—Osteo.

A Fine Baby

Makes any mother proud. There are a great many proud mothers whose children have been puny and sickly until they began the use of Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. That medicine which "makes weak women strong" has given them the strength to bear hearty and healthy children for the first time.

"Six years ago after the birth of one of my children I was left in a weak run down condition," says Maria O. Hayzel, writing from Brookland, D. C. "My health seemed utterly gone. I suffered from nervousness, female weakness and rheumatism. Life was a burden. I doctored with three different physicians and got no relief. I tried several patent medicines, all with the same result. I began to get worse and to add to the complications I suffered terribly from constipation. I changed to see one of your advertisements and I commenced to take Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription and 'Pleasant Pellets' and began to improve right away, and continued improving and gaining in strength. I cannot express the relief it was so great. Seven months later my little daughter was born with-out much trouble. I feel that I would never have been able to endure my confinement but for the help she solely to Dr. Pierce's medicine. She was a fine healthy child and the only one I have ever been able to nurse. She is now two years old and I have never had to take any medicine since, so I feel that your medicine has made a lasting cure with me."

Dr. Pierce's Common Sense Medical Adviser is sent free on receipt of stamps to defray expense of customs and mailing only. Send 31 one-cent stamps for the book in paper binding, or 50 stamps for cloth. Address Dr. R. V. Pierce, Buffalo, N. Y.

LAYING UP A COMPETENCE.

Something That Practically Any Man Can Do Through Self Denial.

"There are some men of genius," said Mr. Nippingby, "who accumulate great fortunes by great strokes, but by far the greater number of fortunes, including those of moderate dimensions, and these form the great majority of all, are made by the very simple process of laying within one's income and investing the surplus with more or less wisdom, but always where it will be safe."

"The older I grow the more amazed I am that more people don't lay up a competence for themselves, as most anybody can do, by beginning early in life to live within their income and sticking to that course faithfully. Did I do this myself? No. Am I, however, having learned the wisdom of this course, now making a beginning? I am obliged to say 'No.' I am still spending all I get and laying by nothing."

"There are some lessons that we all easily acquire, but never turn to our own advantage. One of these is of the benefits that arise from the exercise of self denial. We get from this at once the direct benefit of what we save, and self denial nourishes, strengthens and broadens the will and enables a man constantly to do and to earn more and more."

"There's simply nothing like self denial. It is the key to every one of life's treasures, and everybody has one of those golden keys in his possession, eager to help him and waiting only for him to bring it in use."—New York Sun.

An Amazed Woman.

A woman who had an Arabic glass cup of the fourteenth century and did not know its value took it to the British Museum. After due consideration the expert, her surprise, said that, though the museum did not want it, it might be worth $2,000. The woman added, because she had been carrying in a crowded London omnibus a bit of glass—so much money and it had miraculously escaped smashing.

Finally, wanting money more than Arabian glass, she sent the object to an auctioneer's. Fancy her amazement when, starting at $2,500, the Arabic cup went by leaps and bounds and was finally knocked down for the size sum of $4,500.

Actually the Arabic cup was worth very much less, but it so happened that there were two rivals at the auction, who bid against each other—China, Glass and Lamps.

Havana's broad carts are usually two-legged—that is, bread is carried about the streets in large, shallow baskets borne on top of men's heads. It is served in sticks as long as a baseball bat, or in loaves or even, one of which is supposed to serve for the morning meal of an ordinary citizen.

THE WARSAW ANTI-CHICKEN-STEALING LEAGUE

SPECIAL meeting of the Warsaw Anti-Chicken-stealing League now affiliated with that highly chaste and phlegmatic body, the Petterboro Lime Juice Club, was held in their fine new synagogue on Broadway last night. The junior had kicked out all the stray dogs, 12 doz. hounds and 12 doz. assorted collies, and opened the doors to admit the tremendous multitude which had been waiting for several hours. The excitement was intense when molasses-in-January licks the President, stepped up to the official soap-box as nonchalantly, as if he was going to a funeral, all after gravely depositing a chew of tobacco in his mouth. Bro. Boneyard, who was whipping the perspiration off his face with Dago Angier's new silk scarf, he arose and announced the reason why the meeting had been called, viz., To elect a delegate to go to South Africa and make it known to Lord "Roberts" that all the members of this League and their influence were with him (great applause). "This gentleman," he continued will be "the master stroke of foreign diplomacy for which this club is noted. (Profound sensation). "We may now consider the war as practically over as I had received cablegrams from Joseph Chamberlain and Sir Alfred Milner, to the effect that the army, with the exception of Col. Sam Hughes, could not move on Pretoria until some definite assurance of this club's feeling on the matter had reached them. After he sat down the effects of his words could be seen on every countenance, and the silence was only broken when Bro. Safety Valve Tully, who was sitting near the stove with several others and who was heard to mutter something like "raise you ten." The precise meaning of the words will probably never be known, but it supposed he was deliberating on some matter connected with his Sunday School class. Bro. Dourou-Mixed Crowe, who after 16 vain attempts, at least managed to exorcise into the hot-air register, arose and with less than the usual difficulty had got his feet placed on the aisle, began to make a motion that Bro. Lemon Sour Lowry be appointed as their delegate when Bro. Whalebone Anderson commenced to snore in rag-time, and Dourou-Mixed was forced to throw a pocket edition of Paradise Lost at him to awaken him. He woke up long enough to say that he wished they were in heaven, or words to that effect. Bony Choute became the motion which was carried by a vote of 3425 to 1. The one vote being that of Automobile McCracken, of Hall's Glen, who happened to awake from his sixteenth nap just as the vote was being taken, and thinking it was a motion to invest in some new almanacs for the reading room jumped up and emitting three wild war whoops declared himself again it. He was fined $3000, which he paid. Long suffering Wilson began to painfully unwind himself, and when he had attained his full height moved that finance Minister Bro. Boneyard Dixon being down the Budget. Bro. Dixon arose and fished through his pockets for about ten minutes, while Bro. Whalebone Anderson held the audience entranced with a solo in a flat, entitled "Twinkle twinkle little star" (a phantasy by Mother Goose Parcells, the club's poet, which needless to say, was delightfully rendered in his usual charming deep bass snore. Boneyard at length pulled out a red handkerchief and carefully unwinding it brought to light the valuable document which he had prepared by working night after night for the past month. The funds now actually in the Treasury were 17 cents consisting of 2 Yankee cents, 1 Chinese coin worth 7 cents, an Egyptian penny and 6 cents in good Canadian Currency. These had been deposited in the safe together with other valuables such as Dago Snider's cuff links, Sawdust Calder's watch and a ring belonging to Lemon Sour Lowry, a massive affair of great value. The statement of finances was briefly as follows:

RECEIPTS.
Members dues received	$15,000.00
Fines	12,000.00
Found under Boniface Moran's seat	1,200.00
Miscellaneous	.11
	$8,000.11
EXPENDITURES.
Junior's salary	1,700.00
2 Boxes Corn salve for Deacon Mack.	.40
1 game Authors	.25
Luncheon for honorary guests, Sir. Rich Mc Bride &c.	30,499.29
Balance on hand	.17

Besides this there has been added to the library 1,300 new almanacs (assorted) 450 catalogues, 1 volume of pomes by Lemon Sour Lowry, 1 copy of Pilgrim's Progress, with 33 pages out of the book 2 of Baron Munchausen.

When Boneyard sat down the cheering was deafening, and Bro. Dourou-Mixed Crowe, who was mixing some kind of amoniable thing known as a club cocktail, in his excitement emptied the contents of the hot-water kettle into it. We are pleased to say he has recovered sufficiently to be out of bed. Bro. Mischief Gellagher, at the instigation of the President sat down at the Piano and played an accompaniment to Bro. Deacon Mack, who sang 43 verses of the Evening Hymn and had just started on the 119th Psalm when Safety Valve Tully got his pipe full of French Canadian tobacco going. Several did not even stop to take their hats and over coats.

SPECIAL U. S. DESPATCHES.

Important Events Transpiring Within Our Neighbour's Borders.

New York, May 4.—The challenge of Miss Lily Ashley, of Hartford, to Miss Rose Mosenthien, of St. Louis, the present champion carswoman of America, has been accepted. Miss Ashley says she thinks she will win the title this time, as in her last race with Miss Mosenthien she lost only half a length and was the stronger of the two at the finish. The managers of both women will meet in June, and will sign the articles of agreement. Much interest will be manifested if a match can be arranged.

CAR FAMINE AT CHICAGO.

Chicago, May 5.—What practically amounts to a car famine exists among the roads centering in this city. There is not one of them that has cars enough to take care promptly of the business that is being forced upon it. Some of the roads are absolutely refusing to receive freight subject to delay. During the last year or eighteen months all the roads have issued large orders for additional equipment, and each has added thousands of cars to its previous stock, and yet all appear to be in as great need of cars as they were before these orders were issued. Traffic has increased at a much more rapid rate than the augmentations to their rolling stock centering here, and it is estimated that they are 100,000 cars short in the aggregate, or nearly 4,000 each on an average.

TRAPSHOOTERS TOURNAMENT.

Sunday: First event—Ten birds; high guns to win. Second event—Twelve birds; high guns to win. Third event—Twenty-five birds; high guns to win. All shooters start at twenty-five yards. The string of twenty-five birds will be divided into five sections of five birds each for the purpose of distance handicapping; for each section of five killed straight the shooter shall go back one yard. Large purses will be awarded to the winners in the various events.

MY FIRE.
 It starts;
 A gleam of light from the sun,
 A golden, last shaped, dancing thing,
 Bending like a magic brown,
 And grows
 And mops the virgin forest's strength
 With writhing, biting arms,
 And with its red jaws through the gloom
 Casts old shadows round the room,
 And, warring still,
 It lashes round the knotted wood
 With soft but cruel sting,
 Till, gorged with strength, it fades away Beneath a covert of gray,
 And now,
 Like molten sunset from the west,
 Pulses with living light
 Till, dying midst the bones its greed has made,
 Its heart is still and ashes mark the grave.

INK AS A WITNESS.

Results in One Case Which Amazed the Attorneys.

In a case in the supreme court it was alleged that interlineations had been made in the papers after they were filed, and the papers were submitted to expert chemists to decide whether the interlineations had been made after the papers were filed or at the time the paper was drawn. The process followed by the chemists was simple, though tedious. Hypochloride of soda was the only chemical used by the expert, but the result was the same as that arrived at by the other experts. Tests were made on each line of the document. The soda bleached the ink, and, as the writing in some parts was done many years ago, the first drop of soda was placed on a line which was not in controversy. The writing slowly faded, and it was 51 seconds before it was bleached.

A drop on another interlineation faded the writing in 49 seconds, on another in 51 seconds, and the interlineations made when the paper was first written faded in about 50 seconds on an average. Suddenly the ink of one of the interlineations faded in 15 seconds, and the conclusion was reached that it was fresher ink than the others, as the ink had not had time to thoroughly permeate the fiber of the paper.

Several interlineations were found to fade in from 13 to 10 seconds, and these were marked as having been made at a more recent date.

After all interlineations had been so marked, the next step was to ascertain as nearly as possible at what date the interlineations were made, and for this purpose many manuscripts in which similar ink was used on the same kind of paper were taken. The exact date of the writing of each manuscript was known, and soda was dropped on each, beginning with the date of writing of the manuscript in controversy. The time necessary to fade the ink gradually decreased from 52 and 50 seconds as the soda was dropped on the manuscripts of more recent years.

When the fading took place in 20 seconds, manuscripts but a month apart in writing were used, and the fading in 14 and 15 seconds was thus fixed in a certain month. The examining chemists knew nothing of the points in the controversy, and the report was made that certain interlineations were probably made in the specified month. The attorneys in the case were amazed, as the month named was that in which they believed the more recent writing had been done.—Indianapolis Press.

Uses For Bicycles.

There are many uses to which an old cycle can be put. It is said that a theater manager has made rather an excellent chandelier out of his old wheel. He also uses an old tricycle for producing the effect of wind, hail and railway trains. A navy is said to have made a clock almost all out of parts of an old machine. The bell strikes the hours, and a length of solid rubber tire holds the pendulum, which is a bicycle fork. At one small place a man has turned a discarded wheel into a kind of pump, and the tire do duty for the pipe hose. Another has made a treadle sewing machine out of his wheel. A grocer has turned part of a cycle into a coffee grinding machine, and a bell ringer, being rather feeble in the arm, has an old cycle which he has raised and fixed in one position, and so by a pulley arrangement he can when gently pedalling ring the bell vigorously. Many folks use their old wheels for flower stands, and there is a man who is making quite a decent living by turning old bicycles into conveyances on which washerwomen can take home the weekly load.—London Globe.

The Crusades and Embroidery.

The crusades had a marked effect on the demand for embroidery, as besides the decoration of their cloaks and pouches the kings and their followers wanted gorgeously worked baggings for their tents and heraldic blasons for their banners. The last were difficult of execution, and new stitches were invented, and applique work was introduced about this time. The Spaniards are said to have learned the use of spangles and other metal and head ornaments as applied to stuffs from the Saracens. Later precious stones and pearls were used, and in 1414 Charles of Orleans spent about £40 for 600 pearls which were to be used in ornamenting a great coat of the sleeves of which were embroidered the verses of a song beginning with "Madam, I am all joyous." The musical accompaniment of the words was also embroidered.—Spectator.

Worth Seeing.

A Newcastle laborer recently resolved to treat himself to a night at the theater, and, entering the pit by the back of the orchestra, he happened to see the double bass viol set up against a music stand. Having never seen anything of the kind before, he leaned his arm on the orchestra rail and stood transfixed with amazement. The pit was filling rapidly, and an acquaintance, tapping him on the shoulder, said if he didn't take a seat they would soon be all occupied. "Wey, wey, himay," he exclaimed excitedly, "never heed a seat. Aal I want is a look o' the chap that's gone to put that fiddle conder his chin."—London Fun.

Bad Enough.

Patient—It is such a terrible thing to die of consumption!
 Doctor—Perhaps you would like to have me call in other physicians in consultation?
 Patient—No, I don't know that a complication of diseases would be any better to die of.—Detroit Journal.

A 5-year-old boy fell out of a third story window in Paris, and his life was saved by his falling on a man wearing a silk top.

A SUMMARY OF THE BRITISH-BOER CAMPAIGN

ROBERTS SEIZES REMOUNTS.

How He Will Prevent Raking Upon His Rear.

London, May 3.—The Times, in a despatch from Bloemfontein, says:—The new regime concerning passes has been carried out, and all horses are confiscated, except those on military service. This procedure is even more effective than disarmament, since it is impossible to secrete them, and thus we are enabled to prevent the remounting of the farmers who found it convenient to return to their farms. The only way in which to prevent guerrilla warfare in rear of our advance is to satisfy ourselves that neither horses nor forage are left behind, so that marauding parties can only hope to live on the country.

LATEST FROM MAFERING.

Lord Roberts Receives a Notification Dated April 26th.

London, May 3.—Lord Roberts has telegraphed to the War Office from Bloemfontein, under to-day's date, that news has been received from Col. Baden-Powell, the British commander at Mafeking, saying all was well there on April 30

CARRINGTON AT MARANDELLAS.

He will Soon be Within Striking Distance of Mafeking.

London, May 3.—General Sir Frederick Carrington has arrived at Marandellas
50 miles from Salisbury, Rhodesia.
There is a general feeling of satisfaction throughout Rhodesia over Gen. Car-rington's appointment.

IT WAS NOT TOO LIGHT.

What Col. Otter Said About Bennett's Punishment.

Ottawa, May 3.—The part of Col.
Otter's last report, referring to Pte.
Bennett's punishment for chicken stealing was so made public by the Military Department. It is ascertained that Col. Otter stated in it that when he heard of Pte. Bennett's punishment for looting he had said it was not too light.

JUST WHAT THEY WANT.

Young, Sound, Clean, Intelligent Canadians for South Africa.

London, May 3.—Rudyard Kipling in to-day's Daily Mail, referring to the desirability of colonials settling in South Africa, and the lack of induc-ment offered by the Home Government, says:

"Among the various hospitals lie three hundred Canadians of the very stump and breed we require; young, sound, clean, intelligent, well-educated. Three hundred heads of mine and swept families. Shall we let all these beautiful men go back to their own place and never lift a finger to stay them?"

ITS BAPTISM OF FIRE.

Indian Volunteer Corps in Action—Boer Positions Turned by Gor-mons and Canadians.

Bloemfontein, May 3.—Gen. Hamilton, whose force all day yesterday was in touch with the enemy, to-day succeeded, in conjunction with Gen.
Smith-Dorrien's brigade (including the Royal Canadian Regiment) in turning their position with little loss. The Gordons made a spirited assault. A convoy was reported to be in jeopardy between General Rundle and General Chermide, but it was quite safe, although the exaggerated reports caused General Chermide to move up a portion of his division in support.

The Boers have now moved back all along the line.

Lumden's Horse, an Indian volunteer corps, received its baptism of fire yesterday. This corps is recruited exclusively from the same class as that which supplies army officers.

DRIVING THEM BACK.

Roberts Presses Back Boers All Along
His Sixty Mile Line.

London, May 3.—Stretched across the Orange Free State north of Bloemfontein is a line of British troops sixty miles long. Facing them upon every defensible piece of ground is a line of Boers who are endeavoring with might and main to stem the tide of invasion rolling steadily on to Pretoria. The British Commander-in-Chief is following masterly tactics. He knows that the longer his line the longer the Boers must be the line of the enemy drawn up in front of him. As he has three men to every one commanded by Botha the extension presents no risk. In the case of the Boers, however, it is otherwise. The longer the Boer line the more it becomes unduly weakened and unable to resist an attack in any one place, for the number of the burghers is limited. Upon this plan the operations north of Bloemfontein appear to be based. So long is the line which the Boers have to defend that their old tactics pursued on the Tugela, of concentrating their whole force upon a threatened point, are no longer of any value. The distance to be traversed is so great that the attack is delivered and pressed home long before assistance can be summoned. Besides, if men were sent from one part of the line to another there would be two weak spots to attack and carry while these men were on the march.

The Boers are, therefore, at the mercy of Roberts, who, by sheer force of numbers coupled with good manoeuvring, is slowly pressing toward Win-berg, which seems to be the headquarters of General Botha. The communications of the British forces are now more secure than since the occupation of Bloemfontein. The Boers are held at arm's length in every direction. Posts at Wepener, Dewetsdorp, and Thaba N'Chu protect the eastern side of the line to Norval's Pont, while Pte British line from Thaba N'Chu to Kamek is effectively guarded by the train north of Bloemfontein. The occupation of Houtek by Hamilton's division, which includes the Canadians, is only a detail of the great sweeping movement to the north, and until similar details have been received from other portions of the British front the sum total of the progress made can not be gauged, though it is apparent that the enemy is yielding ground in every direction.

HOW THEY GET RECRUITS.

Transvaal Agents Stoop to the Grossest Deception.

Lorenzo Marquez, May 1.—That Boer agents on the continent stoop to fraud to inveigle recruits into the Transvaal is shown by the story told by a simple-minded Texan who arrived on the fir-est. He confessed that his sole motive in going to the Transvaal was a promise to receive £1 per day during the war and the free grant of a farm when the war was over. When he arrived and was informed that there was no prospect of securing either the £1 per day or the farm, he seemed much crestfallen.

The incident explains the eagerness of so many destitute foreigners to join the Boers. According to information from trustworthy sources, the Boers are only held together by the remiss hold President Kruger has over the older burghers, who still believe in his ability to secure intervention.

BOERS ARE FALLING BACK.

Lord Roberts Sends an Ultimatum to the Burghers.

London, May 3.—The Times says—
As a result of the operations, the enemy had moved back all along the line by Tuesday. General Broadwood attempted to cut off the Boers at Scherkraal on Monday, but as usual they withdrew in good time when they found their rear threatened. As a consequence of these operations a portion of Lord Roberts' forces now holds position nearer Brandfort, though the general advance seems to be still delayed by the resistance offered beyond Thaba N'Chu. However, there appears to be no reason to doubt that this will shortly be overcome, though possibly not without a considerable engagement. When Gen Botha's force has been disposed of, the advance to the north may be expected to begin in earnest. As a preparatory to a movement, which necessarily must extend over a long line of communications, the Commander-in-Chief has taken fresh steps for the protection of his rear. Lord Roberts has warned the burghers that in future treachery will be severely punished, and at the same time has taken measures to make treachery less easy and therefore less tempting. The most effective of these probably will be the confiscation of all the horses distributed in the various districts. As the burghers have used these animals in violation of their oath, to rejoin the Boer ranks, to raid and intimidate

THE TROUT LAKE (B.C.) TOPIC

OF March 31, commenting editorially on the high grade of the Lardeau ores, says:

"For instance take the 'Nettie L.' A hundred feet beneath the surface ore was exposed giving $140.00 to the ton. The 'Silver Cup' did not appear high-grade at surface, but at 93 feet rich ore was struck, and this property is now paying $145.00 to the ton. The Silver Belt, on Brown's Ck., was poor on the surface, but at the point where crosscut intersected the vein ore runs into the thousands. The ROB ROY, at the head of the North Fork, located near the great Lime Dyke, was considered a low-grade proposition from surface indications, but in the tunnel which exposed the vein at a depth, gray copper is showing up. Regarding this property and the section of which it is representative, it has been maintained that many of the Leads in and near the Lime Dyke were low-grade. But as a matter of fact none of them have been tapped at a depth with the exception of the ROB ROY, and here it has been demonstrated that the grade of the ore is very greatly improved, so it is reasonable to suppose that a like improvement in quality will occur when depth is gained on other claims on the same Lead."

LATEST MARKET REPORTS

PETERBOROUGH.

Friday, May 4.

The market for the past week has been the worst one for the year. The farmers are all busy at their spring work. There was no loads of grain offered and very few loads of hay were in and as a result there was quite a demand for good hay with prices very much firmer. The Market Clerk desires to inform anyone having a large stock of potatoes that Mr. Wm. Fair will be on the market for the purpose of buying several carloads at about 35 cents per bushel. It is a good chance as the Western market shows lower prices. It is very remarkable with the demand that there is for oats that none are being offered. The prices for the week are as follows:

Wheat—Only a few loads were offered on Saturday, prices remained the same, 63 cents.

Peas—Several loads were marketed on Saturday with the demand firm and prices likewise, 63, and 64c. Canadian Beauties, 75, to 78c.

Barley—None offered and there are few for it.

Oats—There is a very large demand for oats. The buyers want them badly and so do local consumers. Prices have risen this week. Buyers quotations being given at 20c. and 30c. and 31c. has been paid for local use.

Hay—The price of hay has gone up this week owing to few loads coming in. Prices ranging from $8.00 to $8.50.

Straw—There were a number of inquiries this week for straw and not a single load was offered.

Butter and Eggs—The butter market has been well supplied during the week and as a result prices have dropped a few cents. Quotation being 15c. to 16c. Eggs were plentiful, prices remaining at 9 to 11c.

Hides—There are a

CANADIAN MOUNTED INFANTRY FORCED PASSAGE OVER VET RIVER

Gen. Hutton, With Whom is the Second Canadian Contingent, Forced a Passage Over, the Vet River and Turned Boers Flank.

Lord Roberts Reports Important Movements Under His Command. Several Brisk Engagements in Which Boers Are Driven Back. Artillery Duel Between Pole-Carew's Command and the Enemy. Onward to Pretoria.

London, May 6, 3 p.m.—The War Office has published the following despatch from Lord Roberts dated Vet River, Saturday, May 5th, 7.15 p.m.:—"I marched here to-day with Pole-Carew's Division. Headquarters and Wavell's brigade of the Seventh Division are two miles in the rear. Maxwell's brigade of the same Division is the same distance to our right.

The enemy are in considerable strength on the opposite bank of the river. Our guns engaged theirs for some three hours without our being able to force a passage of the river, but shortly before dusk the Mounted Infantry under General Hutton turned the enemy's right, and in a very short manner pushed across the river, under heavy shell and musket fire.

We are now bivouacking for the night within three miles of the Vet River. Our casualties I hope are not numerous.

Hamilton was in advance yesterday and succeeded in preventing a junction of two Boer forces by a well executed movement by some of the Household Cavalry, the Twelfth Lancers and Kitchener's Horse, who charged a body of the enemy and inflicted serious loss. The enemy fled, leaving their dead on the field and their wounded to be attended by our doctors.

Macdonald's Highland Brigade dislodged the enemy on the right flank, under cover of the naval gun, in which operation the Black Watch distinguished themselves and were very skillfully led. Hamilton was advancing this morning to a difficult direction over the Kleinooit River.

Hunter reports that Barton's brigade was heavily engaged this morning two miles north of Houtek. The enemy's position was quite four miles long and strongly held. He states that our men marched magnificently, and carried ridge after ridge in grand style. Casualties in this force, in Hamilton's and Hunter's will be reported as soon as possible."

Vet River, Sunday, May 6.

General Pole-Carew started at daybreak yesterday on a nineteen mile march. He first came in contact with Boers holding the river at 1 p.m. The British soon had two batteries in action, and later they added two naval 9 pounders, two 4.7 and 5 inch siege guns. The Boers fired with great accuracy, and the duel continued unabated with a terrible din until sunset, and even later there was desultory firing.

It is remarkable that nobody on the British side was injured. General Hutton started early to find the drift on the west. When this was discovered, it proved to be strongly held and protected by two guns. The British speedily engaged the Boers, who enfiladed the dismounted firing line with a Maxim, and forced the Boers to leave the river bed. The encounter was terribly hot. Late the whole British force crossed the river threatening the Boer right.

Timba N'Chu, Saturday, May 5. General Rundle, who has been pursuing the Boers with the 17th Brigade, two Batteries and Mounted Infantry, succeeded in reaching them with his artillery, and forced them to leave their positions. The Yeomanry are making a long detour in pursuit. The result is not yet known here.

ON TO PRETORIA.

Lord Roberts Covering the Ground with Remarkable Rapidity.

London, May 5.—The crossing of the Vet. The advance on the Vet. These movements contain the gist of the movements in the South African war. The first named operation was achieved by a piece of minor strategy. While one British force made a feint of trying to cross the river at Windsor, twenty miles to the south, and carried it to a successful issue, the feint throwing the Boers off the scent and the distance revealing their concentration in time to offer effective resistance. With the news of this move comes the statement that General Hutton is in charge of the operations in that part of the field, which seems to indicate the suppression of Gen. Buller so far as the chief command is concerned. Whether Hunter is marching to the relief of Mafeking or is able to turn the Boer flank by an invasion of the Transvaal via Bloemfontein, thus reaching the rear of the Boers in the Free State is a moot point. Be it as it may, his force is not upon the main road leading from Cape Colony right into the heart of Kruger's country and is in addition only a short distance from the main road to Mafeking. It is quite possible that the Boers, fearing that he may take the turning to the right, may be drawn from Mafeking in order to defend their frontier, and that Roberts counts upon relieving Col Baden-Powell in this way. In any event Hunter is much nearer the beleaguered town than Carrington, who on latest reports was at Marandella in Rhodesia with a road journey of 37 miles and a railway journey of almost equal length before him. It will be interesting to watch the development of this particular campaign. North of Bloemfontein the advance steadily goes on. Lord Roberts has transferred his headquarters to Brandfort, forty miles north of Bloemfontein, from which place he will direct operations against the next Boer line of defence. The flanking column under Hamilton, to the right, is also moving forward and has reached Nealewot, and is pressing the Boers back towards Winburg. Another column, consisting of mounted infantry, including the second Canadian contingent, is advancing on the Vet, twenty miles north of Brandfort, the passage of which river will outflank the Boers at Winburg and make their retreat imperative. At the Vet is a certain a severe struggle will be made by the Boers, and heavy fighting will in all likelihood be done from that quarter within a few hours.

HAMILTON STILL ADVANCES.
London, May 5.—Lord Roberts reports to the War Office, under date of Brandfort, May 4, as follows:—"Hamilton advanced to-day to Nealewot. He was engaged with the enemy throughout the march. He speaks in terms of praise of the behaviour of the troops, especially Broadwood's brigade of cavalry and mounted infantry."

NO TIME BEING LOST.
Roberts Has Apparently Cut Off the Wepener Commander.

London, May 5.—Lord Roberts is evidently losing no time in following up the advantages gained by the occupation of Brandfort, and his whole force is apparently moving on Winburg. The place mentioned in Lord Roberts' despatch to the War Office as "Nealewot," cannot be found on the map, and it is likely that it is a cable error for "Nealewot." In which case the Gen. Hamilton seems to be midway between Houtek and Winburg, and has thus cut between Winburg and General Buller's command at Wepener, which is occupying Thosa Patchou. Between Thosa N'Chu, Ladybrand and Winburg the country is most suited for the Boer tactics, so that the British are liable to be considerably harassed before they capture the stronghold. Experts differ as to whether Lord Roberts is bound for Kroonstad or in the direction of Bethlehem. The latter place is the terminus of the line joining with the Natal Rail, and the capture of that place would probably compel the Boers to leave the Drakensberg range, and thus open the way for Gen. Buller's advance. The British have to repair the bridge over the Vet before the railroad between Brandfort and Winburg is available.

ADVANCING TO THE VET.
Lord Roberts Still Presses Northward to Pretoria.

London, May 4, 11.30 p.m.—The War Office this evening posted the following from Lord Roberts, dated Brandfort, Friday, May 4:—"The mounted infantry have gone on to the Vet River. The rest of the force will march there to-morrow. The railway has been repaired to Brandfort. "Hunter reports very satisfactory news, that the passage of the Vaal has been carried at Windsor without opposition."

CANADIANS AT BRANDFORT.
Second Contingent Took Part in the Capture of the Town.

London, May 5.—The Times in a despatch from Brandfort, dated May 3, says:—"General Pole-Carew's division occupied Brandfort this afternoon, after slight opposition from the Irish-American legion, which watched the town as Gen. Hutton's mounted infantry brigade (which includes the Canadian mounted contingents) advanced. Thus the first move in the general advance begun. General Tucker's division, which moved on General Pole-Carew's right, was stalled for a considerable period by the enemy, who, however, retreated all along the line."

DASTARDLY BOER OUTRAGE.
The Enemy Fired Upon a Man They Had Disarmed.

London, May 5.—The Times has a special from Faramontain, dated May 3, as follows:—"As we were leaving Dourkmoort on Wednesday a picket of ten men of the Cape Rifles was surrounded by the Boers. Four men escaped. Trooper Smyth was wounded, but fought till the enemy disarmed him and told him to go

After he had gone a short distance a dastardly brute fired, wounding him in the head, shoulder and leg. When he pretended to be dead the Boers approached, examined him, kicking him brutally meaning, and left him for dead. During the night Smyth crept away, and in the morning was found near Caledon by the Queenstown volunteers. It is assumed that the remainder of the party were similarly treated, as they are still missing. This outrage has created intense feeling among the men of the colonial division. To-day a strong force from Gen. Chermide's division arrived to garrison Wepener under Col. Castletown.

BULLER DEFENDED IN BRITISH PARLIAMENT.

Mr. Wyndham Says He Was Merely Unlucky and Deserves Well of His Country

London, May 5.—In the House of Commons yesterday took place the expected debate on the Spion Kop despatches. Mr. Runciman opened the debate by criticising the publication of the despatches, stating that an attempt had been made to throw the responsibility on Lord Roberts, and that after the issue of the correspondence the public naturally looked for the recall of those implicated.

Mr. Wyndham, in reply, quoted the Duke of Wellington as precedent for the publication of the despatches. In so doing, he said, he resented the grave imputation that the Secretary of State for War was guilty of anything dishonourable in requesting General Buller to re-write his despatch. He added that the Marquis of Lansdowne (the War Secretary) was above the suspicion of being guilty of such conduct.

The only point at issue was why the criticism of General Buller had been published, if the Government intended to leave him in command. The War Office, he asserted, had acted entirely in accordance with the Queen's regulations. It was said that the publication would shake the confidence of the troops in Natal in their commander, but Mr. Wyndham said, that was not the view of the Government, nor the view of General Buller, who was in the best position to decide.

Mr. Wyndham thought General

Buller had merely been unlucky, and that General Warren's services should not be overlooked, adding that while in publishing the despatches the Government had acted on its own responsibility, it had been confirmed in so doing by the opinion of Lord Roberts.

The case for the Government was that the right course was to publish what it had published and no more. He was persuaded that both General Buller and Lord Roberts had sent the despatches home for publication. Did the House suppose harm was done to a commander by a despatch showing his scheme was a good one and ought to have succeeded, or by deciding five points in his favor while one point was criticised? Was it fair to leave 40,000 or 50,000 men in doubt regarding what obscure causes had made all their heroism unavailing? Because General Warren had failed in a large independent command did not prove that he was unfitted for other work.

With regard to General Buller, "to attempt to apologise for him would be a great insult to so great a man, who had served well of his country, and his troops would be glad to know his strategy was praised by Lord Roberts."

Mr. Balfour also made a ringing speech, stating that precedent had been followed in the publication of the despatches.

The Government was sustained on a vote of 215 to 116.

SIZING UP OF THE SITUATION.

Three Months Gone and the House Only Fairly Launched on Nation's Business

Ottawa, May 4.—When the session will end—that is the moot question about the House. Already the ninety days have expired, and the members are entitled to the full indemnity. There is a notable diminution in the attendance, but all that will be changed if an extra indemnity is voted. It is hardly fair to ask any man to neglect his own business beyond the specified time without additional compensation.

A great part of the session was taken up with invidious comparisons of loyalty, initiated by the Opposition; there were two long adjournments, one for Easter and one on account of the great fire. There was a lengthy discussion on Dr. Russell's preferential tariff resolution, and a five weeks' debate on the budget. This disposes of the three months and a week that Parliament has already been sitting. It explains how, at the end of this time, the House is only fairly launched on the business of the nation.

Looking over the order paper, it is to be observed that there are twenty-four Government bills, forty private bills and orders and five private bills to be discussed. At the rate of six bills a day this means two weeks. Then there are the estimates, with a good six weeks' work in them, and the incidental adjournments over the Queen's Birthday and Dominion Day. Also, there will be interpellations by the Opposition, and perhaps two or three days' debate on the Brockville and West Huron investigations.

Altogether, it looks like ten weeks, and that without much obstruction on the part of the Opposition. But ten weeks in expectation often amounts down to half that in practice, for the Dominion House, like many other legislative assemblies, has a habit of bolting a lot of public business at the finish. This would bring the end of the session about the middle of June, which will serve the purpose of the Opposition that the general elections shall not be brought on in that month.

A BIG FENIAN PLOT ALLEGED.

The Welland Canal Dynamiters Did Not Purchase Their Explosives in Buffalo

Toronto, May 5.—The Globe this morning states that the evidence which will be given at the trial of the dynamiters at Welland on Monday will tend to show that the explosions were the result of a Fenian plot to destroy Canada's waterway. The three men concerned in the outrage arrived at Buffalo from a city on the Atlantic seaboard. They appear to have been unacquainted with Buffalo and Inspector John Murray's investigations would seem to prove that they did not get the dynamite, of which they must have had 100 pounds apiece, from Buffalo. Inspector Murray was in Buffalo on Thursday making enquiries with a view to finding out whether any of the Buffalo dealers in explosives had sold dynamite to men resembling the three now held in Welland gaol. There are only four firms in Buffalo that deal in explosives—the Import Powder Co., the Hazard Co., Weid & Co., and the Olin & Co. Inspector Murray's enquiries resulted in the discovery that no delivery had been made from the magazines, which are outside the city limits, to any such persons. Nor was anything discovered leading to the belief that any dynamite had been stolen from contractors or private individuals.

COMPLIMENTS FOR FRENCH.

Victor of Cotesburg Explains the Disaster to the Suffolks.

London, May 4.—The Gazette this evening contains General French's report of the disaster to the Suffolk Regiment in the Cotesburg district, Jan. 5, which he attributes entirely to the fact that a majority of the four companies of the regiment engaged were seized with panic and retired. He pays high tribute to the officers of the regiment and the men who remained with them.

LOSSES OF CANADIANS.

Ottawa, May 4.—So far there have occurred in the Canadian contingents 39 deaths from wounds and illness and 113 wounded, missing and invalided. This does not include nearly 30 killed outright in battle.

WHY BOERS WANT POWELL.

He Has Special Knowledge Regarding Pretoria's Defences.

London, May 5.—An officer of the Mafeking garrison, in a letter published by The Glasgow (Scotland) Weekly Mail, gives a very good reason for the desire of the enemy to keep Col. Baden-Powell bottled up or to capture or kill him. He says that a few months before the war the colonel made a long visit, incognito, to Pretoria, and obtained most minute and valuable knowledge regarding the forts, mines and other defences of the Boers capital. The Boers afterwards heard of the colonel's exploit, hence their anxiety. The officer adds that Mafeking can hold out, and that Col. Baden-Powell's information will be very useful to Lord Roberts.

THE TIMES NOT SATISFIED.

Explanation of the Government as to Spion Kop Not Enough.

London, May 5.—The Times says:—"The protests regarding the Spion Kop despatches have been met in a manner which we hardly think will satisfy the public. It is admittedly difficult to explain the behaviour of the Government in suppressing for weeks the despatches of Lord Roberts on the Spion Kop disasters, and publishing them after that delay in the circumstances detailed in the correspondence laid before Parliament. What is evidently unreasonable is to ride off on the high horse, as the Ministerial apologists have done, by suggesting that it is insulting to cast doubt on the honor of the Secretary of War. Nobody challenges his honor, but surely it is possible to call in question the proceedings of which he is Ministerially responsible, without making the smallest imputation on his individual character."

BOER PRISONERS TAKEN.

Hart's Brigade Occupies Smithfield, Capturing Twenty-Five Boers.

Allwal North, Cape Colony, May 4.—Smithfield was captured yesterday by General Hart's brigade. Out of the 150 Boers in the town were captured, and the rest decamped.

Ladybrand was recently full of Boer wounded, who have now been removed to Ficksburg.

BRABANT FINDS THE BOERS.

Discovery of the Enemy's Force which Operated at Wepener.

Brabant's Camp, May 1 (by runner to Mafeking).—Brabant's division now occupies a strong position on a range of hills on the Ladybrand road, about twenty miles from Wepener. The troops are confronted by a large force of Boers, who recently occupied Wepener, and who have been located in the mountains known in the Free State as Zwartkopsberg.

LONG RANGE BOMBARDMENT.

Boers Driven from Their Shelter by Firing at Warrenton.

Warrenton, Cape Colony, May 4. — A British six-inch wire gun opened unexpectedly on the Boer laager yesterday at a distance of seven and a half miles, throwing hundred-pound shells with wonderful accuracy and causing a hasty retreat of the burghers. The bombardment continued to-day at all points by howitzers and field guns, supported by two companies of the Munster Regiment, the Boers being driven from shelter and their guns being put out of action.

BOERS MAY AID BRYAN.

Paris Paper Comments on Mission of Peace Envoys to United States.

Paris, May 5.—The Temps editorially advises the Boer peace commission, which sailed for New York on Thursday, to cultivate American sympathy for the Dutch republics. It says the policy of President McKinley, as pursued by Secretary of State Hay, sacrifices everything for a mere cordial understanding with England, and that outside of the aristocratic circles, who are accustomed to take orders concerning their opinions from England, as they do the styles in cravats, there is in the United States a strong sympathy for the Boers, which may be practically used for the election of Bryan.

MAJOR DRUMMOND IN ENGLAND.

Will be Confined to Bed Several Weeks Before Being Able to Leave for Canada.

Ottawa, May 5.—Major Drummond, who was invalided home from South Africa, reached London on Sunday last but will be confined to bed for several weeks before he will be able to leave for Canada. Major Drummond will, it is expected, receive his appointment to the command of the Canadian militia before he leaves England.

UNCLE SAM'S BEST FRIEND.

Admiral Dewey's Significant Remark, and How it was Received.

St. Louis, Mo., May 5.—At the luncheon at the University Club yesterday afternoon Admiral Dewey made the following significant remark:—"We can whip any nation in the world, except England, and England is our best friend."

For a moment there was an impressive silence, which was followed by a loud cheer, and the president of the club, Mr. Lomberger, rising to his feet proposed a toast to America's best friend, England.

As one man the guests arose and drained their glasses.

DENIED IN LONDON.

English View of the Report That Major Drummond Would Succeed Major-General Hutton.

London, May 5.—The report that has been in circulation that Major Drummond, late military secretary to the Earl of Minto, and who has just returned from South Africa, was to be appointed Commander-in-Chief of the Canadian militia in succession to Major-General Hutton, is denied here.

SENTENCED TO DEATH.

Jersey City, N. J., May 4.—The court of Oyer and Terminer has sentenced Edward Clifford the murderer of Supt. William G. Watson of the West Shore Railroad, to be hanged here to-day. This is the fifth time Clifford has been sentenced. His friends have made persistent fight to save him from the gallows. Clifford shot Supt. Watson in his office at Weehawken on March 5, 1894. The superintendent had discharged Clifford, who was employed by the Company as a special detective. It is not thought there will be further delay.

A Pleasant Re-union.

An interesting meeting of four aged sisters took place a few days ago at the residence of their brother, Mr. Alexander Dawson, Ashburnham. They were Mrs. John Hornsby, of Plainville; Mrs. Jas. Mammie of Port Hope; Mrs. Wm. Russell, of Winnipeg; and Mrs. James Russell, town. The average age of these four well-preserved old ladies is 75 years. They all have the appearance of enjoying remarkably good health, and are possessed of happy, active and cheerful dispositions. This is their first re-union since the death of their mother about 25 years ago. They were all born in Huntville, Aberdeen, Scotland. They came to Canada in 1838 and first settled in Halifax. Mr. H. M. Roy had the interesting group.

Pa Out a Fire.

As the Steamer Eclipse was coming up the river on Saturday, with a load of passengers, and when a short distance below the Locks, a large pile of wood, belonging to Capt. Harris, of Gore's Landing, which was piled on the shore, was seen to be on fire. Capt. Charlie Calcutt at once landed and put his steam pump at work, and after an hour's effort, the fire was extinguished. The fire originated from a spark from the Beaver, which had passed up the river an hour ahead of the Eclipse.

Steamer Burned.

Between 12 and 1 o'clock Saturday morning fire was discovered on board the steamer Mary Louise, which was in course of construction on the Saginaw river, Lindsay, and almost ready for launching. In spite of the efforts of the firemen the vessel was totally destroyed. The owner, Joseph Harris, places the loss at $4,000, with only $1,000 insurance. The fire, it is believed, was of incendiary origin.

Recovered the Clothes.

Mr. W. J. Thompson, of Havelock, has had restored to him all the suits which were stolen. The clothes were found in a shed in Ashburnham by John McLean, an employee of Scott & Hogg. There was not sufficient evidence against the two tramps who were suspected of the affair, they having been arrested near the Protestant Home, while the clothes were found in Ashburnham, and the tramps were sent up for vagrancy.

Morning Times

PETERBOROUGH, MAY 4, 1900

AFTER 1800 YEARS.

Of thrilling and world-wide interest are the discoveries made by anti-quarian researchers in ruins of the old palace of the kings of Thebes. The discoveries are narrated to the Archaeological Congress at present meeting at Rome, by Professor Bohrmann, of Venice, relate to letters that passed ages ago between King Agrippa and Christ. The letters, which were first referred to by Eusebius in the fourth century, were written in Syro-Chaldean characters, and originally discovered under a stone, eighty-four miles from the city of Ioculum in the year 97 and then lost. Now they have been discovered carved in stone over the gateway of the old palace of the Kings of Thebes, which has recently been uncovered.

"I have heard of Thee and the cures wrought by Thee without herb or medicine, for it is reported that Thou restorest sight to the blind and maketh the lame to walk, cleansest the leper, raisest the dead, chasest out devils and unclean spirits and healeth those that are tormented of diseases of a long continuance. "Hearing all this of Thee I was fully persuaded that Thou art the very God come down from heaven to do such miracles, or that Thou art the Son of God and performest them. Wherefore I have sent Thee few lines entreating Thee to come hither and cure my disease, besides hearing that the Jews murmur against thee and continue to do Thee mischief, I invite Thee to my city, which is but a little one, but is beautiful and sufficient to entertain us both."

Christ's reply to the above reads:—"Blessed art thou for believing me whom thou hast not seen, for it is written of me that they that have seen me shall not believe, and they that have not seen me shall believe and be saved. But concerning the matter thou hast written about, this is to acquaint thee that all things which I was sent hither must be fulfilled and then I shall be taken up and returned to Him that sent me. But after my ascension I will send one of my disciples that shall cure thee of thy distemper, and give life to all them that are with thee."

It is interesting to note that fragments purporting to be of the original of these letters were declared spurious by Pope Leo XIII. Prof. Bohrmann says this discovery proves that such letters were written, and supplies the full text.

It is marvellous to think that for 1800 years these carved characters have slumbered beneath the dust of centuries to be at last uncovered by investigators in the dying hours of the present century. Literally carved in stone these messages have survived the ages, defied the ravages of time and are now brought to light in as perfect a condition as when they were first traced.

Antiquarians have made many marvelous and interesting discoveries in the far East, but this is probably the most interesting find they have yet made.

NOTES AND COMMENTS.

It seems to me that the net boys using has too large a mesh.

These fatal accidents of the French Exposition are not giving visitors a proper show there.

Not one of the least of the sorrow caused by the Hull fire is that it has started the Ottawa Citizen quoting scripture.

Complaints about the women bothering the soldiers in South Africa is another argument in favor of treating the sex only one way when it's a question of arms.

It is rumored that Rev. Father O'Leary is to get the Victoria Cross for his bravery at Paardeberg. It is to be hoped the report is true. All honor to the gallant old chap, who kept right up with the procession in spite of his 63 years.

Helen Gould, we understand is much worried by applicants for charity. In one week she has had 1,933 requests for grants amounting to the small sum of $1,348,562. The editor of the G. P. J. would gladly relieve Helen of her worries for the same price or even a trifle less.

The Japanese people do not regard the British victory as the affair of a foreign country. They have heartfelt and true sympathy with Great Britain, congratulatory telegram sent by the Emperor on the British victory in South Africa was despatched in view of the intercourse between the Courts of the two countries, but it may be taken as representing the friendly feeling of the Japanese nation at large towards Great Britain.

A PICKPOCKET'S RUSE.

The Trick by Which He Once Got a Woman's Purse.

Jack Piggott, the noted pickpocket, used to tell a funny story about the difficulty he had in picking the pocket of a fashionably dressed woman who was looking in at the window of Shrove's jewelry store. It illustrates the hardships that the light fingered gentry are forced to endure in the pursuit of their profession and when first related was considered amusing not only by Piggott, but by the many to whom he confided his experience.

It was a cold winter evening, and the lady on whose purse Piggott had designs stood looking at the holiday snags so temptingly displayed. Piggott said that he tried all the arts known to his craft for the extraction of the wallet, but all in vain, until, as a last resort, he fished a toothpick from his pocket and, reaching around, tickled the lady's ear. Instinctively she raised her hand to brush away the invading insect or whatever it might be and in so doing let go of her pocketbook that she was carrying in the pocket of her coat.

It was only an instant, but it was long enough for the expert pickpocket to get in his work, and when she put her hand back her money was gone, and in the crowd around her she could not identify the pale faced, fashionably dressed young man at her side as the person who had robbed her, and if she had accused him there would have been no proof against him, as the swag was at once passed to a pal who stood ready to receive it and run. Piggott was not even arrested for that crime, and the lady's ludicrous exterior furnished material for mirth long after.—San Francisco Bulletin.

IRELAND'S CATHOLIC PLAN

WRITES TO THE DUKE OF NORFOLK URGING ANGLO-SAXON UNION.

American Prelate Would Have English-Speaking Catholics of the World Join in a Great Propaganda—He Bids the Roman Church in England to Lead in the Movement.

New York, May 5.—Archbishop Ireland of St. Paul has written a letter to the Duke of Norfolk, President of the Catholic Union of Great Britain, in which he urges an Anglo-Saxon Catholic propaganda. A cable despatch, from Rome last week, says that the letter is distributed at the Vatican, where it is regarded as an effort to revive the liberal movement known as Americanism.

A copy of Archbishop Ireland's letter has just been received here. It deals at length with the opportunity before the Catholic Church in English-speaking countries, and it lays especial emphasis on the fact that the English language is circling the globe. All this, the Archbishop points out, cannot be too strongly impressed upon the authorities of the Church. The letter of Archbishop Ireland is, in part, as follows: "It is a broad, plain fact in the geography of the world—a fact daily becoming broader and plainer—that the English language is circling the globe, that English-speaking countries are constantly growing with speed that nothing seems able to arrest in territory and influence. I certainly shall not belittle the spheres of influence of language other than the English, or deny in the least the importance to the church of countries speaking those languages; let due place be given to all agencies in the great work of religion. But, this said, the truth is before us, that in the present, and more yet in the future, the minds of peoples spread over immense regions of the globe are to be reached only through the English language, and that very much of the missionary work of the church is to be done under the aegis of English-speaking countries.

"This fact cannot, in the interest of religion, be too strongly impressed upon English-speaking Catholics, and upon the representatives and leaders of the Universal church, herself. Whatever the institutions and the influences that are strong and potent where the English language holds sway, these will be strong and potent in shaping the destinies of the world.

"Hence the mission imposed by Providence upon English-speaking Catholics, and by reason of their special position, especially upon Catholics in England herself. That mission is to attain anew the English language to the harmony of Catholic truth, which was its charm before the days of the schism of the sixteenth century—the most awful disaster that ever befell Christendom; to make the English language the bearer of Catholic verities to the hundreds of millions who will speak and read it; to build up for the Catholic Church public and social influence in English-speaking lands, so that their power, instead of being against her, be for her; to establish her in those lands that she is seen to be, as in fact she is, thoroughly in unison with the political institutions and the social aspirations that dominate these lands, so that the argument for such institutions be an argument, too, for the Church herself—in fine, to place the Church as to enable her to win over to herself the great English-speaking world and turn to her own profit and the profit of Christian civilization the wondrous potencies of that world.

"How Catholics are to do all this, circumstances as Providence unfolds them, will give indication. The chief thing is that Catholics have the intelligence to perceive the opportunities given to them, the zeal to avail themselves of such opportunities, the personal courage and the grace divine to follow them out to a successful issue. Catholics prepared through such dispositions for their mission will be found attracting attention to the church by the high moral integrity of their lives, gaining for her social power through their active participation in the public affairs of the nation, spreading their teachings by their intellectual labors, bringing victory to the manifestations of her energies by their earnest and effective co-operations with her undertakings of charity and of zeal.

"Catholics in English-speaking countries may be tempted to faint heartedness by the recollection of their paucity of numbers and their weakness of resources when they compare themselves to the legions of non-Catholics around them. But they should yield to no fear; for truth and divine power are with them, and in such association they are neither few nor weak. As God intends to 'make the moral world His own,' we must assume that He intends to sway to His purposes the great English-speaking multitudes who are so notably a part of the world, and if Catholics do their part He will do His through and with them, and all will be well for His Church among those multitudes. To the Catholics of England—to the Catholic Union of Great Britain, I, then, say, Fortitude, diligence, et cetera. The Catholics of the United States will watch you from afar and spurred on by your noble example, they will work as it may be possible to them along the lines you trace for them, for the same holy purpose to which you are devoted. May the Master give to all of us the grace not to falter in His service!"

BITS OF SCIENCE.

Dr. Mach of Berlin has made a new alloy of magnesium and aluminum, producing a compound like brass, white as silver and can be turned and bored.
 The weight of all the air on the globe would be eleven and two-thirds trillion pounds if no deductions had to be made for space filled by mountains and land above sea level.
 Blasting with liquid air at Vienna had led to the conclusion that to be effective the liquid should be used while it is in use after preparation. As tried after 72 hours, when half of it had been evaporated, it had no destructive effect.

Slow Suicide.
 A source of great evil among all workers is the widespread habit of eating a hearty meal hurriedly when the body is in a state of exhaustion. Too often, alas, the evil is enhanced by the fact that the food is insubstantial, badly cooked and clogging in itself. This is one species of slow suicide, causing a long train of evils which are usually attributed to overwork. Now, it were better to go without food than to take it under these conditions. Your dog knows better than to eat when he is tired, and if you will watch him you will notice that he is always reluctant to be excited into play after eating. Left to himself he will take a nap, or at least drop care for awhile and rest. Humanity might raise its standard of health by following the example set by the instincts of the brute creatures.—Health Culture.

THE TROUT LAKE (B.C.) TOPIC

Of March 31, commenting editorially on the high grade of the Lardeau ores, says:

"For instance take the 'Nettie L.' A hundred feet beneath the surface ore was exposed giving $140.00 to the ton. The 'Silver Cup' did not appear high-grade at surface, but at 93 feet rich ore was struck, and this property is now paying $145.00 to the ton. The Silver Belt, on Brown's Ck., was poor on the surface, but at the point where crosscut intersected the vein ore runs into the thousands. The ROB ROY, at the head of the North Fork, located near the great Lime Dyke, was considered a low-grade proposition from surface indications, but in the tunnel which exposed the vein at a depth, gray copper is showing up. Regarding this property and the section of which it is representative, it has been maintained that many of the Leads in and near the Lime Dyke were low-grade. But as a matter of fact none of them have been tapped at a depth with the exception of the ROB ROY, and here it has been demonstrated that the grade of the ore is very greatly improved, so it is reasonable to suppose that a like improvement in quality will occur when depth is gained on other claims on the same Lead."

THE BEEHIVE.

Contract the space in the hive to the size of the colony.

A good and fertile queen keeps the hive full of bees during the season. Do not offer to feed liquid food to bees in winter; it is almost sure death to a colony.

Bees abhor being molested at night, and no work can then be done with them with any satisfaction.

In every case where comb is to be built furnish the bees with foundation, using full sheets in the frames.

Clipping the wings of the queen prevents losing first swarms by absconding, but does not always prevent losing the queen.

Bees seem to seek naturally a span between two combs, and the queen seldom goes to the outside comb of a hive unless she is compelled to for want of room; so that a nucleus of two or three combs is better than one.
 Propolis is the gum or varnish that bees collect for varnishing over the inside of their hives, filling cracks and crevices, cementing loose pieces of the hive together and for making things fast and close generally. It collects in time in old hives and combs.

He will also present "Dusty Rhodes," and his original imitation of a rough rider. The tickets have been placed at 25c, and 50c each. It is expected that every seat in the Opera House will be sold long before the 22nd, so that the first to secure tickets will have the best seats.

Attempted Highway Robbery.

A most daring attempt at highway robbery was committed between Friday night about nine o'clock. Mr. W. E. Payton, who has been employed for some time as a butcher with Mr. R. C. Braund, was going home on Reid street and when between Delhouse and Sherbrooks Sts., he was held up by two young men. They demanded that he hand over any thing that he had of any value about him. Mr. Payton had a grip in his hand but protested that he had nothing about him of value. The controversy was interrupted by the appearance of several persons coming up street and the highwaymen took flight. Mr. Payton left for the Northwest Saturday and it is not unlikely that this was known to the young men who perhaps thought Mr. Payton had a sum of money about him.

CHURCH NOTES.

Rev. E. J. Bridgman, of Lakefield, conducted the service in the Park street Baptist church yesterday.

Rev. Mr. Armitage, at All Saints' last night preached the last of the series of sermons on "The Lord's Prayer."

The subject of Rev. Mr. Potter's address in St. Andrew's yesterday evening was "Simon the African" or "Bearing the Cross."

Rev. Mr. Bastow, in the Murray St. Baptist church, preached yesterday morning on "The Means of Promoting Revival." The Lord's Supper was administered after the sermon. In the evening he gave his monthly sermon to young people.

Rev. Dr. Lyle, of Hamilton, occupied the pulpit at St. Paul's church yesterday, both evening and morning, preaching eloquent and impressive sermons. The music was specially prepared for the occasion. In the morning Gounod's "Sanctus," in which the solos were taken by Miss Ritchie, of Toronto, was splendidly rendered. In the evening, Granier's "Hosanna," in which the solo was taken by Mr. Jas. Dawson, and the solo, "The Light of the World," by Miss Ritchie, were given, and immediately at the close of the service the choir sang by special request, Gray's, "A Dream of Paradise."

At the Church of Christ Scientist "Mortals and Immortals" was the subject of the sermon yesterday. The discourse consisted of selection from the Bible and Science and Health, read alternately by a male and a female reader. Mortals are material faculties, in the words of Paul they are "without hope, and without God in the world." They are errors, made up of sin, sickness, and death, which must disappear to give place to the facts which belong to immortal man. Immortals, or God's children in Divine Science are one family, but mortals, or the children of men in sense, are one usual family, and are false brethren. Human theories are helpless to make man harmonious or immortal, since he is so already, according to Christian Science. Our only need is to find this out, and reduce to practice the principle of perfect manhood. For as many as are led by the spirit of God, they are the sons of God.

The Peat Fuel Industry.

The peat fuel works at Kirkfield, in which Ex-Mayor Davis is interested, are not being operated at present, the company having decided to make some radical changes in the drying compressor. More power will also have to be supplied. When these improvements have been effected it is confidently expected that the manufacture of peat fuel will be prosecuted with vigor, and that a large force will be employed. In the vicinity of Beaverton, Mr. Dobson, of that village, has expended a large sum in developing the peat industry, and he is sanguine of success.

The Star Chamber Session.

Editor Morning Times: Sir,—I see the Council still sit behind closed doors. Let me say, Mr. Editor, that I for one consider the action of the Council in this particular very unfair to the people. Just why they are afraid to let the people peep behind the scenes, is to me a mystery. It looks as though they were no always doing things that would not bear the light of day.

I understand that there is more than one aspirant for the Mayor's chair at the Council board. I can tell such that they will never get there with my vote unless I see his name recorded as being opposed to holding these secret meetings of committees.

A JACKSON.

A.W.—We take the following on G. W. Green's recommendation, as being the best. It is called the Bordeaux sulphate, 4 pounds, quicklime, 4 pounds; water, 50 gallons. To destroy self-eating insects add four ounces of Paris green. For peach, use three pounds each of copper sulphate and lime, and three ounces of Paris green, on account of the tenderness of the foliage.

When a single barrel of Bordeaux mixture is required, dissolve in a cool barrel partly filled with water, 4 pounds of copper sulphate (blue stone).

"One Good Turn Deserves Another."

It is so easy to go through life doing good and helping to make others happy. A lady who had been ill with a complication of troubles, having been thoroughly cured and now enjoying perfect health, felt it a duty to tell her friends that the specific that brought her back to health was Hood's Sarsaparilla.

Thus, after Hood's had served her well, she felt it deserved a good turn at her hands. Thousands tell the same story of blood purified and health restored. Hood's Sarsaparilla possesses merit peculiar to itself.

Sick Headache.—For a long time I was troubled with sick headache. Different medicines failed to give me relief. I took Hood's Sarsaparilla, my husband having been cured of salt rheum by it, and soon it made me feel like a new woman." Mrs. ROBERT McLAURIN, Deerhurst, Ont.

Impure Blood.—"My wife suffered with pain and distress from an affection of the throat caused by impure blood. She was almost in despair when she turned to Hood's Sarsaparilla. Six bottles of this medicine completely cured her." JOHN WHELAN, Galt, Ont.

Back Ache.—"My mother had severe pains in her side and back. She was obliged to give up work. A friend persuaded her to take Hood's Sarsaparilla and soon she was able to do her work, free from pain and had a good appetite." MRS. MORGAN HANCOCK, N. B.

No Strength.—"My whole system was run down. I was weak and could hardly get around to do my work. I began taking Hood's Sarsaparilla and after using five bottles I found that my strength had returned and appetite much improved." MRS. KELLEY, 318 Dufferin Street, Toronto, Ont.

Nerve Food.—"My wife was stricken with nervous prostration. She suffered from headaches. She became weak, low-spirited and her appetite was poor. I am glad to state that Hood's Sarsaparilla has completely cured her of all her ailments." G. BELMONT, 331 Hannah St., Hamilton, Ont.

Hood's Sarsaparilla
Never Disappoints

Hood's Pills cure liver bile, the non-irritating and only cathartic to take with Hood's Sarsaparilla.

Hot water facilitates the operation. To dissolve quickly place the copper sulphate in a cotton bag or basket, and suspend this in the vessel containing water so that it is entirely immersed. Solution rapidly takes place. In another vessel slack 4 pounds of fresh lime with as many gallons of water. If the lime, when slacked, is lumpy or granular it should be strained through a fine sieve or coarse sacking into the barrel containing the copper sulphate now in solution. Then fill the barrel with water and it is ready for use. It should be used soon after being prepared.

A Correction.

Editor of the Times.

Will you kindly correct the errors which appeared in the Examiner of April 28th. It stated that Miss Violette Dover had received the degree of M.A., also that she had received her education at the Peterborough Collegiate Institute.

Her first training for university work she received from Mr. Jory, while he was principal of the Peterborough Collegiate Institute. She was prepared for matriculation by the late Mr. Lynch. The degree she has just received is M. Sc. (The first female that the degree of M. Sc. has been conferred on at McGill). In recognition of this fact, she was handed at convocation, a bouquet of roses red and white. McGill's colors, presented by the women graduates of that university.

Miss Dover is now taking an additional course in analytical chemistry. Please insert the above and oblige.

WINBERG WAS AN EASY PRIZE FOR HAMILTON!

The Enemy in Full Retreat Towards Kroonstadt Before Rushing Advance of British.

ROBERTS' HIGH PRAISE FOR THE CANADIAN BOYS

The Commander-in-Chief Says the Turning Movement Carried Out by the Colonials Was a Dashing Affair—What Is General French Doing

Smaldest, Sunday May 6.
The movement that culminated in the capture of Winberg and Smaldest was part of a great general movement, attacking from Gen. Hunter on the west to Gen. Rundle on the east. Lord Roberts' admirable strategic movements in placing everywhere five British to one Boer. Out of what appeared the inextricable confusion of divisions and brigades order was quickly made. Lord Roberts were compelled to meet Lord Roberts under unfavorable conditions. What is more important is that the British are now able to wait. Their front and strong positions are safe in the knowledge that their flanking columns will advance and outflank the Boers. The Boers held a really strong position from which earlier in the campaign they could only have been forced by hard fighting. Gen. Hamilton's arrival at Winberg, although not directly outflanking the Boers, made their position extremely uncomfortable. Gen. Hunter's movement on the left was even more successful than was at first imagined. 40 Boers were killed. The march was short, but Gen. Pole-Carew's division marched fifty-eight miles in four days. Gen. Tucker's division is marching on our left to-day, and Gen. Maxwell's brigade is to cross the river before night. Lord Roberts has been very strict in his examinations of the farms, with the result of disclosing the fact that nearly every house is a miniature arsenal, munitions, medicines, and abundant ammunition being found. If this had not been captured the army would be leaving in the rear, the material in men and arms for a dangerous movement among the inhabitants. All along, the railways, whenever any ally, have been utterly destroyed, but the engineers hope to make a detour in some cases, and in others they will fill up the gaps. Three of the four spans of the Vet River bridge have been utterly destroyed and it will be necessary to make a temporary line along the river bed as that on the Molder. Reports have been heard this afternoon showing that more culverts and bridges are being destroyed northward.

London, May 7.
Lady Sarah Wilson writes from Mafeking under date of April 23 as follows:—The situation is unchanged. The garrison is depressed at there being no sign of relief, but is as determined as ever to defeat the Boers of a crowning triumph on the western border. A case of which key realized 2100 at a raffle, and a pound of flour was sold at auction for two guineas.

London, May 8, 4.30 a.m.
The Boers are everywhere retiring before the British, except on the Natal frontier and at Mafeking, to the inner circle of their defense. They appear determined to fight until the Kroonstadt hills are reached. Lord Roberts is expected to do another forty or fifty miles, and then to wait for some time in order to bring up supplies and to repair the railway. There are one or two hints in the despatches from the front that he may rest for a few days. Smaldest, General French's 9,000 cavalry have not been mentioned in the official or unofficial despatches for four days. It is by no means likely that he is either detouring toward Kroonstadt or raiding the Ladybrand district. Fifteen thousand British are now operating on the western frontier of the Free State. As the deadlock at Warrenton has been broken and the Boers are retreating there is nothing formidable except distance between Warrenton and Mafeking. The most hopeful criticism of Mafeking on April 22 were that the garrison would be barely able to hold out for a month. At that time the fever was spreading. According to advices from Maseru, Beaufort, several thousand Free State men are now collected near Mafeking. The district is rich in food for men and horses and the Boers seem resolved not to move northward, but to be preparing to retreat where they are. If they are let alone they will menace the line of communication after the British army has passed into the Transvaal. Lord Roberts and Lord Roberts and Lord Roberts personally directed the artillery in the Vet River engagement. Queen Victoria will send a signed photograph to Col. Lekwick, the hero of Kimberley.

Eleven thousand four hundred and fifty-eight troops are now at sea on the way to South Africa. No others are under orders to go except as a reserve to fill up the losses of regiments from the front.

CAPTURE OF WINBURG CONFIRMED.
Hamilton is Now Parallel with the British Center.

London, May 7.—The capture of Winberg by the British is confirmed, and the main advance to Pretoria continues with the machine-like precision and rapidity which have characterized all Lord Roberts' forward movements. By the occupation of Winberg General Ian Hamilton gains almost nearly parallel with ### Engineer's Report.

Gentlemen—I beg leave to report as following regarding injuries done to works of the corporation by recent freshets in the creek.

Reid street bridge.—The south channel of which was supported in the centre and north side on timber beams and posts, was partly carried away by ice. The south wall of this channel being masonry set in cement is intact, this wall was partly rebuilt last year.

Simcoe street bridge.—The stone wall supporting the girders of the sidewalk on the south side, and extending under and forming part of the foundation wall of Pheasant's hotel, was carried away, causing the sidewalk to sink. This I have had temporarily repaired.

Charlotte street bridge.—The water main under the bridge, which was originally laid below the bed of the creek, is now placed above it, causing an obstruction with the flow of water, which lodged against it and piled up and formed a dam, thus backing the water up to such an extent as to force a passage around the back of the east abutments, undermining the road and sidewalks, and forcing an opening through the face of the crib-work, which is very much out of repair.

A further examination of these bridges will be made as soon as the water goes down to normal level, and no heavy repairs can be done until then.

Culverts.—The culvert on Aymer St., from G.T.H. crossing to McDonnell street, and crossing McDonnell and Bethune streets to the creek in very much out of repair, and will require to be rebuilt for about half of its length. Before doing this, however, it would be advisable to make an examination of the whole course of the creek, with a view of finding a more favourable location. Several small culverts in the north and west parts of the town have been washed out and require repairs.

Washouts have also occurred on McDonnell street, between Park street and the creek, where a jam of ice caused a diversion of the creek; and on Charlotte street, between Main street and where a drain of field tile was laid under the surface of the road, and has become obstructed, causing a sinkhole.

Standpipes.—I find that several of these are out of order, the valves worn and leaking. Some of these were damaged by frost last season, through not being drained off. These will require to be replaced as soon as possible.

The parts of the boundaries of adjoining townships to be kept in repairs by the town should be carefully gone over with a view to revising the agreement now in force between the town and townships.

T. A. HAY, Town Engineer.

24th OF MAY CELEBRATION.

Major Miller addressed the Council in behalf of the 57th Battalion, which intends, in conjunction with the Board of Trade and Veterans' Association, giving on Her Majesty's birthday a mammoth demonstration, consisting of military and citizens' parade, open air musical programme, sports, fireworks, etc., and entirely free to the public, and asking Council to give a substantial grant towards this commendable purpose.

Mr. T. E. Bradburn, representing the Board of Trade, supported the Major, and hoped that a liberal grant would be forthcoming.

Mr. F. F. Froumentie, president of the Veterans' Association, addressed the Council on the same subject, and thought that this year, of all years, when the country is filled with military enthusiasm, and our gallant Canadians are fighting side by side with the Imperial forces in the cause of liberty and justice, this important town of Peterborough should not be backward in manifesting its loyalty to the coming twenty-fourth of May.

Mr. M. L. Hay concurred with the previous speakers' opinions and urged the Council to be as liberal as possible.

Mr. J. Turner, of J. J. Turner & Sons, suggested that the town spend fifty or a hundred dollars in suitable

WEAVING A STRONG NET ROUND THE DYNAMITERS

Evidence Tracing Them to the Canal and Locating Them There After the Explosion.

CROWN'S CHAIN OF EVIDENCE VERY COMPLETE.

If Explosion Had Carried Away Lock Gate Between Eleven and Twelve Million Cubic Feet of Water Would Have Been Liberated Causing Loss of Life.

Welland, Ont., May 7.—The hearing of the three prisoners, Walsh, Nolin, and Dullman, the two former charged with attempting to blow up lock 24 of the Welland Canal, and the latter with being an accomplice, was resumed at the court here to-day.

At the hearing last Monday the Crown presented a wonderfully complete chain of evidence, proving that three were in company at Buffalo, Niagara Falls, N.Y., Niagara Falls, Ont., and at Thorold, where they were seen viewing the lock, the two being shadowed for some time before the attempt was made. Walsh and Nolin were traced on the day they exploded the dynamite from the Falls right to the lock, were seen to lower the dynamite in the lock, and run away.

To-day Mrs. Gregory, who was going to Thorold the night of the explosion, testified that she met two men near the lock, and identified Nolin and Walsh as two men he met just east of the lock.

Louis Pierce, who works in St. Catharines and lives in Niagara Falls, testified that on the night of the explosion, and while walking home, was overtaken by Walsh and Nolin, who walked with him a short distance. They said they were Englishmen eight months out from Manchester, and were practising for a prize fight. They were older than he, and he met them near the lock, saw Walsh and Nolin get off the Niagara Central train the night of the explosion, and also saw them near the lock.

Alfred Burrows, a clerk at the Real Estate hotel, Niagara Falls, said that Dullman and Walsh had registered there on the 12th for two or three days, and that Dullman alone had stayed from the 16th to the 21st. Dullman gave him $110 to keep for him, but drew it afterwards. He did not introduce them to George Black. He met decoration.

Mr. F. H. Dobbin here explained that if a liberal grant was given—say $400—the committee would not petition our merchants for any financial assistance, as he had been the case on former occasions.

Ald. Dawson here moved, seconded by Ald. Rogers—that the matter be referred to the Finance Committee, with power to act.—Carried.

THE 12th OF JULY.

Ex-Ald. McWilliams at this juncture petitioned the civic fathers to defer the date of decorating the town on July 12th next, when an orange demonstration will be held in Peterborough, which will be the means of attracting an enormous number of visitors who will spend in town thousands of dollars. It had been urged, he concluded, that our Roman Catholic citizens would object to the expenditure of this money on religious demonstrations. This would not be the principle, he felt sure, as the best of harmony existed between the Orange society and their Catholic friends, who willingly co-operated in the Queen's jubilee demonstration. He was sure ex-almshouse Clinkscale, an old member of No. 89 (laughter) would concur with his sentiments in this matter.

Ex-almshouse Cahill, in a neat speech supported the previous speaker, and opined that Council should deal liberally with the Orangemen in the matter of decorations. (Applause.)

Ald. Sawers moved, seconded by Ald. Corkery—that a grant not to exceed $250 be given to decorate the town on the 12th of July, to be spent under the supervision of a joint committee of this Council and the Orange society.

Ald. Rogers moved, seconded by Ald. Dawson—that the matter be referred to Finance Committee with power to act.

THE BAND VS. ALD. DAWSON.

Mr. Crowe in behalf of the 57th Battalion band here complained that Ald. Dawson had made a statement in Council that the band received from the town $1,000 a year, whereas according to the auditors' report they had received but $419.95. This statement of Ald. Dawson's had done the band injury and he wished the matter righted.

Ald. Dawson replied that if he had injured the band he was sorry, and if he were mistaken in his figures he would take back what he had said. But he still maintained that the town was paying too much for music, and the municipal aid received by our town band was far in excess of that given by any town of its size in the county.

Mr. Crowe replied that the little village of Norwood gave their band $250, while Belleville granted $500; he did not think the Council paid sufficient towards the maintenance of Peterborough's splendid town band.

Mr. Hunter, of North Managhan and Mr. T. E. Bradburn addressed Council, asking that a by-law be prepared, providing for the Town of Peterborough and the Township of North Managhan each pay its fair share for keeping the boundary roads in good repair. The matter was referred to the Board of Works.

REPORTS.

Property Committee Report.
Ald. Rogers presented the following:—Gentlemen,—Your Board of Works beg leave to report as follows:—

1. We recommend that E. Archambault be paid $12.50 for stone delivered at the Charlotte street bridge.

2. The Town Engineer was authorized to arrange with T. Williams for cleaning the gully traps on the streets on the same terms as last year. We recommend that he be paid on the certificate of the Engineer.

3. The question of the rate of interest on the debentures to be issued for local improvements, was referred to the Chairman of this Board, Ald. Denner and the Mayor to settle.

4. We recommend that in the absence of the Chairman of the Board of Works the street pay lists be paid off being certified by Ald. Weir instead of the Chairman.

5. Tenders for street watering were advertised for and the contracts were let to the lowest tenderers as follows:—Western district, J. H. Cameron, $220.00; Southern district, Thos. McWilliams, $274.00; Northern district, Michael O'Donnell, $300.00. We recommend that the Town Engineer be instructed to have a fence constructed around the Town yard on Townside street.

7. Several of the bridges over the Creek were damaged by the water and ice and require in some cases to be made as new. We recommend that mechanics employed by the Town Engineer be paid on being placed on the regular pay lists at current rates of wages.

8. We recommend that the streets along the lines of the street railway be repaired.

9. The Chairman was authorized to save by transplanting such trees as are in danger and can thus be saved around the Central Park on Murray and George streets.

The report was adopted as read.

Legal Committee Report.
Ald. Robertson presented the following:—Gentlemen,—Your Legal Committee beg leave to report and recommend as follows:—

1. That the Town Solicitor defend the Town in the matter of the writ issued by Mrs. Sherwood, and also in the matter of the accident to Miss Connery if action is taken against the town.

2. That the Town finance the siding to the Electric Works through Mr. Cahill's property, the work to be done under the supervision of the Town Engineer.

3. That the Mayor and Clerk sign and forward a petition to the Ontario Government asking for the extension of the jurisdiction of this County and Divisional Courts.

4. That the action of the Solicitor in issuing a writ against the Grand Trunk Railway respecting the rebuilding of the Smith Street bridge over the Creek be approved.

The report was adopted as read.

Property Committee Report.
Ald. Clinkscale presented the following:—Gentlemen,—Your Property, Market and Building Committee beg leave to report as follows:—

HUMAN BRAIN CELLS.

THEY REFUSE TO WORK UNDER TOO HIGH A PRESSURE.

Put on Too Much Steam and These Minute Organisms Go on Strike. Why Men Go Crazy or Become Absentminded.

Keeping pace with scientific thought and progress certain problems which in the past have been shelved for want of light being thrown upon them have been taken up again one by one to undergo further examination by the aid of improved science.

The newest revelation in this direction tends to the science of the mind and includes the following problems: Why does a man act queerly when he is intoxicated?

Why is a man absentminded on occasions?

Why does a man sometimes become violently insane, often a dangerous, raving lunatic?

Such questions as these have puzzled our immediate fathers, who have hardly ever satisfactorily explained them away or indeed thrown much reliable light upon them. The human brain is composed of cells, and each cell is a simple bit of nerve substance, from one end of which, like an octopus, spring a number of tentacles, while from another part arises an arm different from them and of great length. The long arm is intended for transmitting impressions from one portion of the brain system to another, it being made to touch the tentacles or short arms of the next one to it, the latter in its turn effecting contact with a third cell, and so on.

Thus a message is conveyed and the mind gets its news. The entire brain is made up of these cells, whose number is legion and whose full strength is grouped in systems, these systems in turn being arranged in communities, the communities in clusters and finally the clusters in constellations, by which divisions they are known to physiologists.

So long as the mind is in a healthy condition each little cell, or brain octopus, attends to its business faithfully and gives no trouble, but as man generally is an animal who usually refuses to live the life spanned out by nature and adopts instead the life laid down by the modern artificial process of living, instituted forthwith by civilization, mental disturbances frequently arise through the brain becoming abused in various ways, from overwork and alcohol principally.

Your octopuslike brain cell is a living little thing, and it can endure a great deal of abuse from you, but if you should go a little too far it rebels and refuses to work any longer by breaking contact with its companion cells, which it can do by withdrawing its long arm and getting itself out of circuit. But this rebellion is conducted by whole groups of cells acting together in full harmony.

Now, the object of this "strike" is simply to avoid overwork, for each cell has stored within its minute space only a certain amount of energy, but if you put on the high pressure this is easily consumed by the operation of the brain, and the organism breaks down from exhaustion. Now, take the first of the problems just stated. When a person takes too much to drink, the cells in those patches of the brain that are responsible for the conduct of muscular movement become affected and the man staggers.

When the dose is very large, the cells, which, although stupefied, have tried to keep their master on his legs, now cease working, and the man sleeps like a dead. Finally, if more than enough of alcoholic drink be taken, the effect on the cells is to paralyze them, and the unfortunate man dies.

There is some relation between extraordinary activity of the mind and insanity. Geniuses are apt to exhibit symptoms of mental alienation, and, singular to relate, their children are usually inferior to those of average men.

For instance, not to go out of England for example, Cromwell was a hypochondriac and had visions, Dean Swift inherited insanity and was himself not a little mad, Shelley was called by his friends "Mad Shelley," Charles Lamb went crazy, Johnson was another hypochondriac, Coleridge was a morbid maniac, Milton was of a morbid turn of mind, nearly approaching insanity (modern ideas of madness are largely formed on the description evolved by his diseased imagination), and Byron said he was visited by ghosts.

This mental alienation occurring in the foregoing cases shows that certain specific groups of brain cells have come under the baneful influence of the guiding spirit called talent or genius, which has used up all the energy stored in each cell and each group of cells, to the detriment of the whole, with the result that their ceasing work has brought about various types of insanity (modern ideas of madness are largely formed on the description evolved by his diseased imagination), and Byron said he was visited by ghosts.

The mental alienation occurring in the foregoing cases shows that certain specific groups of brain cells have come under the baneful influence of the guiding spirit called talent or genius, which has used up all the energy stored in each cell and each group of cells, to the detriment of the whole, with the result that their ceasing work has brought about various types of insanity (modern ideas of madness are largely formed on the description evolved by his diseased imagination), and Byron said he was visited by ghosts.

The remaining problem is absentmindedness. This is produced by a temporary disjunction of certain groups of cells. A man becomes so absorbed in his study of some particular subject and loses his whole mind to thought that the hard thinking disorganizes the groups of cells employed in the process of reflection, their tentacles being turned all one way, to the detriment of mental action generally, and so the man with the tentacles of his brain cells turned in the one direction passes along the stream but to all observation or mental inspection and does all manner of queer things because he is not conscious of what he is doing.

POULTRY POINTERS.

The overfat hen is often the one that is laying the soft shelled eggs. Any breed of fowls can be profitably kept on a dry, sandy or gravelly soil. There is nothing so fruitful of disease among chickens as damp or unclean quarters.

Fowls should not be killed when they have a full crop, for as soon as they are dead the flesh turns blue and dark immediately over the crop.

Throwing soft feed upon the ground is poor economy. Troughs or smooth boards cost little and are not only much cleaner, but avoid waste of feed.

Young chickens will eat wheat when 2 weeks old, and as it is one of the very best grains that can be given for growth, it is quite an item to feed them liberally with it.

In mating always endeavor to use active, vigorous cocks. Do not select the largest and heaviest. Sacrifice points for vigor. Mate 1-year-old cocks with 2-year-old hens.

The best turkeys for breeding are those 2 years old. If yearling stock be used, the earliest hatched males and females should be selected. It is of no advantage to hatch them too early.

BITS FROM SHELDON.

Gifts that involve no sacrifice return neither happiness nor pleasure. Where the body is wrung with pain, where it is filled with disease, one cannot be happy.

Doctors head the list of suicides, because they see the ill side of life—its physical side.

We here in America seem to have evolved in the course of our fast living a disease that once was not known—nervous prostration.

It is always very hard to tell which of these two is the more miserable man on earth—the discontented rich or the friendless beggar.

The little child who buys tin toys for a cent in the store gets more pleasure out of giving them to some other little child than the rich man who ostentatiously gives presents worth thousands of dollars.—Rev. Charles M. Sheldon.

THE ART OF WAR.

For the first time in the history of the British army there is actually a desire among officers that commissions should be given men who have served in the ranks.

The mounted police of Cape Colony are picked men, used to fighting and proud of the high reputation of their corps. The force consists of 2,000 enlisted men and 68 officers.

Twelve pounds only is the weight of the new automatic machine gun under experiment in the United States army. It fires 450 shots a minute and can be carried by one man.

Russia is probably the only country that could raise a regiment composed entirely of generals, who number 1,248. They receive in salaries an aggregate of 7,000,000 rubles a year.

HOUSEHOLD HINTS.

In sweeping from a fire creep or crawl along the room with your face close to the floor.

To fasten labels to the emblems add one teaspoonful of brown sugar to each quart of paste.

Washing bronze chandeliers removes the bronze. Dust with a feather brush and a soft cloth.

When sewing at night, something white should be thrown over the table beneath the light to relieve the eyes.

Articles of old furniture are sometimes made to appear new by washing them with linseed oil and then applying a coat of oil.

THE COOKBOOK.

Always scald rhubarb before cooking it, for it then requires much less sugar, and yet loses none of its flavor.

A new idea is to put the flavoring of cold puddings, sauces, etc., with the butter. The butter holds the flavor better than any other medium.

Cold steak may be acceptably served as a left over by passing it through the meat chopper and arranging it neatly on a platter, garnished with parsley or watercress.

THE DOMINIE.

It is announced in Boston that Bishop Lawrence of Massachusetts is to give a new dormitory to the church of Christ.

Bishop Charles Edward Cheney of Chicago recently celebrated the fortieth anniversary of his pastorate.

The Rev. Dr. Edward P. Goodwin, for 33 years pastor of the First Congregational church of Chicago, has resigned on account of advancing age and ill health.

Dr. Goodwin is the dean of the clergy of Chicago for continuous service with one church.

The Rev. Henry J. Cella, the pastor of the African Zion church of Syracuse, was born a slave. He is a Hampton graduate, has studied law, once declined a nomination for member of the Virginia legislature and since his entrance to the ministry has stamped the Pacific coast as a McKinley campaign orator.

A black bishop of the Anglican church was recently consecrated at Lambeth. The Right Rev. James Johnson, assistant bishop of western equatorial Africa, is a Sierra Leone negro whose parents were rescued slaves from the Yoruba country. His station will be Benin. Durham university has made him an honorary A. M.

SCRAPS OF SCIENCE.

Water boils and vaporizes at 212 degrees F. above zero, while liquid air boils and vaporizes at 312 degrees below zero.

It is estimated that in the streets of an average city there are about 2,000 bacteria to the cubic yard of air and in a hospital ward or where there is sickness as many as 80,000.

It has been observed that artesian wells have a daily period of ebb and flow as well as the ocean tides, only the process is reversed. The time of greatest flow of an artesian well is the period of low tide in the ocean.

Will in Thousands of Cases Have to Fight Catarrh Unless Dr. Agnew's Catarrhal Powder is Used to Prevent the Sowing of the Seed.

The wife of a prominent physician of Toronto was a victim of Catarrh in its worst form. She tried almost every treatment known in the world of medicine without receiving any lasting benefit. Hearing of the almost miraculous cures made by Dr. Agnew's Catarrhal Powder, she procured it, persevered in its use for eight months, and was fully restored, and all symptoms of the dreaded disease eradicated from her system. She says, "After years of suffering I rejoice to be freed." Name given on application.

When Sir Charles Tupper, the venerable Conservative chieftain, visited Lindsay last week, there appeared a ragged old chap, most gloriously intoxicated, sitting on the wharf. "God bless Tupper, sir!" said the old man. "Certainly," was the reply. "God save the Queen!" reiterated the old fellow. "By all means. Send her victorious, happy and glorious!" "What's right, sir!" I wish Sir Charles had come to Lindsay every year, every month, every day, wor. Think of what he has done for the country; Think of what good he does to people. Why look at me; here I am, as drunk as hell, and never paid a penny for it!"

BURNED TO DEATH.

A Very Shocking Accident to a Child at Centerville.

On Saturday night a shocking accident occurred at Centerville, South Monaghan, by which the 18 months' old child of Mr. James T. C. Lang, postmaster and storekeeper, lost its life.

Mr. and Mrs. Lang were both busily engaged in the store attending upon their customers. The store and house were all in the same building, but the door between them was closed. The baby was asleep in its cradle in the dining room under the charge of a hired girl about 18 years of age. She thought she would slip out for a few minutes and the door without the knowledge of Mr. or Mrs. Lang. It is supposed that in closing the door she awoke the child, and that it sat up in its cradle and pulled the cover from a table near by, bringing down and shattering the coal oil lamp right beside and under its cradle. The noise was not heard and the fire must have been burning about three minutes when Mrs. Lang heard the baby scream. She rushed into the room and found it in flames, the cradle and child being completely enveloped. She picked it up and rushed from the room with the flames still issuing from its clothing.

Dr. Montgomery was telephoned for and arrived in five minutes. Everything that could be done for the child was done, but its case was hopeless. The doctor expected to see the only two hours, but it lingered eighteen.

The flames had gained considerable headway in the room, but it being Saturday night, there was an unusually large crowd of people around, and the house and furniture were saved.

The shock was a very severe one to Mrs. Lang. The girl who had been left in charge of the girl was said to be in a low state yesterday from shock and fright.

THE REVIVAL SERVICES.

A Big Revival Expected Through Rev. Mr. Gell's Visit.

Rev. Mr. Gell will arrive in Peterborough on Thursday, and will hold his first meeting on Thursday evening, in the Murray Street Baptist Church, at 8 o'clock. The programme for the meetings will not be made until after the arrival of Mr. Gell. It is expected, however, that he will lead two meetings every day, one in the afternoon and the other in the evening, from the 10th to the 21st of May. It is very likely that there will be a noon prayer meeting arranged for at the Y. M. C. A. rooms. The public will be fully informed of the time and places of the meetings through the newspapers.

A by-law to prevent the placing of know or other material on the streets passed its several readings.

A by-law to authorize the execution of a contract with Thos. McWilliams for a dumping ground passed its several readings.

STREET RAILWAY FRANCHISE.

Ald. Robertson moved that in consequence of the Street Railway Company having forfeited their franchise by reason of not running cars for fifteen months, the town engineer be instructed to remove the rails, or such part thereof as he may deem necessary to prevent obstruction of the streets, and that a copy of this resolution be served upon the said company.

Mr. T. E. Bradburn here expressed himself very strongly on the Council's action, and thought the resolution exceedingly arbitrary. He inquired of Ald. Robertson if he had been advised by the town solicitor to move this resolution. He was afraid there was something behind the matter.

Ald. Robertson replied that the solicitor had advised this action.

Ald. Dawson explained that the town was simply anxious to protect itself against possible damages by reason of the rails sticking up to the danger of citizens; hence the resolution.

Ald. Dene thought it would be well if the agreement between the Railway and town could be modified in some way; he would be very sorry to see the rails taken up and would urge that some agreement be arrived at by which both the town and Street Railway Co. which is composed of good citizens, could be protected.

Ald. Dawson moved in amendment seconded by Ald. Rogers—that the resolution be referred to the Board of Works to confer with the Street Railway Company.—Carried.

THE CASE OF SAMUEL FERREN.

Rev. M. L. Armitage here petitioned Council to render some aid toward paying the way of Samuel E. Ferren and family to Denver, Colorado, or Florida.

Ald. Rogers explained that these matters were left in the hands of the Charity Board, who would undoubtedly give the matter their earnest consideration.

Council then adjourned.

Bad For The Fair.

It won't be healthy for the fall fair if the agricultural implement markets carry out their threat not to exhibit this fall. The fall fair bill of many of the large markets, who take their products to fair to fair have doubtless been enormous. The fair will lose one purely agricultural attraction, and mark this—the manufacturers will lose a good many sales. There are many machines sold at fall fairs, and the markets come exhibiting, will stay in the warehouse of the markets. The farmers come to the fairs with money to spend, and if they don't spend it on implements they'll either bank it or spend it on something else.

ONLY FORTY-FIVE MILES FROM KROONSTAD NOW.

Free Staters Preparing to Change Their Seat of Government Still Further Northward.

A PLOT TO ASSASSINATE ROBERTS DISCOVERED.

General Hunter Defeats Boers and Joins Hands With Paget Near Warrenton—Tidings From Mafeking are Gloomier Than Ever and Help Needed Quickly.

Wepener, Cape Colony, Monday, May 7. A British camp is now being formed at Fourteen Streams. The old railroad bridge can be repaired in a week. A Boer prisoner says the burghers, who number ten thousand men, are now on their way to Christinia.

London, May 8. The War Office has issued the following despatch from Lord Roberts, dated Smaldeel, May 8.—"Gen. Hutton with Mounted Infantry reconnoitered yesterday to the Zand River, and found the enemy in considerable force. General Broadwood's brigade of cavalry, with Gen. Ian Hamilton, first performed same operation with much the same result."

"Gen. Hamilton reports that he approached Fourteen Streams yesterday without opposition, assisted in a great measure by the able dispositions made by Gen. Paget on the left bank of the Vaal River at Warrenton, where the artillery fire rendered the enemy's position practically untenable. A six inch gun was found most useful when the sixth and half of the fifth brigades of infantry advanced under cover of the artillery. The enemy retired precipitately, abandoning their clothing, ammunition and personal effects."

London, May 9, 4.10 a.m. Four thousand British cavalry watered their horses at Pand River Monday, 25 miles beyond Smaldeel, where Lord Roberts takes his despatches.

The scouts who have been searching the country for miles along the stream, have found no Boers south of the river. The enemy are laagered in unknown force on the north bank. Thus the British advance guard is within 45 miles of Kroonstad. The Free Staters, in the expectation that Kroonstad will speedily be captured, are according to information from Lorenzo Marquez, preparing to transfer their government to Heilbron, a little more than 50 north-east.

The proclamation of Lord Roberts appears to have little effect on the inhabitants of the invaded districts. Every farm is found deserted except by the women and children. All the men are away fighting. The tidings from Mafeking are gloomier than ever. Every body there has an empty stomach and a pinched face. The natives are no longer given even porridge, and the whites now have nothing but a quart of that substance, and a pound of horse flesh daily. Everything else eatable has gone. Inadequate food, wet trenches and cold nights are deadly to the health of the garrison. This information comes from reliable natives. Lady Sarah Wilson under date of Apr. 27, says: "The Boers now number 4,500, including young Kioff, President Kruger's grandson, who has sent for six more guns."

A Mafeking correspondent of the Times who also emphasizes the extreme gravity of the situation, says—"It is impossible to ignore the fatal insignificance of Col. Baden-Powell's reference to the hardships endured by the women and children, among whom many deaths have already occurred."

The commissariat is holding a certain stock of food in reserve for use in the direst extremity. The British column is reported to have reached Taung, thirty miles north of Warrenton. According to Pretoria advices the British are nearing Vryburg, which is half way between Warrenton and Mafeking. Gen. Hunter is probably not in personal command of this relief column. His forces embrace 20,000 infantry and from 5,000 to 6,000 horsemen, an army far greater than has hitherto been supposed.

A STEADY ADVANCE.

Boers are Nowhere in Sufficient Force to Oppose Roberts. London, May 8.—The Times says—At the present state of the operations we cannot look for any striking achievements. We have merely to chronicle a steady advance, which is all the more satisfactory because it shows that the enemy is nowhere in sufficient force to offer serious opposition. In view of the advance of Lord Roberts the necessity

FROM PAUL TO THE VALKSRAAD.

A Tribute to Joubert and Solemn Declarations That the Transvaal Cause is Just and Has the World's Sympathy.

Pretoria, May 7.—The official closing of the 1899 Volksraad, which broke up unofficially in September last, occurred this morning. The vacant seats of Gen. Joubert and Gen. De Kock and others were filled with flowers. The hall was crowded, a large number of ladies being present. In the prayer of the chaplain an allusion to Gen. Joubert moved many to tears. After the prayer the Raad adjourned until the afternoon, when the session of 1900 was inaugurated. The ceremonies were accompanied by the customary salute. President Kruger arrived in the State carriage with the usual escort. All the diplomatists and foreign attaches, including Gen. Gourko, the Russian attaché, were present. President Kruger, in his speech opening the session, alluded feelingly to the vacancies. Referring to Gen. Joubert, he said:

"Future generations will be able to judge the work of the deceased, whose demeanor inspired the enemy with respect and whose humane and brave conduct gave fame and importance to the State among civilized nations."

He was profoundly struck, he said, by the proof of sincere friendship given by the people of the Free State, who had fulfilled their obligations to the Transvaal under the treaty. They had realized that a united front was required as an attack upon the independence of the Transvaal meant a threat against the Free State. He had implicit confidence in the future of the Afrikaner nation. By deeds the Free State had shown a good example to the people of the Transvaal, which had proved of great moral value to those guiding the efforts of a small State to maintain its independence. He was pleased to say that the relation between the two States was now a friendship of equals, and that the Transvaal was now a free and independent State.

After referring to the peace proposals of the Presidents of both Republics, and Lord Salisbury's reply, President Kruger said:

"We proved by legislation and our dealings with Great Britain last year that it was our desire to preserve peace, and now that war has broken out we will do everything to restore peace."

After alluding to the deputation now on a mission to Europe and the United States, and the presence of so many attaches, proving the intense interest of the powers in the Republics and their methods of fighting, he said he was pleased to see that the sympathy of the world was on their side in the war; that ambulances had been sent and that their friends were united in endeavoring to alleviate the distress caused by the struggle.

After referring to alleged violations of the Red Cross Convention and to the consequent protests of foreign powers, President Kruger continued: "Notwithstanding the difficult circumstances, I am glad to say that our finances will enable us to bear the great expenses of the war and that the mines are flourishing."

The President concluded with a reference to the Free State loan, and suggested that the session be not prolonged, and that only matters of importance be dealt with. In a moving peroration he invoked the blessing and help of the Almighty. The proceedings terminated with unusually impressive speeches and prayers. Fifty out of a total of sixty legislators were present, several of them still suffering from wounds.

After the session the President and his family were driven to the Volksraad building, where they were met by a large number of officials and members of the Volksraad.

THE SECOND CONTINGENT AT WELGELEGEN SIDING.

Brigade of Colonials Are Now Encamped 16 Miles North of Smaldeel, Near the Zand.

BOERS WILL MAKE A BIG STAND AT THE RIVER.

The Sharp Eyes of a West Australian Discover Hidden Explosives on Railway Track Prevented Much Damage—Boers Around Mafeking Reinforced.

London, May 8.—General Hutton with the second Canadian contingent, is keeping well ahead in the northward advance of Roberts upon Pretoria. It seems almost likely that these troops will be the first portion of the British army to cross the Vaal. At present the headquarters of the Commander-in-Chief, and must be in close touch with the Boers. Four or five miles away in the Zand, behind which lie the formidable array of kopjes which the Boers have been entrenching for months past in order to defend Kroonstad, their makeshift capital. The colonial horsemen are in fact but forty-five miles from Kroonstad the next objective of the British army. It is likely that General Roberts will make a pause of a few days at Smaldeel in order to prepare for the great task of forcing the Zand and allowing time for the usual reconnaissance. Lord Roberts has undoubtedly evolved from the British army of a few months ago a highly trained, highly-officered organization, roads to promotions. It is remarkable how the routine soldiers of the early days of the campaign have to a man shrunk into the background, their places having been taken by young and vigorous men, untrammelled by rigid adherence to the rules of the old school. Roberts is now the greatest living exponent of the art of war as fought on the tented field, and not on maneuvering grounds. The game is being played on highly scientific lines as everyone who has watched the movements of the past few weeks must testify. Positions which would formerly have been attacked and taken with heavy loss are now carried automatically by a movement which takes place thirty or forty miles away. Thaba N'Chu was vacated by the Boers after Smaldeel, sixty miles distant in a straight line had been seized. Wepener, which is 50 miles from Smaldeel, fell into British hands in the same fashion. Scarcely a shot was fired at either place. An excellent illustration is being furnished of how a skilled commander can win great fights and occupy large tracts of territory without the shedding of much blood, but simply by alert and acute manoeuvres on mathematical and commonsense lines.

London, May 8.—The following despatch from Lord Roberts has been received at the War Office:

"Smaldeel, May 7.—The railway from Brandfort to this place has been considerably damaged and the bridge over the Vet river has been hopelessly damaged. This delays supplies coming up. Every few yards charges of rackarock had been thrown under the rails. This might have created loss of life but was fortunately avoided."

London, May 8.—In spite of wrecked railroad the British advance goes on steadily. Lord Roberts' outposts are apparently about 16 miles north of Smaldeel. General Brabant has joined General Rundle at Thaba N'Chu, whence they were moving forward. The country is all quiet in that direction. A reconnaissance made by Gen. (tumble of the Boers' recent positions at Thaba N'Chu resulted in their being pronounced their being pronounced impracticable, and their evacuation is reported to have been due to the receipt of an urgent message from President Steyn. The Boers are said to be moving northward, but their immediate destination is not known.

The whereabouts of the British cavalry under General French is still a mystery. French, Kelly-Kenny and Chermalde seem to be lost.

Lorenzo Marquez, Sunday, May 6. — A despatch received here from Colonel Plummer's camp, bearing date of April 28, states that the Boers around Mafeking have been gradually reinforced, and that their strength is estimated at 3,000.

Colonel Plummer has succeeded in communicating with Mafeking by means of carrier pigeons, and is endeavoring to communicate with the southern relief column.

THREE MISSING GENERALS. French, Kelly-Kenny and Chermalde seem to be lost.

GREAT BRITAIN'S NAVAL HEROES.

Unparalleled Enthusiasm Demonstrated in London at Reception of Naval Officers and Men Who Assisted in Defence of Ladysmith.

London, May 7.—The annuals of service demonstrations probably show nothing to parallel the enthusiasm with which the naval heroes of Ladysmith, the officers and crew of the British first-class cruiser Powerful, were greeted in London to-day. The scenes in the streets were remarkable and inspiring. The whole route was a floating mass of color, and the enthusiasm displayed was of the most fantastic description. The flags of all nations, banners and mottoes formed an unbroken continuous canopy for Captain Lambton and the contingent of the Powerful to pass under. Stands were erected at all the points of vantage, the houses were crowded with sightseers, and all sorts of men, women and children commingled in the streets below, vying with one another in honoring the gallant sailors who saved Ladysmith.

There was one continuous roar of greeting, waving handkerchiefs, flags, and hats, as the naval brigade, with the khaki colored guns, marched from the depot to the Horse Guards parade, where the Prince of Wales, the Prince of Wales, Mr. Goschen, and in the uniform of an Admiral of the fleet, accompanied by the First Lord of the Admiralty, Mr. George J. Gos-chen, and a number of high naval vice demonstrations probably show nothing to parallel the enthusiasm with which the naval heroes of Ladysmith, the officers and crew of the British first-class cruiser Powerful, were greeted in London to-day. The scenes in the streets were remarkable and inspiring. The whole route was a floating mass of color, and the enthusiasm displayed was of the most fantastic description. The flags of all nations, banners and mottoes formed an unbroken continuous canopy for Captain Lambton and the contingent of the Powerful to pass under. Stands were erected at all the points of vantage, the houses were crowded with sightseers, and all sorts of men, women and children commingled in the streets below, vying with one another in honoring the gallant sailors who saved Ladysmith.

There was one continuous roar of greeting, waving handkerchiefs, flags, and hats, as the naval brigade, with the khaki colored guns, marched from the depot to the Horse Guards parade, where the Prince of Wales, the Prince of Wales, Mr. Goschen, and in the uniform of an Admiral of the fleet, accompanied by the First Lord of the Admiralty, Mr. George J. Gos-chen, and a number of high naval vice demonstrations probably show nothing to parallel the enthusiasm with which the naval heroes of Ladysmith, the officers and crew of the British first-class cruiser Powerful, were greeted in London to-day. ### LEFT EXPLOSIONS ON TRACK.

A Fortunate Discovery by a West Australian Infantryman.

London, May 8.—The following despatch from Lord Roberts has been received at the War Office: "Smaldeel, May 7.—The railway from Brandfort to this place has been considerably damaged and the bridge over the Vet river has been hopelessly damaged. This delays supplies coming up. Every few yards charges of rackarock had been thrown under the rails. This might have created loss of life but was fortunately avoided."

DOES ADVERTISING PAY?

An Article Dealing With the Subject in its Various Phases Which Should be Read by Every Business Man in Town.

You are hoping that your summer's trade will be better than last. What are you doing to make it better? Don't you know, sir, that when there is a general demand for goods it is easy to sell them? And when you have the goods to sell why not tell the people that you have them? This summer you should make your advertising better. You should make the people understand that you are looking out for business and that your prices are right. The old style of advertising "So and so, dealer in 'so and so,' and 'so on,' is not the kind of advertising that pays when you want to do business. When you want to increase your business you should make the people understand that that is what you want to do. You should make them understand that when they go to your store they are going to have the best stock to choose from, the best inducements to buy, and the most careful interest on your part and the very best money they have to spend. Everybody spends money. Everybody is looking for bargains, not in shoddy goods, but honest goods at honest prices and there is no business in Peterborough that cannot be improved by a careful, judicious, systematic course of advertising. Probably the reader has been discouraged with the results. In this department, as in every department of business, there are failures as well as successes. Advertising in an art understood by few, and many a business man has been discouraged, has become a bitter foe to advertising because

THE BOER'S FRIENDS.

But as his cause is, exclaimed the New York Press of a late date, the Boer has sympathizers among Americans who ought to know better. Not so many as it would seem. Because the pro-Boer is invariably a noisy radical, and his conclusions are as intemperate as his language.

With some of these there is an axe to grind. There are fat lecture courses and cheap and easy notoriety. Such are the demagogues like Mr. Stead in London and Webster Davis and Mr. Womels here. They agitate by means of inflammatory rhodomontades and mass meetings of school children. They indulge in penny theatrics such as the sending of a messenger boy to great Com Paul. They drum up the women's clubs. They belong to the type that should be about better business because it knows better itself.

But all this creates for its effect a following whose chief claim is patriotism to principle. To whose unquestioning ignorance the one word "republic" covers all possible sins. Their talk is sprinkled with such expressions as "England's scarlet harlots," "gallant farmers" and "death struggle against overwhelming odds," and they never speak of the Boers without references to Concord, Bunker Hill and Yorktown. This is the most mawkish and the most hopeless class of all.

There is a third class—a class of intelligence and mistaken viewpoint. This class exists also in England, perhaps more largely than the second, which in this country overshadows the others. Mr. Morley belongs to this class. So Mr. Morley and one or two serious-minded men in our own country side with the Boers in their fight for freedom. They do not consider what that freedom means—that it means freedom to carry on a damnable system and policy. They do not consider how it has been abused in the past. Because England is an empire and the Transvaal a "republic" they do not see that the Transvaal's cause is inherently unjust and unholy.

Tell these Boer sympathizers a few facts about the Boer treatment of the blacks in South Africa, and they have nothing to reply. Tell them that the Kaffir can never be taught to read or write, the State will not recognize his marriage, that he cannot use the franchise, that he cannot be a citizen, that he has no rights in a court of law—tell them of these things, and only reply is to talk ecstatically of Lexington, "embattled farmers" and the "great old man of Africa." They have got realistic on the brain and they don't know the Dutch Boer.

Pro-Boer sympathy among Americans is a very curious growth. It is a madness. Its only reason for being is an empty sentimentality for terms and an ignorance for actual South African history and conditions that is appalling.

Our New York contemporary—which, to its credit be it said, has consistently and logically espoused the cause of England in the present war—might have added a footnote to the category of Boer sympathizers in the United States. This is the class made up of the politicians who generally care neither for British nor Boer, but who are catering for votes. Though largely Democratic in character this class has its followers in Republican ranks, and many Republican newspapers which were originally strongly anti-Boer are now "trimming their sails to catch the passing breeze" or in other words the pro-Boer color. As a matter of fact were it not for the politician and the approaching presidential election, the sympathy of the people of the United States for the misguided South African republics would be of very trifling significance.

NOTES AND COMMENTS.

There is an absurd Fenian element in the United States, which had long had the idea of destroying the British empire by making raids into Canada. It would appear that it was some members of that precious order which attempted to blow up the Welland Canal. Fenianism can be irritating especially when it is inflamed by a strident creature like Maud Gonne; but it is always too cowardly to be really dangerous.

The Ottawa citizen has been religiously quoting holy writ, since the fire. It is terrible the suffering the Ottawa people are forced to endure.

ROCKEFELLERS ARE QUIT.

Two Brothers, Members of the Same Church, Cannot Agree.

Cleveland, Ohio, May 8.—The greatest church sensation which Cleveland has ever experienced was made public by the announcement that Frank Rockefeller and his wife and three daughters had resigned from the Euclid avenue Baptist church.

The letter of resignation is the outcome of a series of quarrels between John D. Rockefeller and his brother Frank. The climax to the family differences of the Rockefellers came when, about two months ago, the Rev. H. C. Applegarth resigned as pastor of the Euclid avenue church because of differences he had had with the Standard Oil magnate. Mr. Rockefeller and the Rev. H. C. Applegarth have long been intimate personal friends. Frank stood by the pastor, and resented what he thought was his brother's attempt to "run the church."

The pastor resigned, however, but was urged to reconsider his step by the parishioners. Among the most urgent requests that he consider his resignation was that of Frank Rockefeller. So conspicuous were the efforts of his powerful brother in the opposite direction that open hostility resulted, followed by the resignation of the former from the church.

Frank Rockefeller, in speaking of the church quarrel, said: "I do not believe in placing Caesarism before Christianity in any church."

BRITISH ARMY REMOUNTS.

New York Paper Prints Some Marrying Announcements. 20,000 Horses Needed.

In last Tuesday's issue of the New York Morning Telegraph appeared a lengthy article dealing with remounts for the British War Department. Just how much truth there is in the article it is impossible to say, as the following paragraph, which effects Canada, is built entirely upon fiction:—"The Hon. T. C. Patterson, postmaster of Toronto, Canada, was in the city last week, and met a number of British emissaries, who have been arranging with dealers for shipments to South Africa. Mr. Patterson visited Mr. F. M. Ware at the American Horse Exchange, and told the latter that Canada was unable to meet any part of the Government's demand, although, as admittance of the British Empire, they took pride in doing all that could be done to show their loyalty."

CONTRADICTS IT.

Now, according to his own statements, Mr. Patterson has not been in New York since April 13th. While there he met no emissaries saving Majors Dent and Phillips, who were sent to Canada by the British War Department; nor did he visit F. M. Ware at the American Horse Exchange or anywhere else. As for telling that gentleman that Canada was unable to meet any part of the Government's demand, this is an exact contradiction of Mr. Patterson's words, purposes or actions, as it was he who assured Lord Lansdowne that Canada was able to supply the British army with limited number of serviceable horses.

The Telegraph also publishes an alleged cable from London, stating that Col. Ailsie was to leave Liverpool last Wednesday for New York.

TO COMPLETE CONTRACTS.

For service horses, under orders of Field Marshal Lord Wolseley, representing the War Department. The article goes on to say that Col. Ailsie, a noted artilleryman, has been in the United States "in the past three months, visiting breeding farms and dealers and sizing the market up generally."

He returned to England three weeks ago, and reported that, while possibly 20,000 horses of all grades could be secured in three months' time, the regulations governing the selection of serviceable animals would have to be waived in certain respects, as Canada and the United States combined could not supply half the number of serviceable horses of the regular military standard necessary to complete the requirements of the war in South Africa.

At present there are 2,000 mules and 500 horses in New Orleans awaiting transportation to Cape Colony, and on the arrival of Col. Ailsie some big Chicago and New York firms will have ready 5,000 head more for shipment.

Workmen on Strike.

May Day finds the workmen on strike in quite a number of places. The employees of the New York Central threaten to go out. In Toronto, carpenters, teamsters, cigar-makers, moulders, painters, motormen and conductors are all demanding higher wages, and in nearly every case their demands are being agreed to by the employers. Good times should mean good wages. A glance at the want papers will show that there is a great demand for skilled workmen.

REBELS CLOSE IN ON HODGSON

Desperate Attack on the Fort at Coomassie Repulsed but the Ashantis Continue Their Warfare.

London, May 6.—The Colonial Office from Sir Frederick Mitchell Hodgson, Governor and Commander-in-Chief of the Gold Coast Colony, dated Coomassie, April 27:

"The situation, I regret to inform you, has changed for the worse. On April 23, a force was sent to clear the rebel forces to the eastward. Four members of the constabulary were killed and a large number of the rebels were killed or wounded.

"On April 25 the Ashantis surrounded the town in great force, probably 10,000 and made a determined attack. The Hausas were obliged to evacuate the town and to concentrate around the fort. The engagement lasted four hours. Twenty of our native allies and two Hausas were killed.

"The present occupants of the fort number 358, inclusive of 18 Europeans, six of whom are missionaries. It is necessary that further reinforcements be sent to the Gold Coast."

Sir Frederick Hodgson, under date of April 30, telegraphed:
"Yesterday a serious attack was made on the fort by the rebels, but they were repulsed on all sides with great loss. Two members of the constabulary were killed and ten wounded."

"A contingent of Lagos constabulary, under Inspector-General Apin, has arrived after two days severe fighting. The column was attacked at Awugu, which was taken with the loss of one killed and 23 wounded, among them Apin, slightly."

"On the following day the contin-gent was attacked at Coomassie by 800 rebels. There was a great loss in taking the stockade across the road.
After desperate fighting the Ashantis fled. Two members of the constabulary were killed and 123 wounded, including Assistant Inspector
"Have been unable to send letters or telegrams through."

Under date of May 3 Sir Frederick Hodgson wired that the rebels were manned eastward, and that he had made a demonstration the previous day with two guns, inflicting great loss. One of the native auxiliaries was killed.

The Colonial Office announces that in addition to the Lagos constabulary, reinforcements have been sent to Sir Frederick Hodgson from the Sierra Leone frontier police, and from the West African frontier police in Northern and Southern Nigeria.

OUT GENERALLY BY ROBERTS

Boers Caught by the British Before They Could Concentrate.

London, May 7.—With the largest force of mounted men that has taken the field in modern times Lord Roberts is sweeping aside all opposition. The Boers seem helpless in face of the overpowering force confronting their own weak line. Their flanks continually enveloped by clouds of horsemen, their centre pierced by artillery and cavalry, their retreat threatened both from right and left, they are in a state of chronic retreat. It was only on Thursday last that the Canadian contingent and their fellow colonials under Hutton entered Irundiafort. Three days later, on the 5th, the Vet was crossed by the same force, despite heavy fire and in a manner which calls for warm praise from the Commander-in-Chief. A few miles further and the British entered Smaldevel, where the railway from Winburg joins the main line from Bloemfontein to Pretoria. The headquarters of Lord Roberts who is in the forefront of the advance, are now in this place. Almost simultaneously Gen.
Hamilton's division, which moved from Thaba N'Chu, occupied Winburg, 30 miles to the east, so that the right wing and centre of the British force are now connected by the branch railway. Meanwhile the Boers are retreating pell-mell to their second line of defence south of Kroonstad, north of the Vet and the Zand rivers, which form a continuous line accross the country. It is well to bear in mind that the Vet, which Roberts has already crossed, is merely a tributary of the main stream which flows north to the north and behind which the enemy is said to have thrown up strong entrenchments in formidable country. Twenty miles away from the present British position is the bridge over the Zand at Vanderburg, which the Boers are reported to be now in their retreat northward. In this neighborhood will probably take place the next struggle between the opposing forces.

General Roberts appears to be advancing in three lines, one of the railway, another on the east, and a third to the west. In pursuance to this plan, Gen.
Hamilton, who is to the east, will in all likelihood proceed along the route from Winburg to Kroonstad, outflanking the enemy, while Roberts continues along the railway. The result of the operations of the past two weeks is considered highly satisfactory. Lord Roberts has already caught the Boers napping. It becomes apparent now that he has achieved his purpose from them that they were found unprepared. When the movement was made to clear the south eastern portions of the Free State, and free Wepener, the Boers evidently considered that the main British advance was about to take place in this direction, and concentrated too many men in that quarter. Roberts then quickly made his real movements to the north, with the result that the burghers were unable to assemble in sufficiently large numbers on his front to make an effective resistance. In the meantime the operations on the Kimberley border of the Transvaal are progressing, and are evidently timed to be simultaneous with those north of Bloemfontein. The purpose of Hunter's movement is not yet quite clear, and it is doubtful whether the relief of Mafeking or the invasion of the Transvaal is concerned. General Buller, in Natal, is inactive and will remain until the ground has been cleared by Roberts for his advance into the Free State via Van Keenan's Pass and Maribamith.
This will not be attempted until Kroonstad has fallen, when the army in Natal will be able to make its way through the passes owing to the outflanking of the Boers defending them.

THE BEST NEWS YET!

TROUT LAKE CITY, B. C., APRIL 20, 1900.

"Your letter came while I was out, and I note what you say financially and otherwise, and certainly feel much interested in the property and more confident of the outcome than ever since my last explorations. I have men at work inside tunnel at $12 per foot and no stated amount of work.
I will enclose a pencilling showing how we are doing the work and give my reasons for the same.
We traced two leads down by the end of Crosscut, of fine appearance (see diagram). Mr. Pettipiece was up to see the property and remained over night. I also had Mr. Shannon, the Geologist, up with me to confer with in reference to the property and the way it should be developed and so on.
He will give his opinions through the columns of the "Eagle." He is a very conscientious and careful man and slow to advance ideas without proof. I asked him what he thought of my plan of development. He carefully looked the situation over inside and out and stated it was the best. He said in reference to the property that "it was one that merited an outlay of money and one no one should be afraid to invest in." He mentioned that in many respects it resembled the "Silver Cup."
We will encounter lead No. 2 I think by May 1st, and I am very sanguine we will have Ore at over 100 feet deep. We will have to drive 100 feet to get No. 3 lead. Now if your company can stand the expense of 100 feet of work at this time it certainly would be wise to do so, for we know at least something of the merits of No. 3. When we get the Main Ore Body located we then are made.
It is there and I hope soon to be able to report having it. The conditions have never looked better than now.

J. W. Westfall.

Copies of the "Eagle" can be had on application. The work is being vigorously continued and we hope soon to be able to report having struck the Ore Body. Matters were never better for us than now and if you want a good investment get our shares while there is time.

Pretty Hot Stuff.

Colonel Bob Simmons manages to keep his eyes open by consuming a plentiful supply of birdseye peppers, which a superintendent of one of his numerous Louisiana plantations sends him weekly. Did you ever eat birdseye? It is a quarter inch in diameter, shaped like a double convex lens, with a black pupil and dark brown iris. The hottest sauce known to man is made of it.

The colonel delights in offering one
to an acquaintance and watching furtively to see the tears come. He tried three on me. I bolted them and smiled, for there was no present heat. In an hour, after they had scorched the walls of my stomach and their fierce fire had crept up my esophagus to the roof of my mouth, I was crying as a baby. Quantities of milk but increased the terrifica-tion. The throat was a crematory. Water cold as ice scalded. My sufferings lasted a night, and I prayed that the colonel might never go to as hot a place
as I was.—New York Press.

TOWN AND COUNTY NEWS

A Finger Taken Off.

A few days ago Mr. Alf. McDonald, of the Point St. Charles Mill, was engaged at the mill when a heavy piece of wood fell on his hand, crushing it painfully. One finger had to be removed. The operation was performed by Dr. Mober.

"Murder will out." Impurities in the blood will also be sure to show themselves unless expelled by Hood's Sarsaparilla.

Police Court.

Peter Warner was charged at the police court yesterday by Mrs. McEntee, with using insulting language. The case was dismissed. A counter charge, made by Warner against Mrs. McEntee, of allowing her cow to run at large, was dismissed. Edward Cooney was charged with assault. Discharged.

Ladies' Staff Lost.

Lost, on the road between Nassau and Peterborough, a lady's fur ruff. Please return to Times office.

Body Sealed.

Mrs. John Strain, of Ashburnham, met with a very painful and serious accident this morning. While assisting to lift a boiler of hot water the boiler upset, and a great quantity of scalding water went over Mrs. Strain's face and breast. Dr. Scott, who was called, said that the accident was a very serious one, and that the condition is still serious.

Boy Wanted.

A good, smart boy wanted, about 16 years of age. Apply at 20 Gilmour street.

Leg Amputated.

Yesterday Dr. Greer, assisted by Drs. Halliday and Eastwood, amputated the leg of Mr. Peter Thompson, at Nicholas Hospital. It will be remembered that Mr. Thompson was seriously injured some two years ago, when Mr. Ackerman's building was under construction, and he had been compelled to use crutches ever since. Lately paralysis of the foot set in, which made amputation necessary. The leg was taken off below the knee. Mr. Thompson is now doing as well as can be expected.

Building Lots for Sale.

A number of superb building lots, beautifully situated in the town of Peterborough, for sale. This property belongs to the estate of the late Mr. John Tagney, and comprises lots No. 12 and 13, south of Macdonnell and west of George streets, directly opposite the residence of Mr. T. Bradburn. The property is divided into nine building lots, which will be sold cheap, as the estate must be wound up. For further particulars apply to P. J. Tagney, or John Tremblay, Peterborough, or to S. Tagney, administrator, Lindsay.

Sons of the Blood.

"The law that ye make shall be law and I do not press my will, Because ye are some of the blood and call me mother still." So sang Rudyard Kipling, transmuting into poetry imagery the ties of affection between the colonies and the motherland. The thought is warp and woof of Kipling's nature. It is the basic motive of all his work. He is its greatest oracle. The FACT is patent in South Africa that Sons of the Blood the world over are fighting side by side for England.

One dollar down and five cents a day thereafter will secure you his complete work in 16 volumes, in good English cloth binding, well printed on good paper, illustrated with half-tones plates and decorations by John Lockwood Kipling, each volume bearing the author's autograph and sign token. Read our offer in to-day's issue on page 2.

AGAINST THE CATERPILLARS.

A Simple and Effective Treatment to prevent the Pest.

Caterpillars are again going to be numerous this season, and now is the time for our citizens and farmers to attack the pest. They should spray the trees before the opening of the leaves, thoroughly covering the trunks and branches. Two other sprayings should follow, the second one before the opening of the blossoms, and the third after the blossoms fall. The three applications make an effective treatment. The mixture to be used consists of four pounds of sulphate of copper, four pounds of lime, dissolved separately in water and then mixed, one-quarter of a pound of Paris green and 10 gallons of water.

LITTLE LOCAL LINES.

Havelock's new town hall is to be built by day labour.

Orillia's population shows an increase of 60, being now 4667.

A boat will run daily this year between Port Perry and Lindsay.

Cobourg Council contemplate putting down considerable new pavement this season.

The Finance Committee of the Council will meet this evening to consider the matter of a grant to the Queen's birthday celebration committee.

Miss L. Stevenson, formerly a teacher in Ashburnham Public School, was married in Brandon, Man., on April 25th, to Mr. W. F. Cowan, of Gainsboro, N.W.T.

Morrisburg council has just passed a by-law forcing the cigarette license at $50. A violation of the by-law indicates a fine of from $10 to $50 or commits the violator to 31 days in jail.

The spread down system of heating and ventilation, which has been adopted by a large number of the schools in Ontario has been declared by experts to be un sanitary.

"How many holes have you made?" Asked a golfer to a new beginner at the links yesterday. "I don't know, exactly, but I guess it must have been 100 or more. But I put the tuff back again."

Complaints have been made to the Ontario License Department by a number of prominent people of Toronto, that some of their local druggists and confectioners who have installed the new improved soda water fountains are selling soda water, and other different drinks with the flavor. An investigation will follow which will probably convict some of the offenders.

PERSONAL AND SOCIAL.

The Times invites all its readers to contribute to this column all items of interest to the community, business men, and particulars of accidents, marriages, etc. All that is required is to send a postcard or letter, or telephone the Times, giving rough outline, and we will put it into shape.

Messrs. MacDougall, Bradburn and Austin of Fenelon Falls, have leased Grand Island, Balsam Lake, for stock raising purposes. The island contains 110 acres.

Dr. Torrance Moderator.

At the session of the Synod of Toronto and Kingston, held at College-st. Presbyterian church, Toronto, Rev. Dr. E. F. Torrance, of Peterboro, church, was elected Moderator. Only two nominations were made, viz., Rev. Dr. Torrance, Peterborough, and Rev. J. R. S. Burnett, of Alliston. On a show of hands Rev. Dr. Torrance was declared elected. The vote was 30 for Dr. Torrance and 25 for Rev. Dr. Burnett. The Synod will probably meet in Peterborough next year. The Globe says: "The new Moderator, Rev. Dr. Torrance, is a comparatively young man, and has been pastor of St. Paul's church, Peterborough, for over a score of years. He was educated at McGill University and the Presbyterian College, Montreal, and received his B.D. degree from Knox College."

CALIFORNIA LADIES.

Experience With Drink.

"While using Mocha and Java coffee, I was finally thrown into a serious case of nervous prostration, with heart trouble and dizzy headaches. My husband also had most serious stomach troubles for years. We finally gave up coffee and began the use of Postum. Both husband and myself have now been perfectly well for three years."

"Mrs. C. R. Holmes of 1948 Adair St., and Mrs. Ade Leonard, 224 Twenty-seventh St., Los Angeles, both tried Postum Food Coffee but did not like it. They then tried Postum according to directions, and therefore did not like it. I made a cup for each of them the right way and now they use it daily and like it very much."

"Mrs. Ida Sherman of 8113 Westworth Ave., Chicago, had been quite ill for years with dyspepsia and nervousness and I urged her to leave off coffee and take Postum Food Coffee. She now writes me that she is entirely cured."

"Mrs. Julia Moore of Riverside Cal., and also Mrs. Lily Stalder of Riverside were both ill for some years with heart trouble. I told them of my experience with coffee and induced them to drop it and take up Postum Food Coffee. Mrs. Moore was cured and in three months after making the change Mrs. Stalder wrote that she had been relieved more from leaving off coffee and using Postum than she had obtained from any medicines."

"I am naturally a strong advocate of Postum." Ida Maud Magee, 122 N. Johnson St., Los Angeles, California.

Death of Mrs. H. G. Hopkirk.

Intelligence was received of the sudden death in London, Ont., of Mrs. H. G. Hopkirk, wife of the Post Office Inspector for the London district. The deceased was a daughter of Rev. John McKerran, of Kingston, whose wife was a sister of the late Mr. J. F. Dennistoun. Mrs. Hopkirk had been married only about a year. No particulars of her illness have been received, but it is assumed that her sudden death, which has been a great shock to her friends, was due to some affection of the heart. Mr. R. M. Dennistoun went to London on the evening train yesterday to represent the family at the funeral.

Work Completed.

Mr. Alex. Ross returned a few days ago from the head of Deer and Gull Lakes in West Peterboro, where he superintended the construction of a dam and a slide 400 feet in length. The work was commenced on March 1st, and was finished in time for the lumbermen, although the construction involved some grave difficulties. The men engaged at the work were from Peterboro.

County Maps.

Be sure and get a copy of the new County Map published by the Times Printing Company. It is a first class map and should be in the hands of every business man in Peterborough. Only a few copies left. Copies on paper 50 cents on rollers $2.

Shot in the Leg.

While little Ery Stewart, second son of P. C. Stewart, in company with a number of other boys, were playing, they in some way got hold of a 22 calibre cartridge. Young Stewart, never realising the danger to which he was exposing himself, placed the cartridge on an ax and with another ax attempted to explode the same. This was easily accomplished, but the bullet entered young Stewart's leg between the knee and the hip, making a very nasty wound. Dr. Halliday was immediately summoned, and whilst the bullet has not yet been recovered, the patient is doing nicely.

THE TIMES LETTER BOX

Letters from the People on Interesting Topics.

(NOTE.—The Times does not hold itself in any way responsible for the views expressed by its correspondents.—Ed. Times.)

Chief vs. Constable.

Editor Morning Times.

Dear Sir,—I notice from your report of the proceedings at the Council Meeting, that Mr. Cochrane has lodged a complaint against our great chief of police, because he has exceeded his duty by doing Mr. Cochrane's work in the County. Now, I know nothing of the facts, but assuming that to be as stated, I want to know what becomes of the fees in such cases? That is to say, are they retained by our virtuous chief or handed in to the Town Officials to help pay his not too small salary? I also would like to ask if the chief has a time to preach in Mr. Cochrane's presence, would it not be well to add some other duties to his office to fill in the time? I have absolutely no feeling against either party in the above case, and to show my strict impartiality, I want to enquire why if Mr. Cochrane is so anxious about the performance of his duties he does not take steps to enforce the law regarding the closing of the bars at the proper hour? He cannot have lived one week in the town without being as well aware as any other "man in the street" that the law in regard to the closing is violated every night of every day in the year. I go round a little myself, but I have never seen Mr. Cochrane appear any in the evening—hotel at 11 p.m. Probably he is by that time in bed, but it does occur to me that before he quarrels with anyone else for doing his work, it would be well for him to show by his acts, that he has some little faint glimmering idea of what the duties of his office of License Inspector are, and enforce the law he is paid to administer.

Yours truly,
ENGINEER.

The Drink Habit.

Editor Morning Times.

Sir,—I am pleased to note the great progress that has been made in the direction of temperance during the past few years. This not only applies to Peterborough, but also elsewhere. A leading hotelier told me a few days ago that his bar business is not half what it was five years ago, and he believed this applied to nearly every other place in town where liquor is sold.

I would be glad to have the opinion of the Times on the question of prohibition. With such a record, I hardly think prohibition is necessary.

J. R. G.

Ans.—This great family journal cannot deal with this subject in the space at our disposal. We do not think that it would be wise to have prohibition towns in this country at the present time, for the reason that they could not and would not be enforced. This actual habit has many features that should be considered, as a minor addition to them this G. F. J. might add that men have been accustomed to take a hair of the dog that bit them long before the days of the growler. This is no joke.

NOTICE.

It is urgently requested that any person having contagious or infectious diseases in the family, should, in the absence of a physician, report at once to the sanitary inspector, or Health Officer, so that steps may be taken to ensure complete isolation. With the faithful co-operation of the citizens, the above diseases can be banished from the community. The Health Act inflicts a severe penalty for neglect of this duty.

J. BINGHAM,
Medical Health Officer.

May 4, 1900.

"To Do Ill Costs More

Than to Do Well."

This "wise saw" might properly read, "It costs more to BE ill than to BE well." The source of all health is rich, strong blood. It is to the body what the mighty streams are to the earth. If the blood is pure, the body thrives; if the blood is weak or impoverished, then every pulse-beat carries weakness instead of strength.

Why make the cost of living more than it need be? Purify your blood and give your constitution a chance to do its level best. The only perfect blood purifier and vigor-maker in existence is the world-famed Hood's Sarsaparilla. It brings good, perfect health. It never disappoints.

Erysipelas Sores—"After scarlet fever a running sore was left on my nose. Took Hood's Sarsaparilla and it cured me. My brother was also relieved by it of erysipelas in his face." ELLA COUSNER, Burden, N. B.

Bowel Trouble—"My mother, Mrs. John Reid, suffered with bowel trouble for four years and tried different doctors, but obtained no relief until she began taking Hood's Sarsaparilla. Three bottles of this medicine entirely cured her." LIZZIE REID, Tracy Station, N. B.

A Good Medicine—"We have taken Hood's Sarsaparilla in our family as a spring medicine and used Hood's Pills for biliousness and found both medicines very effective. For impure blood we know Hood's Sarsaparilla is a good medicine." R. B. FULTON, publisher Bee, Arrowood, Ont.

Loss of Appetite—"I was in poor health, troubled with dizziness, tired feeling and loss of appetite. I was completely run down. I took Hood's Sarsaparilla and after while I felt much better. Hood's Sarsaparilla built me up." LIZZIE A. RUSSELL, Old Chelsea, near Ottawa, Que.

Dyspepsia—"For twelve years I was dyspeptic and broken in health, had terrible pains in my back and was unable to work. When I took three bottles of Hood's Sarsaparilla I recovered my health. I always recommend it." J. B. MANOR, 262 8th Street, Oswego, N. Y.

GEN. BULLER REPORTED ADVANCING ON BIGGARSBERG AGAINST BOERS

Hutton's Mounted Infantry and Part of French's Cavalry Crossed the Zand River on Tuesday Afternoon.

THE BRITISH ADVANCE ROLLS STEADILY ONWARD.

Preparations Being Made in Washington for a Demonstration in Honor of Transvaal Peace Commission—Powell Worsted in Skirmish at Mafeking.

Cape Town, May 9.—It is reported that Gen. Buller is advancing on Biggarsberg and that the Boers are withdrawing.

London, May 10.—A despatch to the Morning Post from Ladysmith dated Wednesday says—Gen. Buller has issued a proclamation to both Dutch residents and burghers who are willing to surrender, notifying them that he will recommend all who now surrender voluntarily for greater clemency than those who surrender fighting after this warning.

London, May 10.—A despatch to the Times from Smaldeal dated Tuesday, May 9, says—Lord Roberts has ordered the repair of the railway and to allow time for the cavalry now returning from Theba N'Chu to take their place designed for them in the original plan of advance.

Gen. Hamilton last week was continually in touch with Gen. Botha's rear guard. The enemy managed four guns skillfully to check Gen. Hamilton's advance. On one occasion they masked their position so well as to jeopardize the British convoy, which was saved by the arrival of the Highland brigade with naval guns. The advance on Winburg was so rapid, that Hamilton's advance scouts were overlapping the town before Botha's transports were clear, but owing to difficulties at the drift the guns arrived too late to effect the convoy's capture. While the British captain, Balfour, was negotiating with the Landrost for the surrender of Winburg, Gen. Botha, misunderstanding the envoy's language, threatened to shoot him, but the Landrost, rightly interpreting the words, and perceiving that the British were in a position to bombard the town, decided to surrender. Gen. Botha then retired. The town contains a large stock of ammunition and grain. It is impossible to say whether the Boers will dispute the passage of the Zand River seriously, but it is known that Botha has ten guns in Hamilton's, and that Gen. Delany has six in front of the main advance.

London, May 10, 4.15 p.m.—General Hutton's mounted infantry brigade, including the Canadians, with a part of Gen. French's cavalry, crossed the Zand River Tuesday, and began to work its way cautiously along the railway northward in the track of the Boers. About 5,000 horses were probably engaged in this advance. Gen. Hutton, before he was joined by a part of Gen. French's force had a sharp fight. This was on Monday, when he reached the river and saw the Boers at the other side, and pressed forward intending to cross and capture them.

The Boers, however, opened fire with from high to low guns, gaining the river above and below, warningly in thousands and sought to envelop the British. Gen. Hutton fell back several miles, the Boers following until other British cavalry reinforced Hutton. During the night the Boers retreated, not further contesting the crossing. Lord Roberts, according to one correspondent, left Smaldeal on Monday to consult one of the Hamiltons, 15 miles distant. The Boers' attack on Gen. Hutton does not indicate any such panicky condition as has been alleged to exist among them. Nevertheless the British advance rolls on steadily. Gen. Broadwood and Gen. Bruce Hamilton have penetrated 18 miles beyond Winburg. According to Boer advice sharp skirmishes are of daily occurrence and there was a brisk rifle engagement outside Winburg on Saturday. From Boer sources comes also the report that a skirmish outside of Mafeking on May 5th Col. Baden-Powell was slightly worsted.

London, May 9.—The decisive battle of the war is at hand. Both British and Boer are gathering strength for a great effort. Drawn up across the Free State from Smaldeal, a distance of 30 miles, are fifty thousand men under Roberts, including fully 20,000 mounted troops. In front of this force is the Tugela of the Orange Free State—the river Zand backed by long rocky ridges and dangerous defiles. Upon Vanderburg which touches the railway, rests the Boer right, upon Senekal forty miles to the southeast is their left. The whole Boer line stretches over country peculiarly adapted to the war methods of the burghers. It will be turned by Lord Roberts as other positions have been turned, but not one position so easily if indications are to be relied upon. The British Commander-in-Chief has ample men to envelop both Boer flanks. If need be, but if these flanks are strongly held the task may be a formidable one. Of one thing it is certain that the next move of the British army will place within measurable distance the junction of the armies of the Free State and Natal. Once let the line of the Zand be carried and the passes through which a portion of Buller's army can advance, will be cleared and a new factor will be introduced into the campaign. The danger of a counter move must not, however, be overlooked for should the Natal force leave that colony insufficiently guarded, the Boers to the north might reinstate the southern portion and thus render Buller's move abortive.

The operations north of Kimberley, though obscure, are evidently connected with the relief of Mafeking. It is quite possible that Hunter's movements around Warrenton and Winderton are merely a feint to cover the advance of a column which may already have started to relieve Baden-Powell. Be this as it may there is urgent need for haste for it is now clear that the garrison, which has held out so tenaciously for 200 days in its straits and scarcely in a position to resist an overwhelming attack such as the Boers appear to be preparing.

TO HONOR THE BOERS.

Big Reception in Washington to the Peace Delegates.
Washington, May 9.—A meeting was held last night at the house of Congressman Sulzer to arrange for the reception of the Boer peace envoys, now on their way to the United States from Holland. The meeting included a number of senators and representatives as well as Washingtonians. It was decided that the Boer delegation should be accorded a reception similar to those tendered Lafayette, Kosuth, and Parnell. A big demonstration is to be organized in their honor. The Grand Opera House has been secured for Sunday, May 14, and public addresses of a non-partisan nature will be delivered by prominent men.

BOERS IN FORCE AT THE ZAND.

General Hutton Makes a Reconnaissance Towards the River.
London, May 9.—The War Office has issued the following despatch from Lord Roberts, dated Smaldeal, May 8th—“General Hutton, with mounted infantry, reconnoitered yesterday to the Zand River, and found the enemy in considerable force. General Broadwood's brigade of cavalry, with General Ian Hamilton's force, performed the same operation, with much the same result.

“General Hunter reports that he occupied Fourteen Streams yesterday without opposition, owing in a great measure to the able disposition made by General Paget on the left bank of the Vaal River at Warrenton, where his artillery fire rendered the enemy's position practically untenable. A 6-inch gun was found most useful. Within the 4th and half of the artillery the enemy retired precipitately, abandoning their clothing, ammunition and personal effects.

OBJECT OF LORD ROBERTS.

He is Endeavoring to Force the Boers to Concentrate in Front of Him.
London, May 9.—The Times says—Lord Roberts is apparently bent on forcing the Boers to concentrate on his front, rather than to attempt to cut them off in detail. He may have recognized that the nature of the country and the facility with which the commandos melt away when a net is being drawn around them. Lady Smith has heard that the country around Van Heeman's Pass has been found clear of the Boers. This may indicate that view of our steady advance into the Free State the Drakensberg passes no longer offer the Boers an alluring line of retreat. They will probably prefer to make their way by Laing's Nek direct into the Transvaal when pressure begins to be applied from Ladysmith.

BRITISH REACH THE ZAND.

Boers All Lagged in Unknown Force to the North.
London, May 9.—Correspondents are now wiring freely concerning the incidents connected with the occupation of Smaldeal. Some exasperation is expressed at the ease with which the Boers escape with their troops before the very eyes of the British. When the British advance Smaldeal the Boer ox-wagons coolly outnumbered only five miles away.

General Hamilton has moved ten miles north of Winburg. He keeps in touch with headquarters through Gen. Tucker, who is midway between General Roberts and General Hamilton.

The rumored plot to assassinate Lord Roberts has no apparent foundation beyond the fact that the movements of certain German desperadoes in the pay of the Boers, who made a vain attempt to enlist in London shortly before the Field Marshal sailed for South Africa, created some suspicion.

There are some indications that Gen. Buller will shortly move in Natal. It is stated that cavalry reconnaissances have shown that the country as far west as Van Heeman's Pass is free of Boers. A despatch from Ladysmith records a general movement by General Buller's army Monday, in consequence of rumors of an impending attack on Blandelsburg. No engagement resulted, but the activity seems to have stirred the Boers, who subsequently sent out scouts in all directions to learn the significance of the movement.

One of these patrols nearly surrounded the British at the Hamaelburg colliery, but hastily retreated after an exchange of shots, losing one man.

CARRINGTON IS EXPECTED.

A Camp Being Prepared at Bulawayo for His Troops.

Bulawayo, April 29.—General Carrington is expected here shortly, and a camp is being prepared for his force. The action of the Government in commandeering all the mail contractors' mules is causing a serious dislocation of the mail service between here and Salisbury. The Delra Railway is at present monopolized by the military authorities, and mining supplies cannot get through. Prices here are rapidly rising, and should Mafeking be relieved there would be great difficulty in furnishing any supplies to the garrison.

FRENCH REACHES SMALDEAL.

Report that the Boers are Retreating from the Zand.

Smaldeal, May 8.—It is reported that the Federals are leaving the Zand river, and it is variously stated that they are retreating toward the Vaal, and are taking up their position at Boshrand, south of Kroonstad.

Large number of burghers have come in and delivered their weapons and horses to the British. They affirm that there is a bitter quarrel between the Free State and Transvaal, which is likely to end in the speedy surrender of the former. General French has arrived here.

HOW BOERS USE KAFFIRS.

They Hide Behind Them While Advancing to Attack.

London, May 8.—The Rev. M. F. Crawford, a Wesleyan chaplain with the British forces in South Africa, in the course of a series of notes, thrown many interesting sidelights on the Boer character. “It has,” he says, “been my privilege to spend many hours with the wounded heroes of Slingersfontein and Hekirika Farm, and on the testimony of at least a dozen of these men, who had never seen one another since the fight, who had occupied different positions on the battlefield, it has to be recorded that the Boers flit over the hill hundreds of armed Kaffirs, they creep under cover of their hands and knees under cover of this living moving wall. I measure my responsibility in making this statement. I warned the men who gave it me of the terrible charge they were bringing, but all, without exception, asserted it, and they saw the Kaffirs, spoke to them, and shot them dead in scores and hundreds. This organized piece of savagery is one for which the Boer army must take the responsibility.”

PRaise FOR COL. KEKEWICH.

Lord Roberts' Tribute to the Defender of Kimberley.

London, May 8.—The Gazette this evening contains a despatch from Lord Roberts, enclosing Col. Kekewich's report on the operations at Kimberley. Lord Roberts pays his tribute to the tact, judgment and resolution of Col. Kekewich and his forces, and adds that Mr. Cecil Rhodes, the Mayor, and other citizens rendered the most valuable assistance in helping to maintain order among the civil inhabitants, encouraging them to hold out, attending to the sick and wounded, and generally co-operating with the military commander. He also says—“By the active part which he took in raising the Kimberley Light Horse and providing horses for all the mounted troops at Kimberley, Mr. Rhodes, in particular, contributing materially to the successful defence of the place.” Col. Kekewich also paid a tribute to Mr. Rhodes and his anxious work.

SYMPATHY, BUT NOT HELP.

That is What the Boer Peace Delegation Will Find at Washington.

Washington, D.C., May 9.—The Boer peace commission will be received in an unofficial capacity as citizens of the Transvaal, just as Montagu White has been received, and be treated with politeness. The Secretary of State will hear any appeal it has to make, but he will be compelled to tell it that the Government of the United States is powerless to interfere in behalf of the two South African republics, for the same reasons and on the same grounds that have already been given by the European powers. No matter how much sympathy there may be for the South African republics, they involve makes mediation impossible. The Boer delegation is fully aware of the position of the United States and knows that it can do nothing here but to await the outcome of the negotiations between the two South African republics and the Government of the United States.

A lady clerk of a Hamilton law office while going to the bank with her cheque, which she carried in her hand, met a gust of wind which blew the precious papers down the street. All were recovered but one which went over a slane.

CROWN OF THE MILWAUKEE.

Officers of the Vessel Tell of the Trip to St. Helena.

May 9.—Captain Webster, of the Milwaukee, who has just arrived here from South Africa, after conveying Cronje and his men to their prison at St. Helena, says the prisoners would have given but little trouble had it not been for Schiel, who kept stirring them up and was continually planning escape. Getting some of the others to help him, he made one bold attempt just on arriving at St. Helena. A Dutch man-of-war steamed near the Milwaukee, and it was said she was going in to St. Helena for coal. In the night Col. Schiel and his accomplices attempted to lower boats, intending to get on board the Dutch ship, probably with Cronje. They were discovered, however, in time, and the Niobe soon forced the foreigners to make herself scarce.

As a rule, the prisoners were well behaved. They sang hymns at the top of their voices continually, day and night, until it grew somewhat wearisome as all hands on board were kept awake. They reached St. Helena on the 10th and the Milwaukee left on the 10th of April for Halifax.

R. R. Williamson, first engineer of the Milwaukee, speaking of Cronje, said he seemed to be brooding deeply when alone. Commander Cronje, looking over the side of the Milwaukee and seeing the four-funnelled warship Niobe right alongside, with watches set, was heard to remark, “We are firmly held.”

One Sunday evening, said Captain Webster, Cronje came into my room, and of course I made him welcome. Noticing a photograph on my dressing case, he asked me to play him a selection, and I put on “God Save Queen.” He raised a large number of his men to do justice to England's Sovereign.

PLUMER'S CHANCES SLIGHT.

Bulawayo, April 29.—Colonel Plumer is still at Sillituli Camp. He has been reinforced by 100 men from Fort Salisbury but in view of the relative smallness of his force, and his want of artillery, his chances of relieving Mafeking are small, especially as the besiegers were recently largely reinforced.

CANADIANS MISSING.

London, May 9.—It has been reported to the War Office that Pte. W. Cooper of the 4th St. John Fusiliers, Pte. W. McIntosh, Royal Canadian Artillery, of J Company, Royal Canadian Regiment of Infantry; Pte. George Keswick, 3rd Northumberland Battalion, G Company, and Pte. S. Tester, Second Regiment Royal Canadian Artillery, both of H Company, have been missing from Bloemfontein since April 30.

APPEAL TO MCKINLEY.

The Hague, May 9.—The Netherlands Peace Society has addressed an appeal to President McKinley begging him to further the peaceful object of the Boer mission, to investigate their case, to bring about arbitration and put a stop to the pernicious war in South Africa.

NO RISK OF A QUARREL.

London, May 9.—The Standard, in an editorial predicting that the Boer peace delegation will achieve nothing in the United States, says—“Even in the excitement of a Presidential election, the American people are not likely to go to dangerous lengths, or to do anything which would commit their administration to an unwarranted quarrel with Great Britain. If the Old World is expected to keep its hands off the New World, the obligation is reciprocal; and it is quite inconceivable that the American people would engage in such colossal folly as a crusade in favour of the Boers.”

HUMILIATION OF MAJUBA HILL.

Not Yet Effaced, Says Lord Salisbury. Gordon Has Been Avenged. Gladstone as a Wrecker of Parties.

Lord Salisbury, who presided, commented on the remarkable change which had taken place in the latter half of the century in the views of the people regarding the Empire. They had formerly repelled it as a burden, and that doctrine had been carried to such extremes by a man of splendid genius—Gladstone—that it had produced a strong reaction, which started after the disaster of Majuba hill and the death of General Gordon. The death of Gordon had been avenged. Perhaps it was too soon to say the greatest humiliation of Majuba had been effaced or that the great wrong had been righted, but he felt they were on the road to accomplish that end. Under the brilliant guidance of Lord Roberts 200,000 soldiers, a larger army than had ever before been sent across the same expanse of sea, were now engaged in reducing to obedience to the Queen those territories which ought never to have been released, and to restoring to South Africa the only chance it had of peace, development, and tranquility.

The Premier referred to the difficulty and intricate Irish problem, and said: “Mr. Gladstone, in an evil moment for the fame of the country and for his party, attached himself to the idea of the separation of England and Ireland. There had been a long struggle, but no one can say the Home Rule cause presents any elements of genuine anticipation for the future. It might be said that the Irish idea would be realized, and that Mr. Gladstone's aspirations would be fulfilled. But I do not believe that the causes which have once been well beaten have re-appeared to any purpose in English history. Apart, however, from the fate of former struggles I am still assured that there is no hope of the predominant partner ever consenting to give Ireland practical independence. We have learned something from the South African War; how a disloyal Government, in spite of warnings, could accumulate armaments against the most powerful combatant, and thus secure a terrible advantage. We now know better than we did ten years ago what a risk it would be if we gave a disloyal Government in Ireland the power of accumulating forces against this country.”

WILL GERMANS SNAP UP HOLLAND?

Frederic Harrison Says That Within Ten Years the Kaiser Will Declare a Protectorate Over the Country.

London, May 9.—Speaking at New Hall, Fetter Lane, E.C., on “The Future of small States,” Mr. Frederic Harrison said he could not resist the conclusion that within the next decade Germany would assert a protectorate over Holland, and the Emperor William would realize Napoleon's threat that he would “hold Antwerp like a pistol at the mouth of the Thames.” By drawing the dykes further inland Germany could produce on the Dutch coast a series of harbors rivaling Constantinople in amplitude and impregnability. France would probably at the same time assert a paramountcy over Belgium, whose independence England, by the campaign against the South African Republics, had lost the right and the power to maintain. England might face the serious danger to her commercial and naval supremacy by the familiar expedient of doubling the fleet, but he doubted if the Empire would stand the strain. “When the Jingles see all the harbors on the other side of the Channel filled with German or French men-of-war they may possibly be brought to their senses.” The speaker obviously assumed that the annexation by England of the South African Republics was a foregone conclusion.

London, May 9.—The annual grand habitation of the Primrose League was held in Albert Hall this afternoon. Professor E. Beely, on the occasion, thought that Holland was in less danger of absorption now than she was in 1871. It was more likely that several tottering States would break into their original fragments than that existing Empires would materially enlarge their boundaries. It seemed almost inevitable that the disruption of the Austrian Empire and of the Italian Empire as well would follow close upon Emperor Joseph's death. The South Germans are bitterly hostile to the North Germans, and Bismarck never ceased to fear that the Empire he had created “by blood and iron” might be dissolved more quickly than he believed that within forty years there would be seen many small and independent nationalities springing up in the place of several existing Empires. Small States he considered model States in this respect—that they could not make war if they would, and would not if they could. London, May 9.—The annual grand habitation of the Primrose League was held in Albert Hall this afternoon.

CUBAN SOLDIERS CLAIM $1,500,000.

Five Thousand Militia Men Employ a Lawyer to Prosecute Their Claim Against the American Government.

New York, May 9.—John C. Judge, a lawyer, of Brooklyn, has been retained by about five thousand militia men who served in the Spanish-American war to secure for them pay for their services from the State in addition to the regular pay they received from the Federal Government. He has brought a test case in the Courts of Claims at Albany, which will be argued May 15. Among his clients are members of Troop C, the Thirtieth, Fourteenth and forty-seventh Regiments of Brooklyn, and the Eighth and Twenty-second Regiments of Manhattan. Mr. Judge asserts that every soldier will be worth close upon $50,000. In spite of this he works every day at his office in Wall street and for recreation plays golf and polo. He is married and is a member of several of the smart clubs. During the present century the Gould fortune will be pretty well cut up, and there the many heirs, the richest of whom will be the Kingdom Gould, George Gould's eldest. ## Morning Times

LET'S HAVE IT!

The Board of Trade, Veterans Association and 5th Battalion intend holding a mammoth demonstration on Her Majesty's birthday, and on behalf of the Battalion as has already been announced, Major Miller addressed the council in support of a grant towards the enterprise. The amount asked for is not large and as Peterborough has never made as a rule, any pretensions to demonstrations on the anniversaries of our beloved Queen, and as her years of life are now few we cannot advocate a more commendable purpose. Several of our representative citizens supported Major Miller's petition and there is no doubt but the citizens of Peterborough as a whole, will concur in the favoring of a liberal grant to the committee. The success of a big celebration will be a fitting testimony of our loyalty and devotion to the world's great monarch and to the memory of our devoted ones who gave up all that was dear to them here to share the horrors and glories of a soldier's life in defending the life and liberty of the motherland in South Africa where the greatest tyranny and oppression prevailed. The presentation of such a demonstration as has been proposed would serve to keep many citizens at home who would go elsewhere in quest of celebrating the anniversary of Our Queen and would be the means of attracting a large influence of people from the neighboring villages and surrounding country which would insure the return of the money granted to the purpose referred to. Although the limit of time for the preparations is short, by a systematic co-operation on the part of the committee and all others interested the celebration can be made a big success. By all means let us have an opportunity of displaying our patriotic sentiments at home on the 24th.

NOTES AND COMMENTS.

One of our little local contemporaries printed a statement a few days ago to the effect that apparition in the London pool lived 52 years without taking a drop of water. This great family journal does not regard this as much of a feat. We can name several citizens who would know the taste of water.

There is no prattler about the serious features about the fact that the growth of golf has increased tramps in the country.

Mr. Kendry, who will be the Conservative Candidate again, says that the party will make a grand stand when the elections are on. This G. F. J. would like to know if they propose to use the old platform lumber for the purpose.

A Little Known Postal Rule

One of the regulations of the Post Office Department, and one which is not generally known, and consequently not frequently taken advantage of by the public, is the special delivery in cities. All that is required to use the service is the placing of a special delivery stamp on the envelope, these stamps being obtainable at any post office for ten cents. The postmaster receiving all such letters places them on the top of the registered letter package and they are sent in the regular way. At the place of delivery the postmaster is required, according to postal regulations, to receive first from the incoming mails the registered letters, no matter what time of the day or night it may be, then if there is a special delivery letter on the package it is immediately delivered by a special messenger. It will be seen that this is a very convenient and valuable service, and would often be the means of saving an additional expenditure by telephoning or telegraphing.

No Twin Husbands for Him
A clergyman walking on the outskirts of his parish one day found one of his parishioners whitewashed his cottage. Pleased at this novel manifestation of the virtue that as next to godliness he complimented the man on his desire for business. With a mysterious air the worker descended from his ladder and approached the fence said, "That's not exactly the reason why I'm doing this, it's your worship. The last two couples as lived here had twins, so I see to my misfortune, 'I'll take and whitewash the place so there mayn't be no infection.' You see sir, as how we've got 10 of 'em already."

ROYAL NAMES A HOODOO.

One of the strongest superstitions of the English Navy.
One of the very strongest and most inextinguishable of all superstitions in the royal navy, a superstition that is almost as strong today as ever it was, is that vessels bearing the names of royal personages are doomed to ill luck, and, strange as it may seem, there is an undeniable historic basis for this feeling. Some of the most terrible disasters ever known in connection with our navy have concerned war vessels with royal names. Two vessels called the Royal James came to disastrous ends. One of them exploded, and some 800 officers and seamen perished. The other ship so named was actually carried out of the mouth of the Thames by the Dutch Admiral de Ruyter under circumstances disgraceful to those in charge of the craft.

Then there is the forever memorable disaster to the Royal George, an unlucky ship previously, that turned over and sank in eight of crowds at Spithead, over 1,000 souls, among whom were 300 women, being sacrificed. And second only to this hideous disaster is that which afterward befell the Royal Charlotte, which, after a career of much vicissitude, was consumed by fire off Leghorn, over 800 of the very flower of the navy perishing with her.

When in 1893 the Victoria, a new vessel and the very triumph of modern invention so far as naval architecture went, was rammed and sank at once in sight of the whole fleet and when hundreds of lives were lost, there was not a sailor, however matter of fact he might be, who did not remember the dire fate of the royally named craft. These instances are only the greater ones. A score of smaller ones are recalled off by every royal navy man.—Tit-Bits.

On the town council's threatening to acquire the land needed by condemnation the countess had all the old trees cut down.

THE COLORADO COPPER MINING COMPANY

LOCATION OF OUR MINES

THE COLORADO COPPER MINING COMPANY is fortunate in being the possessor of the most valuable copper property in the great Republic, the principal copper producing region of this portion of the Rockies. All of our claims have been more or less developed, and in the past have been a paying basis for much of the copper produced in the West.
Our company owns, clear of all liens, the following claims: The Sedalia Extension, the Sedalia Extension No. 2, which property adjoins the great Sedalia mine, which has been a paying producer for upwards of seven years; the Copper Queen of Sedalia, which immediately adjoins the above; the Copper Queen of Sedalia, a very promising property, only a few miles from the above in Sedalia. This claim occupies an important position on a mountain just north of the city, and last, but by no means least, the Butte claim, located two miles east of Sedalia, at Copper Station, on the main trunk line of the great Denver & Rio Grande Railroad, and also on the Arkansas River, which in length is one of America's greatest streams.

A HORRIBLE REVENGE

HOW A PORTUGUESE COOK, ON BOARD A BRITISH SHIP,

Got Even With Two Petty Officers Who Had Persecuted Him—Cut Off Their Heads and Served Them for Dinner.

The following story of most terrible revenge for a series of petty insults and injuries is told by a writer in the Chicago Times-Herald:

In 1886 Her Britannic Majesty's frigate Vernon, 50 guns, Capt. Travers Boothby, was cruising on detached duty in the Mediterranean. She carried an average crew of healthy, hearty sailors, and in the ship's company was a chief cook, Carlos Ebrantes—the only Portuguese aboard. He was a Portuguese, 30 years old, a giant in stature, with a magnificent beard and in the prime of manhood. They had picked him up two years before when the Vernon was commissioned for her cruise, and he had made himself a general favorite with all on board save two men. These two,
Ed Hedges, a boatswain's mate, and David Allen, another petty officer, did their utmost by a series of petty persecutions to make life miserable for the "Portuguese." They spoiled his dishes whenever they could, insulted his nationality and made him the subject of every ribald jest their foul minds could suggest, seemingly finding the greatest amusement in the terrible fits of temper they aroused.

THE CAPTAIN'S DINNER.

One evening the Vernon was heading her way toward the English Channel, and later in the day she dropped anchor off the coast of Jersey. On the same day Ebrantes encountered his persecutors on the deck. One of them tripped him up against his galley door, the other kicked him as he fell. The cook said nothing. That evening the Captain gave a dinner party to the governor of Jersey and his staff, and the captain of the sloop of war Petrel.

Orders had been issued that caused Ebrantes and his assistants to prepare themselves in the preparation of the menu. It was the day of the old-fashioned dish cover. A Thomas in use on the Vernon were ponderous silver affairs, with carved handles, and the ship's name and royal arms engraved on the top, and etiquette demanded that at a formal dinner the dishes be brought on and placed before the captain, who himself uncovered the contents of each platter to his guests.

SERVED UP HIS ENEMIES' HEADS.

After he had superintended the preparation of the principal meat dishes and only waited for the formal order to "serve" Ebrantes sent his assistants out of the galley. Bound and gagged in two great flour bins where he had previously secreted them were Allen and Hedges. When the kitchen was closed he opened up the two bins and glared steadily at the two enemies. Both thought that, after taking this light revenge, he was about to let them go. But they were mistaken. Working himself into a frenzy of rage, he picked up a meat hatchet, and before they could attempt to struggle had felled both of them like oxen with the blunt side of it.

Over what must of followed in the next 10 minutes it is not pleasant to dwell, but at the end of that time, when the assistants were admitted back into the galley, Ebrantes stood there smiling and as calm as ever.
He told them he had been preparing the place of resistance in secret, and gave orders for the immediate delivery of the first platter to the impatient captain and his guests. A young lad, proud of the honor, carried it in through the covered way sately and walking round the long mess table placed it at the head before the skipper and waited at attention for the removal of the cover.

Lifting his hat briskly with a smile of anticipation at his guests, Capt.
Boothby drew off the cover—and startled back in horror. On the dish alaring at him with terrified and wide-open eyes, were the ghastly heads of his two petty officers.

PENAL SERVITUDE FOR LIFE.

The dinner party broke up hastily.
A guard was summoned to search for the murderer, but the marines had no need to hunt very far. Seated on one of the flour bins, above the headless bodies of his victims were Ebrantes, singing a Portuguese song.
Taken before the captain and accused of the crime, however, his demeanor changed. With quivering lips and panting on gony and hatred in his voice he poured out a tale of bitter persecution, insults and injuries. His story was substantiated willingly enough by dozens aboard the ship, including both officers and men. It was this testimony that saved him from a yard arm shrift and subsequently caused the court-martial that tried him to send him to Australia in penal servitude for life, instead of condemning him to death. The words "hang on in anger" were placed against his name in the prison records; he became a mere number ticketed and put away from the rest of the world.

One day in 1885 I walked through the corridors of the big convict prison in Fermantle, Western Australia. Bagging to the bright morning sunshine and talking soothingly to a battered yellow-topped cockatoo was an old, mild-mannered man with snow white hair and beard. He was carving a model of a ship out of a section of mallee root with a big jack knife.

"Good morning; you never tire of coming here to see us, senior."
"What ship is it you are modeling?"
"Why, a British vessel. When I finish it every spar will be thus and thus —a perfect model. I know every stick and bolt. It is said to be the best collector of customs down in the port.
A beautiful day it is. See my old cockatoo? Yesterday he cut his foot on glass. I bind it up last night, and today he hops about like a new boy again. Don't you, Jack? Some cuts so quickly they heal; others, not so."

It was Carlos Abrantes.

THE BEST NEWS YET!

TROUT LAKE CITY, B. C., APRIL 20, 1900.

"Your letter came while I was out, and I note what you say financially and otherwise, and
certainly feel much interested in the property and more confident of the outcome than ever since my last explorations. I have men at work inside tunnel at $12 per foot and no stated amount of work.
I will enclose a penciling showing how we are doing the work and give my reasons for the same.
We traced two leads down by the end of Crosscut, of fine appearance (see diagram). Mr. Pettipiece was up to see the property and remained over night. I also had Mr. Shannon, the Geologist, up with me to confer with in reference to the property and the way it should be developed and so on.
He will give his opinions through the columns of the "Eagle." He is a very conscientious and careful man and slow to advance ideas without proof. I asked him what he thought of my plan of development. He carefully looked the situation over inside and out and stated it was the best. He said in reference to the property that "it was one that merited an outlay of money and one no one should be afraid to invest in." He mentioned that in many respects it resembled the "Silver Cup."
We will encounter lead No. 2 I think by May 1st, and I am very sanguine we will have Ore at over 100 feet deep. We will have to drive 100 feet to get No. 3 lead. Now if your company can stand
the expense of 100 feet of work at this time it certainly would be wise to do so, for we know at least something of the merits of No. 3. When we get the Main Ore Body located we then are made.
It is there and I hope soon to be able to report having it. The conditions have never looked better than now.

J. W. Westfall.

Copies of the "Eagle" can be had on application. The work is being vigorously continued and we hope soon to be able to report having struck the Ore Body. Matters were never better for us than now and if you want a good investment get our shares while there is time.

His "Dear Old Jim."
"Corbett is my friend and benefactor," says Mr. Jeffries. "I was once his sparring partner, and he treated me as a gentleman. Hence I have gladly agreed to fight him as a return for favors. I am bound by all the ties of friendship and gratitude to give him a chance to fight me." Was there ever such a touching instance of devotion? Mr. Jeffries will reward his old patron and benefactor by beating him into pulp and knocking his head off.

One can fancy him saying, as he puts his terrible right into his friend's ribs,

APPEAL DISMISSED.

The Government's Appeal in the Case of Queen vs. Turner Dismissed.

The case in which Mr. Justice Armour took action against the Government's valuation of his property, which attracted considerable attention when the case was tried here at the session of the Exchequer Court, came up before the supreme court yesterday. The Government appealed from the award made by the valuator of Mr. Justice Armour's property in Ashburnham through which the Trent Canal runs. The case was tried before Mr. Justice Burridge, who awarded for the lands taken the sum of $3,908, and for damages done to the adjoining lands the sum of $10,250. From that judgment the Crown appealed to the Supreme Court; the Government tendering $6,800, while the Court of Exchequer allowed $14,150, besides interest until paid.

The London Illustrated News of May 12th contains a number of portraits of officers who have rendered gallant service for their empire in South Africa. Among these is Captain A. H. Macdonnell, a brother of Mrs. L. M. Hayes, Esq. In the write-up in connection with the picture, the London Illustrated News says:—"Captain Archibald H. Macdonnell, of the Royal Canadian Regiment of Infantry, whose portrait is now printed, is one of the First Contingent that left 'Our Lady of the Snows' for service in the field under the semi-tropical skies of South Africa. Captain Macdonnell, who was present at the bloody battle of Paardeberg, had a special mention in the despatches sent by Col. Oller to the Canadian Government, for his service at the engagement in which the Canadian Regiment played so prominent a part, and whose determined attack brought the long combat at Paardeberg to a close."

Large French Canadian Families

Le Soleil, a newspaper published in Quebec, which a few days ago told of the marriage of a Montreal widower with a family of 13 to a widow of 11 olive branches, now goes itself one better and gives the story of the marriage of several years ago of Louis Lemieux, of St. Henri de Lauzon, father of 13 children, to Mme. Perilland, Letourneau, mother of 12, both well-to-do people.

L. N. Carrier, registrar, Laval says: "I was the notary and friend of these two worthy families, and at the wedding dinner I saw the 24 children seated at the bridal table, and happy at being united in one family. All remained together under the parental roof for some years, and never was the peace and harmony of this patriarchal dwelling disturbed by troubles between parents or children." He tells how one by one the 24 children married, to create other families, and to day the old couple live in comfort and respect in the village of St. Henri. Why marry marriage is a failure, or that courage is a lost or failing virtue?

MEAT OR CEREAL.

A Question of Interest to All Careful Persons. The arguments on food are interesting. Many persons adopt a vegetarian diet on the ground that they do not like to feel that life has been taken to feed them, nor do they fancy the thought of eating dead meat.

On the other hand, too great consumption of partly cooked, starchy oats and wheat, or bread, pastry, etc., produce serious bowel troubles, because the bowel digests organic (where starch should be digested), are overtaxed and the food ferments, producing gas, and microbes generate in the decayed food, frequently bringing on paritosis and appendicitis.

Starchy food is absolutely essential to the human body. Its best form is shown in the food "Grape-Nuts," where the starch is changed into grape-sugar during the process of its manufacture. In this way, the required food is presented to the system in a pre-digested form and is immediately made into blood and tissue, without taxing the digestive organs.

A remarkable result in nourishment is gained; the person using Grape-Nuts gains quickly in physical and mental strength. Why far better than because the food contains delicate particles of phosphate of Potash obtained from the grains. This unites with the albumen of all food and the combination is what nature uses to rebuild worn out cells in the brain. This is a scientific fact that can be easily proven by the days' use of Grape-Nuts. Never eat beyond three or four heaping teaspoons at a meal.

THE TIMES LETTER BOX

Letters from the People on Interesting Topics.

(NOTE.—The Times does not hold itself in any way responsible for the opinions expressed by its correspondents.—Ed. Times.)

The Town Law suits.

Editor Morning Times: Sir, The town has a couple of three lawsuits on hand, with a good prospect several more before long. Would it not be a wise move on behalf of the Council to try and effect a compromise? Past experience should be a warning to us to keep out of law, if at all possible. I have been told that the Sherwood suit can be settled very easily, and no doubt the others can also be arranged on payment of a reasonable sum.

I would like to know Mr. Editor if an effort has been made to effect a settlement in the Sherwood and Corkery cases? If not, why not?

RATEPAYERS.

Ans.—We understand that no proposal, ment in the Sherwood and Corkery cases? been made in the cases referred to.

Narrow Streets.

Editor Morning Times: Sir,—I see there is general demand being made on the council to place the new walks outside the line of trees, which of course narrows the streets very much.

Now Sir, as the Times is read by everybody, I beg to enter a protest through its columns, against this encroachment on our streets. Later on, when street rail ways are to be built there will be no room for one set of rails, let alone two pairs, which will be required when the town grows into a thriving and popular city. I may therefore let this nonsense be stopped at once.

A LOOK AHEAD.

Chief vs. Constable

Editor Morning Times: Dear Sir,—If it were not that I am in the same boat myself I would reply pretty strongly to the letter from "Engineer." Fancy any man who admits he does not know anything of the facts expressing an opinion in regard to them! However, perhaps he will say "you're another" so I won't say more on that score. But what I want to point out is just this. That every complaint I have come across against the Chief of Police is based on the idea that he is a little too particular in performing the duties of his office—not that he neglects them.

Surely this is significant, and suggestive, and if a fault it is on the safe side. Better by far have a man who does his duty regardless of politics or pull, or friendship than a mere tool who jumps as others pull the strings. I know a little about these both on this, and the other side of this line, and if "Engineer" knows

SALISBURY'S PRIMROSE SPEECH CAUSES ALARM!

Impression is That Apprehensions of the Premier
Are More Serious Than He Expected.

GENERALS BOTHA AND DEWET HAVE QUARRELED.

Predictions Are Freely Made That Lord Roberts Will Enter Kroonstad on Monday Next—Contingent of Strathcona Horse Disembarked at Liverpool Yesterday.

London, May 11, 4.05 a.m. Members of the House of Commons were freely betting in the lobby last evening that Lord Roberts would be in Pretoria in two months. The Ministerialists are are building confident hopes upon the comprehensive plans he has conveyed to the War Office. Predictions are definitely made that he will enter Kroonstad next Monday, and it is believed that his advance is probably already reconnoitering in the vicinity of Wenterburg, where the hilly country begins again. Beyond Kroonstad is an intricate and difficult country, and if the Boers should elect to fight, it is possible they could check the progress of the British until Lord Roberts' numerous cavalry had time to make around their flank and attack their rear. From 15,000 to 20,000 is the highest estimate of the Boers under the command of General Botha, and it is said to have 40 guns. General Botha and General Dewet are reported to have quarreled. Lord Roberts is pressing hard after this force with 55,000 men and 140 guns and 20,000 more men are easily available.

London, May 10. A contingent of Canadians belonging to Strathcona Horse were cheered as they disembarked to-day at Liverpool. They will sail from London for South Africa to-morrow by the British transport Anasaga.

London, May 11, 4.05 a.m. The alarmist tone of Lord Salisbury's Primrose League speech on Wednesday has been much discussed in the lobbies of Parliament, and the impression is that the apprehensions of the Premier are even more serious than he expected. His utterances are ascribed to the recent successes of the Nationalists in France, that of England being one of the weapons of the campaign. The revival of military glory, one of the ideals set up in France, is regarded as dangerous to England.

GOOD NEWS FROM MAKEKING. London, May 10.—The War Office has received from Lord Roberts a despatch dated Zand river, May 9, saying: "I have received a most cheery telegram from Baden-Powell, dated April 27."

RETREAT FROM LADYBRAND. British now hold the Free State from Winburg to that place. Thaba N'Chu, May 9.—The Boers have moved their headquarters in this district from Ladybrand to Clocoln. They occupy strong positions at Mantsing's Nek. The British, including General Buller, are scattered among a number of strategic points, securing the country south of the line from Winburg to Ladybrand.

RETREATING FROM FICKSBURG. Enemy fall back with Bethlehem upon Harrismith.

Maseru, May 9.—The Free Staters are moving in small parties, with their herds from Ficksburg to Bethlehem, on their way to Harrismith or the Vaal.

TRANSVAAL RAAD CLOSED. Government's Mining Proposals Rejected by the House.

Pretoria, May 9.—The request of the Government for permission to sell mining rights for prices which should be approved by the Government was rejected by the Raad by a vote of 12 to 9. The session is closed.

CANADIANS IN A TIGHT FIX. Hutton's Brigade Nearly Cornered While Trying to Capture a Convoy.

Smalheide, May 9.—Yesterday General Hutton attempted to seize a Boer convoy that was leaving the Zand River. He advanced toward the river with mounted infantry, including the Canadians. A long line of wagons was plainly visible. On becoming aware of General Hutton's approach the Boers stopped their retreat and opened fire with ten guns. They seemed to be in great force and threatened Hutton's flank.

Presently mounted Boers were seen crossing the dry bed of the river. They fired to the right and began to infiltrate the West Australians, while many of the British were hit by Boer shells. The position became serious. The Boers sent up reinforcements, placing the Australians in danger of being cut off. Thereupon General Hutton ordered a retreat to Weingalen, where he had his own camp. A portion of the force

THE GREAT EVANGELIST IN PETERBOROUGH. Big Gospel Campaign Opened Last Night at Murray Street Baptist Church.

EVANGELIST W. R. GIEL.

There was a very large attendance at the first of a series of meetings to be held in the Murray Street Baptist Church, where the great American Evangelist W. R. Giel will no doubt win the hearts of a great many people, and secure a goodly number of converts. Mr. Giel is of tall stature and possesses a voice of unusual volume, which it is a pleasure to hear. His subjects are exceedingly well presented and his style of oratory captivating.

Mr. Giel took for his subject last night "He that forsaketh his sins shall be saved, but he that procrastinates shall be lost." He dwelt upon the hypocrisy existing in the church, and exhorted his hearers to arrange themselves from that morbid drowsiness found in every congregation. To illustrate this, Mr. Giel related the story of his experience with two deacons whom he had requested to attend one of his meetings. Both protested. The one suffered from rheumatism, the other from lumbago, and it would never do for them to go out in the night or in damp air. Two or three nights later the fire bell rang out; a big fire was raging in the other end of their town. It was pouring rain, the first two whom he run into on reaching the scene were these two deacons. After a few timely words to the assembly, bearing on the illustration, he turned his hearers' attention to the experience of Jonah as a comparison to some of the Jonah self styled Christians. Christ had a mission for Jonah to do. Jonah said he would do it. Christ told him to go north-east, but Jonah would go south-west and pay his own fare. Jonah went south-west. He boarded a ship, he paid his fare. He went to sleep, the ship began to toss, the sailors prayed, the waves dashed over the boat, and it was feared that they would all be lost. The captain went down in the ship. He found Jonah sleeping. He shook him. Jonah woke up and demanded an explanation. He had paid his fare. The church member paid his pew rent. He could sleep if he wished; but what was the result with Jonah? Jonah was cast overboard. He fell with a splash, a great fish swallowed him. But Jonah was cast overboard, he opened his mouth and with a chuck landed Jonah upon the sand. As soon as Jonah gained his feet he put pell-mell for north-east—and Jonah saved Nineveh. The sleeping church member could save his soul. The people of the Church were responsible if the people of Peterborough were lost. It was their duty to see that they knew Christ was the Saviour of mankind, that they were serving Christ as they should. "You may think this a rather peculiar description of Jonah's version of his experience, but it was in the Bible, and if you would read it you would know," continued Mr. Giel. "Every one present seemed well pleased with the service. There will be a big attendance every night during his stay to the 20th. There will also be services to-day and to-morrow at 3 p.m., as well as at the regular hour each night. During his stay in town, Mr. Giel will be the guest of Miss Roberts, Bethuen street."

GET PREPARED FOR TROUBLE.

Lord Salisbury Points Out the Foreign Bitterness Against Great Britain.

London, May 10.—Lord Salisbury, continuing his speech at the Primrose League last night, said:

"Hereafter external affairs will occupy a considerable place among the problems we have to solve. Not necessarily because in themselves they are more important; but, if we look around we can see the elements and causes of menace and peril slowly accumulating, and they may accumulate to such a point as to require our earnest and most active efforts to repel them."

"I am nervous at using language of such a kind, lest it should be thought I am indicating that something is known to the Foreign Office, by pointing out this possible danger. But I wish most emphatically to say I have no idea of that kind. The state of affairs as I know it, and so far as the Government is concerned, is peaceful. It is impossible to speak too highly of the careful, calm neutrality which has been observed by all the Governments of the world."

The Premier's remarks were greeted with loud cheers.

Continuing, Lord Salisbury said: "A certain section of their subjects, I hope, a very large, though a very noisy one, has at the present moment a great prejudice against this country. It does not, however, follow that we have no precautions to take. Governments may come and go, and feelings may change from year to year. That root of bitterness against England, which I am unable to explain, may be mere caprice to satisfy the exigencies of journalists to-day, or it may indicate a deep-seated feeling, which, later, we may have to reckon with."

"There can be no security nor confidence in the feeling or sympathy of

Fight of Desperate Men When the British Force Invades Transvaal Territory.

London, May 10.—General Roberts with 50,000 men and 150 guns has crossed the Zand and has fallen upon the Boers so suddenly that they have been compelled to evacuate formidable positions fortified with much care and retreat hurriedly to the north. It begins to look as if Lord Roberts had inaugurated a Boer hunt from Bloemfontein to the Vaal, for try as they will, the enemy can make no effectual stand against him. Though drawn up along a front of twenty miles in a country offering exceptional advantages for a strenuous defence the enemy has evident again been outflanked by the superior numbers and longer front of the British force. For the first time since the campaign in the Free State began the British horses appear to be at clear quarters with the enemy, who are in full flight, with cavalry and mounted infantry pressing hotly in their rear. In all likelihood many prisoners, much baggage and numbers of guns will be captured ere the Boers are able to reach a place of safety. A heavy blow has been struck which will in all likelihood finish the campaign of the Free State from the alliance, for the constituents of President Steyn will hardly survive the capture of their second capital, Kroonstad, which Lord Roberts may enter at any moment. The British Commander-in-Chief has again given an illustration of those lightning-like unexpected blows which he, in common with Gen. French, have made common in the Free State and which have always met with such great success. The collapse of the Boer opposition south of Kroonstad, at the point where it was expected to be the strongest, comes as a surprise, and is a remarkable tribute to the generalship of Roberts and staff. From Kroonstad, which Roberts now has in the hollow of his hands, to the Vaal is less than a hundred miles. More than half the distance from Bloemfontein to the Transvaal border has been covered. The critical stage of the war is approaching, for when the Transvaal is invaded the Boers will fight the fight of desperate men.

With the force now under Roberts there are no less than 27,000 horsemen, or 20,000 mounted infantry and about 7,000 regular cavalry. With this formidable force backed by over 20,000 infantry, there is no wonder at the Boer defeat.

CROSSING THE ZAND. London, May 10.—Lord Roberts' reports to the War Office are as follows: "Cable cart headquarters at the front," May 10, 9.10 a.m.—"We are now across the Zand river. The enemy are still holding a strong position, but we are gradually pushing them back."

BOERS ARE IN FULL RETREAT. London, May 10.—4.55 p.m.—The War Office has received the following despatch from Lord Roberts:—"Cable Cart, Rand River, May 10.—The enemy are in full retreat. They occupied a position twenty miles in length. Ours was necessarily longer. With the widely-scattered force it will take some time to learn the casualties, but I am hopeful we have not suffered much. The cavalry and horse artillery are pursuing the Boers by three different roads."

TWO MAY WEDDINGS.

A Couple of Pretty Weddings—One on Wednesday and One Yesterday.

A pretty wedding took place at the residence of Mr. John Coombes, Lock St., when his daughter, Miss Maud, was united in marriage to Mr. James Goodwin, North Monaghan. Rev. Mr. Shorey tied the nuptial knot in the presence of about 40 guests. Miss Ida Mowry was bridesmaid and Mr. Henry Goodwin, brother of the groom, was groomsmen. Both bride and bridesmaid were prettily dressed and both carried bouquets of carnations. The presents were numerous and included an organ, a bed room suite and an arm chair given by the parents of the bride, a china tea set from Mr. Goodwin's class of young ladies in Charlotte street Sunday school, and a bed room suite from the groomsmen. The happy couple will take up their residence at 76 Westcott street.

The second wedding took place yesterday at the residence of Mr. William Hutton, 20 Bolivar street, when his daughter, Miss Lillian May, was married to Mr. Thomas A. Byrnell, B.C. The parlour in which the ceremony took place was handsomely decorated with flowers. The bride was charmingly attired in brown, with white satin and pearl trimming. Her bridesmaid was Miss Anna Hopkins and Miss Claud Hutchinson, who were each turned respectively in blue and pink. The groomsmen were Mr. William Hutchinson, Jr., brother of the bride, Rev. W. L. Armistage performed the ceremony at the conclusion of which the wedding dinner was served. Mr. and Mrs. Byrnell left on the afternoon express for Toronto, where they will take up residence at 242 Ossington avenue. The groom's gift to the bride was a handsome gold watch and chain, the latter being made of nuggets brought by him from the Klondyke. To the bridesmaid he presented gold stick pins.

The Constable Row.

It is an old saying that when thieves fall out honest men get their due. In the case of the little quarrel between County Constable Cochrane and Chief Constable Rossel, over which is to do the county work, and secure the rate of there should be something said. The Times is of opinion that any "profits" accruing to the work done by the town police force should go into the town treasury. This would settle the matter for good. Mr. Cochrane would never be interfered with.

Building Lots for Sale.

A number of superb building lots, beautifully situated in the town of Peterborough, for sale. This property belongs to the estate of the late Mr. John Tagney, and comprises lots No. 13 and 14, south of Macdonnell and west of George street, directly opposite the residence of Mr. T. Bradburn. The property is divided into nine building lots, which will be sold cheap, as the estate must be wound up. For further particulars apply to P. J. Tagney, John Trombley, Peterborough, or to S. Tagney, administrator, Lindsay.

DEATH OF MRS. E. H. D. HALL.

A Very Popular Lady Passes Away at Clifton Springs, N.Y.

The melancholy intelligence was received yesterday that Mrs. E. H. D. Hall had passed away at Clifton Springs, where she had gone in company with her husband, for the benefit of her health. The deceased lady had not been in good health for some time, and some months ago underwent an operation, which was partially successful. She was advised to try the baths at Clifton Springs, and the doctors there decided that another operation was necessary. This was performed a couple of weeks ago, and she progressed favourably for a few days, when heart trouble developed and her condition became serious. Despite all that was done for her by the most skillful physicians, she passed away as above.

Mrs. Hall's maiden name was Marybeth Ryan. She was the daughter of the late Thomas Ryan, of Clonaboe. Her mother is still living. The sisters living are Mrs. P. Morgan and Mrs. A. Nichols, of town. Mrs. Alex Hamilton, of Warren, Ont., and Mrs. H. Kimball, of Kansas. The brothers living are John Ryan, of town. Thomas Ryan, of Kansas, and Wm. Ryan, of Gladstone, Mich. Mr. Thomas Ryan is a half brother of the deceased and Mrs. (J. J.) M. A. Ryan is a half sister. She also leaves a husband and four sons to mourn her demise. Mrs. Hall was an estimable member of St. Paul's church. Quiet and unaffected, she was beloved by all who knew her. To the husband and family the sympathy of the whole community is extended.

The body arrived here last night, and the announcement of the funeral will appear in to-morrow's issue.

An Artistic Calendar.

The Imperial Bank of Canada has sent to this office one of their latest calendars, which is one of the most artistic and interesting yet published. The main feature of the lithographer's art represents a battlefield. On the foreground stands the lion with his paw upon the globe, which is surrounded by British flags. Beneath this, and under the calendar is printed a map of South Africa. Under that, on the left of the calendar, is the Red Cross, with information that subscriptions to the patriotic fund are received at any of the bank's branches; on the right, a poem by F. G. Scott of Quebec entitled "The Colors of the Flag."

The Orange Celebration.

Now that the Council has promised a grant of $125 to the 12th of July celebration, Oranagement will get to work. This sum will require to be largely supplemented by subscriptions from the merchants of the town and others. The certainty of ten or fifteen thousand strangers being brought to town should make it an object, so that liberal subscriptions will be given. We hope, therefore, that the committee appointed to collect funds will be liberally dealt with.

Morning Times

PETERBOROUGH, MAY 4, 1900

THE END NEAR.
For some time Lord Roberts has been the subject of severe criticism, but Lord Roberts has not been idle as these professional critics have intimated. "Dobe" is a man in whom Britains welfare in South Africa is safe. His prolonged advance "on to Pretoria" has given rise to a more hopeful feeling than has hitherto existed since the breaking out of hostilities and brings the end in sight. Numbers of military experts predict the accomplishment of reaching Pretoria on or before the 15th inst., but while this is improbable, there is little doubt but that the Boer capital will have been reached by the end of May, that is taking it for granted that Lord Roberts moves with the caution and precision that has worked the campaign since his charge. The British people have every confidence in their "little hero" despite his faults and eccentricities and will not lose much sleep over any speculation as to the outcome of his plans. How long the siege of Pretoria will last is, of course, a matter of speculation. The most celebrated prophets and experts appear to be silent upon the subject—and no wonder—the recollections of the prophecies in the past prove a bitter pill to swallow. In the meantime let Britons feel that the safety of the empire is assured and that every white man in South Africa will soon enjoy the same privileges that we in Canada enjoy and that the interests and authority of Great Britain will be maintained in the domains of "ex-President Kruger."

NOTES AND COMMENTS

For a long time Toronto has been looking for a real hero. They have found one at last, all honor to Deputy Fire Chief Noble who saved two lives in a burning building at the risk of his own. It is quite likely now that his political sine will be forgiven.

McKinley and Bryan are again the choice of the two great political machines in the United States. Politics there are now beginning to take on an interesting phase but the way appears to be clear for McKinley's re-election. Bryan's pro-Boer sympathies and utterances have lost for him the admiration of a large number of self-thinking Americans who would at all other events, supported his platform had he not taken this position. His defeat will be a fitting rebuke to his Boer attitude.

At present the Canadian paper makers are making substantial profits, even if it is true the profits are only on paper.

Of course when the Boer foe is located on top of a kopje, it stands to reason it's uphill work to dislodge him.

How pleasant it would be for Britons to be able to celebrate the relief of Mafeking as a part of the Queen's birthday celebrations! Let us hope that if not relieved previous to that day we may have the opportunity. It would be just like "Baba."

"The Better Part"
Of valor is discretion," and the better part of the treatment of disease is prevention. Disease originates in impurities in the blood. Hood's Sarsaparilla purifies the blood. People who take it at this season say they are kept healthy the year round. It is because this medicine expels impurities and makes the blood rich and health-giving.

All liver ills are cured by Hood's Pills. 25 cents.

ONEMER.

Our village is booming. Not an empty house.
Mr. D. Conroy, contractor on Cowan's bridge is making good head-way and employing a large number of teams and men. Farmers have made good progress, seeding, and now the fine spring showers are showing up the results of their labors, in causing good vegetation.

Our Presbyterian friends have in contemplation a concert to be given early in June by the celebrated choir of St. Paul's church, Peterborough.

The last letters read by Sergt. McCracken's friends here reported that he was unable to write owing to an accident to his hands, having charge of the ammunition wagons. This the first casualty that has befallen the Sergt. since entering the Campaign.

There should be a large amount of bicycling traffic between here and Peterboro this season, usually being a very good road save some hills, only requiring one hour and a half to make the trip. Our saw and shingle mill will soon be in full swing and has an immensely large boiler and engine.

Fate of a Bicycle Dude.

A bicycle dude with a bicycle smile, Made a bicycle call in a bicycle style; He'd bicycle trousers, bicycle coat, and a bicycle tie round his bicycle throat.

He'd a bicycle glass on his bicycle eye, He'd a bicycle voice and a bicycle sigh. A bicycle miss, dressed in bicycle lace, Met this bicycle dude with the bicycle face;

On the bicycle breast of the bicycle girl was a bicycle brooch made of bicycle pearls.

This bicycle girl in the bicycle mood was in bicycle love with a bicycle dude.

And when he proposed in a bicycle way A bicycle wedding on a bicycle day. With a bicycle gauge this bicycle miss Raised her bicycle lips with a bicycle kiss.

But her bicycle father raised his bicycle eyes

Saw that bicycle miss, heard those bicycle sighs.

When the bicycle pa raised his bicycle boot.

The bicycle dude made a bicycle scot; And the bicycle dog mid the bicycle row'sir.

Got his bicycle mouth full of bicycle trouser.

What Dooley Will Do.

Mr. Dooley has definite ideas as to what will attract Americans at the Paris show. He tells his friend Hennessy: "If I went over there 'tis little time I'd be spindin' thrylin' to discover how the wondherers ivimechanical are propoosed that makes livin' so much more healthy and onecomfortable. But whin I got to Paris I'd hire me a hack, or a dhray painted r-red, an' I'd put me feet out th' sides, an' I'd say to the driver: 'Revolutionist, pint yer horse's head to'ris th' home of th' skirt dance, hit him smartly, an' go to sleep. I will see the snowplow show an' th' den-thirty wurruk in th' pa-apers. Fir th' prinst I'll devote me attention to makin' a noise in th' streets an' atudyin' human nature.'"

His Idea of Humor.

A janitress living on Washington square had an adventure one day which she will not soon forget. It seems that the building which she has under her care was at one time used by a trust company, and afterward it was turned into an apartment house. When this was done, the vaults were left intact, and they were very seldom opened. The janitress was showing a party of gentlemen through the building and pointed out the desirability of the vaults as refrigerators. When she opened the vault and stepped in, one of the party, who has a rare idea of humor, shut the door suddenly and imprisoned the janitress. That was all right so far as it went, but the lock was a spring affair, and the janitress had the keys on the inside. The room hunters were thoroughly frightened, and one of them ran for a locksmith in haste. Luckily a neighbor, who is an expert locksmith, came into the place and in a few minutes succeeded in releasing the woman, who was in anything but a pleasant frame of mind. The room hunters made themselves very scarce before the engaged janitress came forth.—Philadelphia Record.

In the Same Pen.

"One of the boys at the hotel put me on to a little poker game," said the dry goods drummer, "and I went around to see what it was like. There were about 80 respectable looking people in the room, and one of them was trying to teach me the value of the cards, when the police broke in and made a clean sweep of everybody. Next morning, when arraigned at the police court, I wanted a lawyer, and there was a general laugh in court as his honor replied: 'I don't know where you'll get one. There are nine in town, but all are in the pen with you!'"

"It was so," continued the drummer, "and things might have gone hard with us had it not been for the fact that the judge was there, too, but had just stepped out as the raid was made. Nothing was said about it, of course, but he let us off with a fine of $2 each and a lot of fatherly advice."

He Was Very Thoughtful.

A north country miller noted for his keenness in financial matters was once in a boat trying his best to get across the stream which drove his mill.

The stream was flooded, and he was taken past the point at which he wanted to land, while farther on misfortune again overtook him to the extent that the boat was upset.

His wife, realising the danger he was in, ran frantically along the side of the stream, crying for help in a pitiful voice, when, to her sheer amazement, she was suddenly brought to a standstill by her husband yelling out:

"If I'm drowned, Molly, don't forget that four's gone up 2 shillins a sack!"—London Telegraph.

English Law as to Fits.

A maniacintosh that did not fit was the subject of a legal decision in the Westminster county court. The Regent street shopkeeper who made the garment said that the purchaser (who used for the return of three guineas paid) did him time to make another that

The judge said a person was entitled to a "fit" when a garment was sent home, and any permission to alter or make a fresh article was mere good nature and not law. The case should not have been defended. He gave the disappointed customer his three guineas, with costs.—Birmingham Post.

LOST MINES IN MEXICO

RICH DEPOSITS ONCE UNDER SPANISH CONTROL

That Are To-day Unknown to Civilized Man
—A Secret That is Carefully Guarded by the Pima Indians.

Mexico has many lost mines and many have been the fruitless attempts to rediscover the ore beds that were working during the period of the Spanish occupation.

Among them is the Tarasca, in Sonora. This mine was working long before the Spaniards arrived in Mexico and the gold and silver fashioned into ornaments by the aborigines. A family of Guaymas had a necklace of flying fish purchased from a Pima Indian chief, who started that the metal was dug from Tarasca. The mine was worked by various Spaniards and later acquired by the Crown of Spain. It was extensively worked, barring certain periods during Apache wars, until the epoch of the French intervention, when the shafts and tunnels are said to have been concealed by the administrator. Don Juan Moreno, an imperialist, who was forced to seek safety in flight. The location of the mine is to-day uncertain, though some believe that the mine known as Ubarabo is identical with it.

A MINE FABULOUSLY RICH.

But the lost mine above which tradition gathers thickest is Taioapa, the knowledge of which is possessed only by the Pima Indians. Quantities of ore are sold from time to time by the Indians, but all attempts to follow the Indians to the spot where it was found or bribe them to reveal it have failed. Wanting but little in addition to the corn that grow they are imbued with a superstition that if they reveal the locality of the mine they will instantly drop dead. To the unacquainted with the Indians character this statement may seem incredible, but any prospector or miner in the Sierra Madre will affirm its truth. Large sums of money have been offered the Pimas to tell where the mine is. They scorn money and the only open business is mescal, by the liberal use of which the Indian may be made to disclose many things, but so far he has held inviolate his vow to reveal to no mortal man the famous Taioapa. But the fascinating secret, in part, has been revealed to a woman.

SECRET PARTIALLY REVEALED.

About a year and a half ago an old Pima Indian fell ill in one of the valley quichos and was cured by a Mexican lady so well known and so estimable that her statement is universally accepted. The old Indian returned to his tribe and from that time sent her rich bits of ore, which averaged thousands of dollars to the ton. All her efforts to induce him to lead her to the mine were futile. He said the Great Spirit would strike him dead if he did. Last summer the plucky pema went to the mountains and lived among the Indians for three months, doctoring the sick and giving presents of calico and gay ribbons to the women and small quantities of mescal to the men of the tribe. She became convinced beyond doubt that the spot from which the rich ore came was Taioapa. The chief admitted that it was the "mina tapada" that was worked when he was a boy. After much persuasion and a gift of a goodly portion of the fiery product of the mine he directed two women of the tribe to take her to within a few yards of the mine, that she might discover it unaided and save the Indians from the penalty of sudden death for revealing it. Overjoyed at gaining so much, the Mexican woman had two burros packed with provisions and, mounted on mules, the three women set out. They traveled mostly at night, traveling through deep canyons and over lofty mountain passes. At night, some hours after dark, the woman led her into a deep canyon and paused a short distance from a large rock. In the dim moon light an old arrastra was seen, and across the canyon was a large ore dump, from which opened a tunnel.

PUZZLED BY THE INDIANS.

The women gathered bits of ore from the dump and arrastra, but was hurried away by the Indians, who said they would be killed if they delayed beyond the time given them by the chief. They traveled until the moon went down, resting a few hours and went on before daylight, completely baffling the Mexican woman as to the route they had brought her. They arrived at the pueblo at nightfall, and having taken four days to reach the mine and but one to return the obvious conclusion was that she had been led about in a circle—a curious method of putting at rest the complex Indian conscience.

The Mexican lady made several attempts afterward to find the mine, but failed.

THREE CITIES.

There are 90,000 trees in the city of Paris, including 15,000 willows, 17,000 chestnuts and 20,000 plane trees.

The city of Akron, O., is entitled to the credit for installing the first automobile police patrol. It is of the latest make, having a seating capacity of 20 persons and was built at a cost of $2,200.

Los Angeles has the reputation of being almost tropical, but it is not a warm city either in summer or winter. The temperature is seldom above 75 at any season, and that is about equal to 68 in New York. May and June seem to be the coldest months in the year.

Slow Suicide.

A source of great evil among all workers is the widespread habit of eating a hearty meal hurriedly when the body is in a state of exhaustion. Too often, alas, the evil is enhanced by the fact that the food is insubstantial, badly cooked and clogging in itself. This is one species of slow suicide, causing a long train of evils which are usually attributed to overwork. Now, it were better to go without food than to take it under these conditions. Your dog knows better than to eat when he is tired, and if you will watch him you will notice that he is always reluctant to be excited into play after eating. Left to himself he will take a nap, or at least drop care for awhile and rest. Humanity might raise its standard of health by following the example set by the instincts of the brute creatures.—Health Culture.

Chicago Justice.

In Chicago a woman was arrested for vagrancy. The vagrancy statute defines a vagrant as "a person who is idle, remains idle and refuses to work." The counsel for defense argued that a woman could not be a vagrant because she "was not made to work." It took the jury of twelve men but a few minutes to return a verdict supporting the theory of the defense.

Of course this is only Chicago law, if it is any kind of law, but it will perhaps encourage some of the women who.

though not made to work, are working. The experience of many women who are working to support men, although made to work, cannot be made to work is such that even this Chicago crumb of comfort may be welcome. Twelve men who do not think women were made to work will seem like a large number to such women.

THE DOMINIE.

It is announced in Boston that Bishop Lawrence of Massachusetts is to give a new dormitory to Harvard.

Bishop Charles Edward Cheney of Christ Reformed Episcopal church of Chicago recently celebrated the fortieth anniversary of his pastorate.

The Rev. Dr. Edward P. Goodwin, for 26 years pastor of the First Congregational church of Chicago, has resigned on account of advancing age and ill health. Dr. Goodwin is the dean of the clergy of Chicago for continuous service with one church.

The Rev. Henry J. Cullen, the pastor of the African Zion church of Syracuse, was born a slave. He is a Hampton graduate, has studied law, once declined a nomination for member of the Virginia legislature and since his entrance to the ministry has stamped the Pacific coast as a McKinley campaigner.

A black bishop of the Anglican church was recently consecrated at Lambeth. The Right Rev. James Johnson, assistant bishop of western equatorial Africa, is a Sierra Leone negro whose parents were rescued slaves from the Yoruba country. His station will be Bonin. Durham university has made him an honorary A. M.

THE BEST NEWS YET!

TROUT LAKE CITY, B. C., APRIL 30, 1900.

"Your letter came while I was out, and I note what you say financially and otherwise, and certainly feel much interested in the property and more confident of the outcome than ever since my last explorations. I have men at work inside tunnel at $12 per foot and no stated amount of work. I will enclose a penciling showing how we are doing the work and give my reasons for the same. We traced two leads down by the end of Crosscut, of fine appearance (see diagram). Mr. Pettipiece was up to see the property and remained over night. I also had Mr. Shannon, the Geologist, up with me to confer with in reference to the property and the way it should be developed and so on. He will give his opinions through the columns of the "Eagle." He is a very conscientious and careful man and slow to advance ideas without proof. I asked him what he thought of my plan of development. He carefully looked the situation over inside and out and stated it was the best. He said in reference to the property that "it was one that merited an outlay of money and one no one should be afraid to invest in." He mentioned that in many respects it resembled the "Silver Cup." We will encounter lead No. 2 I think by May 1st, and I am very sanguine we will have Ore at over 100 feet deep. We will have to drive 100 feet to get No. 3 lead. Now if your company can stand the expense of 100 feet of work at this time it certainly would be wise to do so, for we know at least something of the merits of No. 3. When we get the Main Ore Body located we then are made. It is there and I hope soon to be able to report having it. The conditions have never looked better than now.

J. W. Westfall.

Copies of the "Eagle" can be had on application. The work is being vigorously continued and we hope soon to be able to report having struck the Ore Body. Matters were never better for us than now and if you want a good investment get our shares while there is time.

I read, after securing the Jim Hill claim adjoining it on the north, canceled the ledger and W. H. Brown reports on this property $16.50 in gold, immediate. ## Short Story of the Day

AUNT ROSE'S SECRET.

M. Delvalley rose, furious, his eyebrows contracted, his mouth drawn. "I tell you this marriage shall not take place," he said.

"And I swear it shall!" cried Andre, with only a shade less of determination in his face and voice.

"It is the most outrageous thing I have heard of. A boy whose education has been what yours has, upon whom no expense has been spared, who for 20 years has been my constant thought, to be utterly lacking in every feeling of gratitude. Just at the very moment when I have made plans for your future you announce to me that you intend to marry the girl of your choice! And what a choice! A girl without a penny!"

"But you do not believe money to be the only consideration in marriage, do you?" said Andre, striving to be calm. "It seems to me that happiness enters in somewhere, and if I can be happy with no one but Noemie—"

M. Delvalley burst into a loud, exasperated laugh.

"That is too good! He can be happy with no one but Noemie; a person of whose existence he was ignorant months before!"

"But father—"

"Enough!"

The tone in which the words were pronounced convinced Andre that his father's decision was inflexible. He was accustomed to bow to the will of a despotic father, just as he had seen his mother yield until her death. In his childhood he and his mother had been companions, and often together they had bent their heads to the fury of a storm aroused by some slight or irregular domestic occurrence. Not that M. Delvalley was a bad man. He was quick-tempered, but usually repented his outbursts and tried to make amends when he saw the effect of his harsh words. Before he was very old Andre had seen that the family life of his father and mother was not a very happy one, though he did not know what to attribute to the state of affairs. Since his mother died he had simply given into his father when any question of disagreement had come between them, and until now they had lived comfortably together.

The next day Andre returned to his charge.

"I believe if you knew what an unhappy night I passed, father—"

"Enough, I say!" cried the old man, not allowing him to complete his sentence. "I tell you I will never give my consent to the marriage. A girl without a penny!"

"I would not ask of your consent at all if she had not refused to marry me without!" exclaimed Andre, hotly.

"Oh, you would not!" M. Delvalley laughed. "And pray, where would you live and what would you do to support your wife?"

"I could find something," replied the young man, in a tone that made his father say, more gently than he had yet spoken:

"I am convinced that the girl and her relatives are after your fortune. You met them at a summer hotel. They found out who you were and thought you would be a good 'catch,' and proceeded to catch you."

"If you would only listen to me, father, I could convince you of Noemie's sincerity."

Without replying to his son M. Delvalley went on: "As you can't take care of yourself, I must take care of you. Where do these Durands live?"

"No, 27 Rue Nollet."

"No Nollet! And you say they are not after your money?" M. Delvalley said, as he left his son. He returned in a few moments, a paper in his hand, from which he read in a loud voice:

"Mme Durand, 27 Rue Nollet; I formally refuse my consent to the marriage of my son, Andre, and your daughter, and inform you that if the event takes place I shall absolutely disinherit him. DELVALLEY."

He rang the bell and a servant appeared.

"Send this telegram at once," he said.

Andre made a move to follow the servant from the room, but after a glance at his father restrained himself. The old man waited until the servant had time to leave the house, and then retired to his study, leaving Andre alone.

The unhappy young man sat thinking of the misery for some time. The words of Noemie spoken the night before came back to him; he had been so full of confidence. While he was doubtful enough of his father's approval.

"When he knows how much we love each other he will consent," she had said.

"But if he refuses?" Andre had asked.

"Then it must be good-by for us, because I can never let you ruin yourself for me." And in spite of pleadings and arguments she had remained firm.

"Poor Noemie," he thought. How will she feel when she reads the telegram! And her Aunt Rose, who considered the marriage already made. She used to tell us when we feared to tell father that we had no cause to worry; that everything would come out as we wanted it; that she had a magic charm which she could apply, if necessary, at the last minute, and that charm a secret. What will she say now? Why not go and find out and give her a chance to try it? Andre sprang up, seized his hat and ran from the house.

"Well," said Noemie, "what news?" She had not yet received the telegram.

"The very worst," said Andre. He refused and threatens to disinherit me. But, heaven, you will marry me, anyway. I can find something to do, and we will at least have each other."

Noemie was very much in love, and her good resolutions began to waver before the strength of her lover's desire.

They were talking despondently when the door opened and a pretty, elderly woman entered the room.

"Dear me, how unhappy you look!" she said. "What is the matter?"

"M. Delvalley has refused his consent," said Noemie.

"Indeed! Well, it would be funny if it were not so sad."

"Aunt Rose, how can you?" murmured Noemie.

"It is rather serious, madame," said Andre. "He has sent a telegram, but it has not come yet."

"But still Aunt Rose smiled. 'Stay here until I come back, Andre! I am going to try my little fairy charm as a last resort!'

All afternoon the two young people sat disconsolately together, waiting for the telegram and for Aunt Rose. What had become of his father's dispatch? Andre could not imagine. At last, long after the time it should have come, the maid entered with the formidable envelope. Noemie took it and was about to open it when Andre said: "Fear it up without reading it. We know what it is."

"I want to see how it looks," replied Noemie.

"As she read a wave of color swept across her face."

"Andre," she cried. There is some mistake. Listen to this: 'I have the honor to ask the hand of Mlle. Noemie Durand for my son Andre. I will call at your convenience. Respectfully, DELVALLEY.'

"Is it possible that Aunt Rose was successfully?" cried Andre, besides himself with joy.

"It must be that. But what means did she employ? What is her secret?"

It was a long time before they found out, and then Andre overheard a conversation not meant for his ears.

"I was right, was I not, to keep my faith in good heart, and to intercept that first dispatch before I went to see you?" asked Aunt Rose, in a voice that Andre had never heard her make so tender and soft in tone.

"Ah, Rose responded Delvalley, in a voice stranger still to the listener, 'how could I know that the girl of Andre's choice was your niece? To think that I was about to separate them as your father separated us, because I was then poor—that they would have suffered all that I suffered in giving you up, and in thinking of you all these years! And how that we are united at last, you will not refuse?'—but suddenly Andre realized that he was listening and crept softly away.

TWO REMARKABLE TOWNS.

One is in England and the other in Switzerland.

The city of Huddersfield, Yorkshire, Eng., owns itself. Beginning life in a model dwelling owned by the town, the young man goes to work in a municipal tram. He gets his gas and electricity light from the city; his wife hires her gas stove from the city; purchases her provisions from the city market, and sends the week's washing to the municipal washerwoman. Their children play in the city parks, their dustbin is cleared out by the town authorities, and their letters are collected by a tram, the property of the town. If they are ill they are removed to the town hospital; if they are unlucky in financial matters they find a home in the municipal lodging houses; and when they die, rich or poor, they are buried by the town, in a cemetery owned by the town.

The municipal authorities of Braunlingen, Switzerland, are so rich that not only do they require the inhabitants to pay no taxes, but supply free grazing grounds for every family for one cow. Even here their generosity finds not enough scope, and January 2 every year they present every resident with two pence, a cartload of wood, and six printed invitation cards, which the recipient is requested to send to any friends of unblemished character living elsewhere, asking them to pick up their goods and come and live in Braunlingen. If they accept the invitation, and their note to that effect is received among the first 200 of the town, they are given a journey, and any extra up to the sum of £3. The money is raised from the rents of the houses, which were formerly owned by a Swiss nobleman, whose pet object in life was to build a town.

KILLED 166 INDIANS.

John Johnston was the Worst For the Red Men Ever Had.

The greatest Indian fighter in the United States died the other day at Los Angeles, Cal., in the person of John Johnston, soldier and frontiersman. During his life as a hunter and soldier he killed 166 Indians. He was the most inveterate foe the red man ever had and he never gave quarter. Johnston was a giant in strength. He was over six feet in height and weighed 350 pounds. He was as brave as a lion and probably not 10 years of his life were spent in cities or towns.

Johnston began his career as scout and Indian fighter in the Rogue river Indian war of 1856. Then he went to Oregon and served under Gen. Wright in several raids against the Indians in 1856 and '58. He then journeyed to Montana and after fighting Indians for a year enlisted in the regulars with the Second Colorado Cavalry. He fought in many of the fiercest battles in the civil war.

In 1872, under Gen. Saml. Houser, he was with a mountain battalion on an incursion up the Rosebud River, helping to build forts and killing hostiles on the side. He was in at the capture of Sitting Bull, as he was in at pretty much every affair of importance in which the red man was put to rout.

In 1874 he invaded the Black Hills country with Gen. Custer enlisting at Fort Lincoln, Dak., as a scout in the Seventh Regiment. Subsequently he was transferred to the force under Col. Warren, and was among those who went to the relief of Greengrass after the Custer massacre.

It was in 1877 that he became a scout under Col. Miles. He participated in the battle of Wolf Mountain on January 27 of that year, when the great Sioux chief, Crazy Horse, was killed and his band wiped out. In this engagement he displayed such conspicuous bravery that he was awarded a medal by special act of Congress. Sergt. Whitehead fought side by side with him that day, and was also awarded a medal.

Fatherless.

There's something about the little black dress that touches a man in a very tender spot. He puts the little one on the head, puts some pennies in her hand, swallows hard and then—starts out to make his own children fatherless. There is no doubt that many a man is taken from his family by neglect of simple precautions which would preserve his health. Disease generally begins nowadays in "stomach trouble" because the meals are hasty and the food not digested. From that beginning come disorders of the blood, liver, kidneys, heart or nerves. The use of Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery, for diseases of the organs of digestion and nutrition will avert the catastrophe of more serious disease. It strengthens the stomach, purifies the blood, nourishes the nerves, and builds men up in both brain and body.

"I can say to you, one bottle of your 'Golden Medical Discovery' has cured me sound and well, after suffering two long years with stomach disease," writes W. H. Brownell of McAdenville, Gaston Co., N. C. "My health is worth all the world to me. I will praise you as long as I live."

Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets should be used with "Discovery" where a laxative is required.

Later Johnston became chief of scouts under Miles, and took part in the capture of Chief Joseph, of the Nez Percés tribe, in the fall of 1877. He was also with Miles when Lame Deer was killed, at one of the big battles on the Rosebud.

What G. C. B. Means

Smith—"I say, Jones, what's the meaning of the papers always putting G. C. B. behind Lord Roberts' name?"

Jones—"Why, any bloomin' idiot could tell you that, Lord Roberts, generally called, Bob."

Port Hope carried its waterworks by-law by 37 to 23.

ANNUAL MEETING

Of the Board of Trade—Officers Elected—New Members Appointed—Good Times Coming.

The Board of Trade met in annual session last night, when there were present President Carnegie and Messrs. T. A. S. Hay, J. D. Mackay, T. E. Bradburn, B. Shortly, Robert Fair, A. W. Crossman, W. Salisbury, Macfarlane Wilson, R. McWhinnie and H. C. Rogers.

Secretary Quartermaine read the minutes of the preceding meeting, which were confirmed as read.

TREASURER'S REPORT.

The secretary read Treasurer Fair's report, which showed a balance in hand of $146.23 in the special fund, and $199.43 in the general fund.

SECRETARY'S REPORT.

The following report was very favorably received, and adopted as read: Mr. President and Gentlemen, I have the honor to present to you the eleventh Annual Report of this Board, and in so doing, feel myself at a great disadvantage, as the able reports made by my predecessors.

In reviewing the work of the past year we must feel, that although we have not had occasion to call many meetings, those which were held were of great value to the town and county. Stanley Piano Company.—The Stanley Piano Company has this year located itself in our town and, we are credibly informed is in full swing, as are also all other local industries in the town, not a few working day and night.

Canadian General Electric Company.—One of the largest enterprises on the Continent of North America, the Canadian Electric Company, has decided to largely increase its capacity, and the buildings, etc., when completed must add materially to the prosperity of the town.

Board's Finances.—We are pleased to report that the financial standing of the Board is good. As will be seen by the Treasurer's Report, there is a credit balance of Special Fund of $146.23, and also a credit balance to General Fund of $199.43.

Membership.—The membership of the Board this year is the largest on record, and we trust to do even better next year.

Manufacturers.—The Board has been in correspondence with several large business enterprises, among which may be mentioned Lever Brothers Limited, (Sunlight Soap), McCormick Harvesting Machine Company of Chicago, E. C. Stearns' Bicycle Company, William Barber & Brother, of Georgetown, Ont., and several others.

Trent Valley Canal.—The Trent Valley Canal we have already with us, and we trust the good work will be permitted to go on to completion.

G.T.R. to Back Lake.—The Grand Trunk Railway is advertising our back lakes, and, as of late years a large number of our American cousins have patronized them, we trust this will be a means of advertising our town.

Granolithic Pavements.—During last summer several miles of granolithic pavement have been laid, adding greatly to the beauty of our streets, more especially the residential ones, and enhancing the value of property.

Addresses by Board of Trade Experts.—With reference to this matter, I beg to suggest that in the near future we exert ourselves to induce an expert on Board of Trade affairs, to favor us with a lecture. During last summer and fall I tried to get in touch with Mr. Hyerson Ritchie, recently appointed President of the Chamber of Commerce of Cleveland, Ohio, who, by the by, is an old Peterborough boy. I was to have met Mr. Ritchie one evening at the residence of our worthy Treasurer, but he was not, unfortunately, for us, able to keep his appointment.

Board of Trade Excursion.—We were most unfortunate last fall in not having our annual outing. I would suggest that instead of allowing this event to come of in the Fall we should take this holiday late in June or early in July.

Ottawa-Hull Fire.—We must all feel deeply for our most unfortunate brethren at Ottawa and Hull, and also most thankful that, although so large a district was burnt over, so few lives were lost.

Local Press.—The sincere thanks of the Board are due to the Local Press, who have always so faithfully reported our business.

Council Chamber.—Thanks are also due to the Mayor, Town Council and Town Clerk for the use of the Council Chamber.

Executive Officers, &c.—I have personally to offer my sincere thanks to the Executive and leading members of the Board, who have been always willing and most kind in advising me on any matters about which I require information.

Transvaal War.—In conclusion, I feel assured that although this Board deeply deprecates the dreadful slaughter of human life now taking place in South Africa, we should not be true and loyal Canadians did we not endorse our Queen and Mother Country in this present crisis, which we have done by word and deed. Some of our poor boys have found a grave in African soil, but they died like true Canadians, fighting for their Queen, with their face to the Boer. Canadians have come bravely to the front and are mentioned in Lord Roberts' despatches daily and in after years, when the history of the Boer war shall be written, and our children's children shall read of it in their History of Canada, they will never forget this question and answer.

Q.—Who captured Cronje?

A.—The Canadians!

Your obedient servant,

T. Q. QUARTERMAINE, Secretary.

OFFICERS ELECTED.

President.—T. E. Bradburn.

Vice-President.—D. W. Dumble.

Treasurer.—Robert Fair.

Secretary.—T. Q. Quartermaine.

The following members were appointed to compose the Council for the ensuing year: Mr. T. E. Bradburn, chairman, and Messrs. Robert Fair, T. A. S. Hay, D. W. Dumble, J. H. Burnham, W. H. Hill, H. S. Macdonald, B. Shortly, Peter Hamilton, Jas. Kendry, M.P., J. R. Stratton, M.P., H. L. Linn, P. Campbell, Richard Hall, A. C. McCallum, T. F. Matthews, R. McWhinnie, Macfarlane Wilson, J. W. Garvin, J. H. McClellan, H. P. Kennedy.

STANDING COMMITTEES.

The following gentlemen were appointed a Committee to strike the Standing Committees: R. Fair, T. E. Bradburn, W. Salisbury and B. Shortly.

TRENT VALLEY CANAL.

Mr. Dumble moved, seconded by Mr. Macfarlane Wilson.—That the secretary be instructed to write the Minister of Railways and Canals, asking that steps be taken towards securing the opening of the Trent Valley Canal from Lakefield to a point near Peterborough as possible by September or October next.—Carried.

THANKS TO COUNCIL.

On motion of Mr. Shortly a vote of thanks was tendered the Council for the use of the Council Chamber, in which the Board's meetings are held.

NEW MEMBERS.

Mr. Fair moved, seconded by Mr. Salisbury.—That Mr. C. A. Barton, of the Electric Works, and Mr. Stanley, of the Stanley Piano Factory, be appointed members of this Board.—Carried.

Mr. Dumble here gave a brief review of Peterborough's commercial standing during the past year, and in the course of an instructive address strongly emphasized the benefits accruing from the Canadian General Electric Co's rapidly increasing business, and the locating here of the Stanley Piano manufactory. During the period of trade depression lately experienced by Canada and the world at large, Peterborough had been slow to feel the effects of such stagnation of trade, and now that the commercial world is once again on the boom, we must naturally expect to be slow to feel its benefit.

LITTLE LOCAL LINES.

Band concert to-night. Everybody should go.

Victoria Park is now in full bloom many flowers being planted.

It is said that the Grand Central hotel property will soon be turned into stores.

Remember the Salvation Army Sunday school picnic to Oak Orchard on the Queen's birthday.

The death took place on Wednesday in Millbrook of Mrs. Fee, proprietress of the Victoria hotel in that village.

The Globe yesterday printed a very poor picture of Rev. Dr. Torrance, the new Moderator of the Presbyterian Synod.

"There is no little enemy." Little impurities in the blood are sources of great danger and should be expelled by Hood's Sassaaparilla.

An information has been issued charging a youth and man with being the owner of five dogs and a bitch without tags for any.

At a special meeting of the Campbellford Council a resolution was passed making a grant of $100 towards the Ottawa-Hull fire fund.

At the police court yesterday morning Jacob Hanson, of Toronto, and Henry Paterson, an Englishman, were charged with vagrancy. They were discharged.

It has been noticed that almost invariably the new comers to a town buy their goods in stores which invite trade through an advertisement in the local newspaper. Everybody reads the Times.

It is a poor rule that won't work both ways. Delighted host are already beginning to visit Chemong Park, Buckhorn and other of our famous summer resorts, and well-planned hosts are found in these hotels.

The Lindsay Post, in commenting on the proposal to hold Sunday schools in the morning instead of the afternoon, says that it is a good idea, and one that is likely to maintain a larger attendance during the hot weather.

Lindsay Post.—Contractor Hayes, Peterborough, with eight men, commenced work this morning on the new granolithic walk on south side of Scott-st., west end. They will make the Daily house their stopping place while in town.

Mrs. Thos. Lyons, formerly of Peterborough and Lindsay, died at Winnipeg on Tuesday night, at the small-pox pest house. There are two other serious cases at quarantine now. The authorities now hope they have the disease under control.

The Rise of Rudyard Kipling.

Ten years ago Kipling was a reporter on a little country newspaper in the backwoods of India. He had written short stories and poems—wonderful stories and blood-stirring poems—that had been printed in the Indian press and delighted a few Englishmen in India; but the world of letters, and the great English world of action, knew him not. He went to England to get a start, but the English publishers bowed him out. He then called on the agent of an American publisher in London, who had faith enough in him to republish his Indian work, and honest enough to pay him a royalty, although it was not protected by copyright. Just as his first book came from the American press, the New York Sun reprinted his story the "MAN WHO WAS," "the greatest ever written." It was copied from the Sun into over three thousand daily, Sunday and weekly newspapers in the country. Then followed "THE INCARNATION OF KISHIN" MULVANY," which almost every paper in the land republished. Both press and people went Kipling mad. Never had they been written. The four volumes issued by the American publisher, unprotected by copyright, were raised, and it was considered a poor issue in 1890 when the greatest or the smallest of American weeklies had not a Kipling poem or a Kipling story. His name was a household word in the United States, from the Atlantic to the Pacific, in city, town and hamlet.

MAFEKING'S RELIEF IS VERY NEAR AT HAND!

Hunter's Cavalry at the Rate They Are Going
Will Reach There Monday or Tuesday.

FREE STATERS ELECT TO CONTINUE FIGHTING.

An Expert Says Boers Must Collapse After the First Pitched Battle.
Rundie Has Posted Infantry in Such a Manner That Communications Are Safe.

London, May 12, 4.30 a.m. A British column, 30,000 strong has arrived at Vryburg one hundred miles from Mafeking. It reached there Thursday, and though harassed by the Boers in pushing swiftly forward. Fifty miles south of Vryburg at Tanga in General Hunter's main body moving slowly, and continuing with considerable force.

The pick of his mounted men are the 30,000 who are going without wheeled transport and at a rate that may possibly bring them to Mafeking on Monday or Tuesday next. Lord Roberts' narrative closes with Thursday evening, but he continued the march yesterday towards Kroonstad, twenty miles distant, and by this time he must know whether the Boers intend to fight there.

Mr. Winston Churchill says there were only 3,000 Boers who opposed the British at Zand River. Another estimate is that 6,000 Boers with six guns made a rear guard action, while many other thousands with convoys retired without firing a shot.

President Steyn and a council of leaders of several thousand Free Staters in the Ladybrand and Hekkerpoort district determined to submit to the men the question of continuing the war or not at a great open air meeting.

The fighting men decided to go on. Steyn, who appears to be in active command, began to advance toward the British and came into contact on Thursday with Campbell's brigade and Brabant's Horse 20 miles north-east of Thaba N'Chu. A smart engaged with no positive success on either side, except that the Boer advance was stopped.

Gen. Rundie has disposed 10,000 infantry along a twenty-mile front in such a way as to bar advance toward Lord Roberts' communications. With the exception of Brabant's colonials, Gen. Rundie has no horsemen. The cavalry are all with Lord Roberts' advance.

According to a Pretoria telegram Gen. Buller is moving from Bladalslaagte to the direction of Helpmakaer and the British vanguard engaged a Boer patrol of Italians on Thursday. Twelve Italians are described as routing fifty British.

FINAL AGONY OF THE BOERS.

Expert Says They Must Collapse After the First Pitched Battle.

London, May 11.—Mr. Spencer Wilkinson, reviewing the military situation in the Morning Post, says: "The Boers are now approaching their final agony. Lord Roberts has 14,000 men beyond the Zand River. With Gen. Buller there are 30,000, and with General Hunter 10,000. Against the pressure of these various columns the Boers can make no effective resistance. A collapse might follow the first battle in which the Boers make a determined stand and are well beaten. The interest in the question is whether the Transvaal Government will then submit, or will encourage the burghers to continue a hopeless struggle to the point of their general ruin. The latter alternative is by no means improbable."

DECIDED TO SUBMIT.

Burghers of the Free State Hold a Meeting.

London, May 11.—A despatch to the Daily Telegraph from Weigelien, dated Wednesday, says: "The burghers held a meeting recently, without the consent of President Steyn, at which the advisability of submission on the part of the Free State was discussed and approved."

DISSATISFIED WITH LEADERS.

Boers Intend Immediately to Retire to Lydenburg District.

London, May 11.—The Standard publishes the following, dated May 9, from Weigelien:—

"The engagement on the Vet River caused the Boers to be dissatisfied with their leaders. I learn from Pretoria that the Boers intend to retire ultimately to Lydenburg, leaving to the foreign mercenaries the task of defending Johannesburg and Pretoria."

"The foreign mercenaries are now advocating the sending out of guerrilla parties from 200 to 400 strong, rather than a persistence in operations on a large scale, but the Boers are not dabbling enough for that kind of work."

BOERS NEAR THABANCHU.

Ten Thousand of Them are Threatening Moomfontein.

London, May 10.—The presence of 10,000 Boers in the neighborhood of Thaba N'Chu is confirmed. They are holding a line twenty miles north to south-east of Thaba N'Chu. A Boer patrol was sighted Thursday at Thabanchu, and a detachment of Brabant's horse pursued the burghers, who retired after some fighting. The British then took up a position on a hill, which they are now holding. There are few casualties on the British side. The Boer headquarters are at Eden. More fighting is expected, close street.

ASSEMBLING TO THE EAST.

Boers Concentrate East of the Thabanchu and Winburg Line.

Mafeking, Basutoland, May 10.—The Free Staters are concentrating strongly in good positions on the Koranna-burg hills, lying eastward of the direct line from Thaba N'Chu to Winburg. President Steyn was with them yesterday, but is believed to have gone northward after inspecting the burghers with stories of approaching Boer successes through the assistance of thousands of foreigners, who, he said, were pouring into Delagva Bay.

General Rundie's Division camped yesterday evening on the banks of the little Leuwu River, between Thaba N'Chu and Ladybrand.

REWARD TO SHOOT MILNER.

South African Review Says That a Mercenary was Tempted.

London, May 10.—The South African Review asserts that a member of the Legislature of Cape Colony offered money to a man to shoot Sir Alfred Milner, the British High Commissioner. Affidavits on the subject are said to be in the hands of the Attorney-General. The Review demands the arrest of the legislator, who is described as a prominent bondman from Pietermaritzburg.

DUKE OF TECK'S BRAVERY.

He Gave up his Horse to a Wounded Officer.

London, May 10.—London has waited a month for the details of the disaster at Koorra Spruit. It will be remembered that it was there, on March 1, that the British forces in the Free State lost 518 men, seven guns and some 80 wagons full of stores.

The arrival of the latest mails from South Africa have once more brought the matter into public discussion. Yet the only mention of the Duke of Teck is in reporting an instance of his bravery. This is told by Lord Cecil Manners, the correspondent of the Morning Post, and is as follows:—

"Owing to their (the Household Cavalry) having been in the rear of the convoy covering the retreat from the only force of the enemy known to exist when the firing began (from the other side of the river) their losses, apart from their baggage and servants, who were all, or nearly all, captured with the convoy, were slight. Being wounded, unfortunately, in two places, in the hand and the thigh, Lieut. Meade probably owed his safety from capture to the gallantry of Prince Adolphus of Teck, who was one of the officers in charge of the convoy, and who gave him up his horse, remaining himself unaccounted for a considerable time."

CANADIAN SHOT HIMSELF.

Clarence E. Cowan Killed by Accident at Kere Siding.

London, May 8.—A despatch from Bloemfontein says Trooper Clarence E. Cowan accidentally shot himself at Kere Siding.

Mr. Cowan was a member of the Strathcona Horse. He was a young Englishman and joined the regiment in the northwest. Mr. Cowan was the representative of the Mail and Empire with the Strathconas.

THE NEWS CONFIRMED.

Ottawa, Ont., May 11.—The Militia Department this morning received a cable from Sir Alfred Milner confirming the report of the death of Clarence Cowan, of the Canadian Mounted Infantry. Cowan's name does not appear on the nominal roll of the contingent, and the department has no information as to his identity. It is thought that he may be one of the stowaways who were discovered on board ship and taken into the force.

WAR NOTES.

It is reported that the Transvaal Government has made a call for all citizens to go to the front.

It is stated that many burghers of the Transvaal still wish to destroy the Johannesburg mines, but that the Government refuses. General Botha is said to have threatened to resign his command if this course was attempted.

"HE DRIVETH FURIOUSLY!"

Evangelist Geil Talks to a Large Assembly in the Murray Street Baptist Church Last Evening.

The attendance at the Murray street church last night was much larger than the previous night, there being a large number of the representative business men present. Besides the speaker, there were seated on the platform with him, the Rev. Dr. Torrance, Rev. Mr. Gunton and the pastor, Rev. Mr. Geil used for his subject the words, "He Driveth Furiously." Two kings went out to meet Jesus, who drove furiously. Jesus continued driving until he looked up and beheld in a building a woman with a painted face. He halted. Who would not halt at a woman with a painted face? Jesus said, "Who is on my side?" Two men appeared and answered, "We are." Throw her down then," and they did so. Jesus again drove furiously and he rode over the prostrate form. When they picked her up, there were only five pieces of her left—two hands, a skull and two feet, and that was too much to be left of a woman with a painted face. What became of the body? Perhaps the dogs eat it, and I dare say, said Mr. Geil, they would be sick dogs, for the woman had a painted face. Continuing, Mr. Geil said there were two points, and the shortest distance between them was a straight line—fulfillment and obedience. Talking about the faith of the ship's crew that was tempest tossed, when they cried unto Christ, "Carest Thou not that we perish?" He arose and with the command, "Peace, be still," the winds held their breath, the waves cast off their white caps and fell quiet at His feet. "We want religion," said Mr. Geil, "but it must be cheap religion. We believe in religion, out it must be a religion that is quiet, a religion that can be used on Sunday only, we should get the right kind of religion, the religion that is with us every hour and every moment of our lives. While in New York a woman came to me, she was a stranger, and she asked me to talk and pray with her son. Are you a Christian," he asked. "Yes." "And can you not talk and pray with your own son?" "Well, I would rather a stranger do that." Imagine a boy going through the world with such a wretched mother. I looked for her the next night, but I couldn't see her. I looked the next night, and this next, but I couldn't see her. I spoke to the pastor about it, and he said, "Why, yes, she has been here every night but she has not worn the same coat she wore the first night." She shed her coat. That is what many of the present theological Christians would do towards Christ to hide their identity. You're mighty the 1851 Exhibition Scholarship was made, Mr. John Patterson being the winner. The value of the scholarship is $1,500, the holder receiving $150 a year for two years, while he studies at some foreign university. The award is made by a special board of examiners, on theses prepared by the candidates setting forth the operations and results in some original research they have conducted in physics or chemistry. These theses must be in by a certain date in March.

It transpires that Mr. J. W. McBean, one of the prospective candidates, was one day late with his work, and he was thrown out of the race in consequence. A rumor has been circulated now to the effect that the theses presented by the winner was almost two weeks late in arriving, and that it further did not comply with the regulations in being written in the ordinary curriculum work and not as original subject. The other aspirants for the prize, which is the best in the gift of the University, were Mr. W. C. Good, Mr. J. L. Hogg and Mr. J. Davidson.

Those who are acquainted with the details of the case are quite incensed, not with the slightest personal feeling against the winner, but with a feeling that partiality has been exhibited in high places. A petition will be all probability be prepared and presented to the next meeting of the Senate asking for an investigation.

BOERS FLEE BEFORE THEIR FIERCE ONSLAUGHT.

They Had Six Guns Which Were Well Served But Borne Down by Overpowering Fire—Boer Losses Heavy, and British Casualties Light.

London, May 11, 10.50 a.m.—Lord Roberts' telegraphing to the War Office from Riet Spruit, under date of May 10, evening, says:—

"We have had a successful day, and have driven the enemy from point to point. French, with Porter's and Dickson's brigades of cavalry, and Hutton's mounted infantry, including the Canadian contingent, crossed the Zand River in a northeasterly direction, and then worked round in a northeasterly direction, being opposed continuously by the enemy."

"Porter's division and Gordon's cavalry brigade, augmented by J. battery of the Royal Horse Artillery, and of Henry's and Rose's mounted infantry, crossed the river by a drift near the railway bridge. My quarters accompanied this force. With the infantry portion we are eight miles north of the river."

"The cavalry and mounted infantry are at Venterburg Road Station, and Tuck-Hamilton's force and Broadwood's cavalry brigade was making for the cross road near Venterburg when I last heard from them. Hamilton's column met with stubborn opposition, and Smith-Dorrien's brigade was engaged for some hours in protecting the rear and flank of his force."

"The drifts are extremely difficult and much baggage has still to come up. We shall, however, march at daylight, and push on as far as possible in a Kroonstad direction."

"The only casualties reported at present are—"

—five. No returns yet received from the cavalry nor Hamilton's force."

ROBERTS AT VENTERBURGH.

Cape Town, May 11.—Lord Roberts wires that he is at Venterburg, and that he is continuously opposed but that he is making progress.

STORY OF THE BATTLE.

How the British Crossed the River and Attacked the Boers.

London, May 10.—The Daily Express, in its second edition to-day publishes a despatch, dated Riet Spruit, May 10, morning, describing the crossing of the Zand River by the British.

"The Boers, with guns, resisted the advance. The Mounted Infantry, two batteries and pom-poms, cleared the way and the third cavalry brigade acted as a screen before the main column. Gen. French was on the left and Gen. Hamilton on the right. The Boers had destroyed all the bridges during their retreat."

"It is impossible to ascertain the Boer losses, but they are thought to be heavy. Those of the British, considering the important advance made, are considered light."

A special despatch from Riet Spruit dated May 10, describing more fully yesterday's successful operation, says:—

"Gen. Hamilton's scout had on two previous days ascertained the Boers' position and strength. On Wednesday night the Cheshire regiment crossed the river, entrenched themselves and prepared to hold the passage for the regiments following them."

"At daybreak on Thursday the main body crossed two or three points. The mounted infantry were then in action, driving off the advance Boers preparatory to a general forward movement. The Boer right first gave way, but Tucker and Hamilton had a tougher task on the left. The Boers had six guns and served them well, but the British worked up closer and closer, their guns meantime firing incessantly."

"The East Lancashire and Sussex regiments by 11 o'clock had worked well to the front. The order was given, and like a flash the two regiments sprang forward simultaneously, and in a few moments had secured two commanding ridges."

"The advanced line was now within twelve hundred yards of the Boers' main trench and the latter were already losing heart from the demonstration on their flank, but they kept up a rapid, though wild, fire."

"At this moment the final charge was ordered, and away went the Lancashire and the Sussex regiment again, but the Boers could not stand and they fairly bolted, and the rout of the Boers along the whole line was then complete."

SUSSEX MEN USED THE BAYONET.

Riet Spruit, May 10.—Owing to the Boers opposing the British advance, hiding positions north of Zand drift, back along the whole line, from Gen. Hamilton on the East and Gen. Hutton on the west. Chiefly artillery was engaged."

"The Sussex regiment charged a kopje at the point of the bayonet and the East Lancashire captured another. The British loss is insignificant."

General Hutton had a series of artillery duels, the Boers always retiring. Twenty Boers were taken prisoners. The advance continues. The Boers are fighting half-heartedly. The Free Staters are sick of the war."

A despatch from Christiansburg states that there was fighting on the Vaal River on Monday. General Van Aegwonen, who was in command of the Griqualand Boers, was killed."

JEFFRIES IS STILL CHAMPION.

Jim Corbett Knocked Out in 23rd Round at Coney Island Last Night.

The great fight for the championship of the world, which took place in Coney Island last night, between Jeffries, champion of the world, and Jim Corbett, resulted in victory for Jeffries in the 23rd round. Following is a synopsis in rounds:—

1st Round.—After some clever interchanges of blows Corbett won round on points.

2nd Round.—Corbett by clever dodging and foot work avoided Jeff's blows, and this round ended with honors even.

3rd Round.—After a severe interchange of blows, Jeff sent a stiff left to ribs as going sounded.

5th Round.—Jeff forced fighting and sent Jeff to face and body just before the bell rang.

6th Round.—Jeff led a left to face. Corbett made an ineffectual lead for head, but clinch followed, with honors in Jeff's favor.

7th Round.—The round was altogether Jeff's. Corbett weakening.

8th Round.—After a severe interchange of blows the bell found them sparring.

9th Round.—Both led lefts to head and clinched. Corbett staggered Jeff with right swing. This round was Corbett's, and best of the fight.

11th Round.—Sharp exchange of blows, honors even. Corbett went to his corner smiling.

13th Round.—Both careful. Jeff hooked left to neck and rushed Corbett to the ropes, but he came back quickly and clinched without damage. Pace too hot for Corbett and bell did not sound too soon.

DEADLY SNAKES.

To distinguish between venomous and harmless snakes is easy in practice, but it is difficult to explain in words alone, as there is one external characteristic which distinguishes them. It is rather a peculiar, varying union of many separate marks that brands the dangerous reptile.

Generally speaking, all snakes may be divided into two great classes—those which have the head covered with numerous small scales and those which have it covered with large, regularly fitted plates. Leaving out the elapids and the poisonous sea snakes, with which the hunter will have nothing to do, all snakes with small head scales move about by night and those with the large plates on the head by day. This may be known by their eyes, for the first have vertical pupils like the cat's, while those of the latter are generally circular in form. The long, active day snake, gliding about from bush to bush or hurriedly taking refuge beneath some protruding rock or tree stump, is harmless. Even should he be coiled in the sunshine he will flee from approaching danger. But a serpent nicely coiled in some secluded nook which instead of feeling gathers himself closer together is most probably dangerous, particularly if he be green or skin a mottled appearance like a rasp.

Head covered with small scales, sometimes larger over the eyes or nose. (1) Eyes with vertical pupils like a cat's.

(2) Two pits or holes between the eyes and nose, suggesting four nostrils.

(3) Two long, curved, perforated fangs in the upper jaw just in front of the eye, one on either side and so long that they lie backward, hidden from view by a membranous sheath, but erectile at will.

Some of the first seven peculiarities may be found in harmless snakes, but it is only in the viper that they are united.

DREAMERS.

"There's nothing half so sweet in life as love's young dream." The old song is right. Lovers are dreamers. They create a special world in which they live immune from the hurts and ills which vex common humanity. In their estimate of household expenses there's no place for a doctor. And very often when the dream dissolves they find that the doctor's bill, the one thing they didn't count on, is now the one thing that's as regular as rent and taxes. And many times it is money wasted. Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription will do for a woman and her womanly ills, practically everything that can be done by any doctor or medicine. It regulates the periods, dries debilitating drains and cures inflammation, ulceration and female weakness. It makes childbirth easy, and thousands of nursing mothers have testified to its tonic and strength giving properties. It contains no alcohol, neither opium, cocaine or other narcotic.

Mrs. Anna Blacker, of 55 Catherine Street, Syracuse, N. Y., writes: "Your medicine has done wonders for me. For years my health was very poor. I had four miscarriages, but since taking your 'Golden Medical Discovery' I have much better health, and now I have a fine, healthy baby."

Free. Dr. Pierce's Common Sense Medical Adviser, in paper covers, is sent free on receipt of 31 one-cent stamps, to pay cost of customs and mailing only. Address Dr. R. C. Pierce, Buffalo, N. Y.

SCAVENGER OF THE VELDT.

The Asavogel, Which Keeps the Wide Plains Clean.

Although the term "vulture" has been used for all time as a term of the vilest opprobrium, no one who knows the bird, its appearance and its habits could doubt for a moment that it expresses a depth of degradation which is barely conceivable.

And yet the vulture does a great deal of good in acting as the scavenger of the veldt. But for his quick eye, carious taste and love of dead meat the disease germs in the carcasses of dead oxen would be far more prolific and dangerous.

Throughout South Africa is found the asavogel. Go anywhere you like on the veldt, and sooner or later—and in all probability the former—you will find the remains of his ghastly meal. There are hundreds of thousands of oxen used in the transport and trekking service. Many of them die from exhaustion, want of water or cruelty from their Boer masters. Or they may eat of the poisonous tulip, a bulbous plant growing in marshy places.

A hunter, or teamster, soon knows if any one or more of his oxen have been eating tulip. The neck of the ox swells, his eyes close up, he gives short, sharp coughs, and his case is generally hopeless. Sometimes, however, he may be saved, and this by a peculiar, homeopathic sort of remedy. If the bulb of the tulip plant is crushed into pulp, mashed with hot water and forced boiling hot down the throat of the ox he may be saved. The quickness of the eye of the asavogel is simply astounding. An ox falls out of the team, evidently ill. He is outspanned from his yoke fellow, and he goes down to the spruit, or stream. The sky above and away to the horizon on all sides is absolutely clear and cloudless.

Hardly has the breath left the body of the poor ox than you may observe far, far away up in the sky a tiny black speck, then another and another and another, until there are 20 of them. Gradually they get larger and larger, circling round in ever diminishing circles all the while they descend. The dead ox forms the center of the circumference of their flight. Within a few minutes the grisly beast swoops down upon the still warm carcass and commences their ghastly task. An hour afterward there is nothing in the spruit but a bundle of bleached white bones that might have been there for months. The sky is clear and spotless again. The asavogel has scavenged the veldt.

Whittier's Predicament.

Whittier held "Oat Hamilton" (Abigail Dodge) in the highest esteem, and the letters that passed between them are really most delightful. Here is one of the series in "The Ladies' Home Journal" that is truly characteristic of Whittier. It was written in 1898:

"I must tell you something droll. Last week the Amoskeag veterans from New Hampshire and a Massachusetts company, with military bands, came and paraded before our house, and Governor Smith of New Hampshire and one or two officers called on me. When they left and I stepped out to see them civilly off, the men in epaulets got up a grand military salute, with music and three cheers to wind up with. Was ever a Quaker in such a predicament? I did, I fear, somewhat compromise myself by lifting, almost involuntarily, my hand to my hat. But I resisted the temptation and only pulled my hat lower down over my brows by way of testimony."

THE COOKBOOK.

When making bread, do not use too much salt or the loaves will not be light.

An appetizing relish for dinner meats is made from a cabbage heart cut into dice and pickled like little onions.

Following the English fashion, crisp, tender celery stalks are often nowadays handed around with cream cheese and crackers at dinner just before the coffee is served.

If chicken that is to be creamed in the chafin dish is marinated for a couple of hours in olive oil, the flavor of the dish will be much improved. Allow two tablespoonfuls of oil to a cup of chicken. In creaming it later, use strong celery salt freely.

Hopeless.

Burton—"It's no use. I've tried to make up with Fergus, but it is evident that he is determined never to have anything more to do with me."

Ottie—"But you don't go at him in the right way perhaps."

Burton—I praised his baby, and he didn't say a word in response.—Boston

HUNDRED THOUSAND MEN

AND A LARGE FLEET TO HELP THE BOERS.

Webster Davis Would Send To Wipe Out Great Britain If He Could.

Webster Davis, the former assistant secretary of the interior of the United States, who, after a recent trip to South Africa, resigned his government position that he might speak his mind regarding the war, addressed a meeting held in this city under the auspices of the New York committee to aid the South African republicans.
He said that English agents were using America as a shield in their negotiations with other foreign powers.
"As Americans," he said, "we are opposed to have our republic held up as a menace to foreign countries, whose sympathies go out to the Boers.
All foreign countries regard America as one of the great Powers. Around to-day representatives of the British Government are striving to create the impression that a secret understanding or alliance exists between our Government and England.

"We whose ancestors gave their lives for freedom and independence cannot withhold sympathy from the Transvaal and the Orange Free State. We should be ready to hear their cry for help, for Chamberlain has attempted to dominate and dictate their internal affairs just as George III. the affairs of the colonies. England had trodden truth under foot, and were she to conquer there is no doubt the Boers would suffer as the people of Ireland have suffered for centuries. British cruelty is proverbial. And yet the British nation poses as the great civilizer. According to their theory the Boers are savages and must be civilized, even if they have to shoot civilization into them with Lyddite guns and dum dum bullets. During the battle of the Tugela two thousand Lyddite shells fell among the Boers, and at the Hague convention dum dum bullets were condemned.
I have now in my possession three unexploded dum dum cartridges that I picked up on the top of Spion Kop, in the British trenches, and I have also two exploded dum dum bullets given me by surgeon as he extracted them from the bodies of two dead Boers. To my mind, this is sufficient proof that dum dum bullets were some extent, at least, used by the alleged civilizer's troops in that engagement."

"England has no right to peddle us around through Europe as the tail to her kite."
"McKinley's all right," said Mr. Davis.
"He is a patriot, one of the common people, like Lincoln, and the effort on the part of the British sympathizers to connect him with the British effort to crush liberty, to kill the two young republics, and to rob and murder their handful of brave martyrs is a crime, and must be resented by every American patriot. Mc-Kinley is all right, but there are men about him who ought to be got rid of as quickly as possible. I wish one hundred thousand Americans would arm themselves, and, with an American fleet, go to the help of the Boers. If that is not possible, then we can tell the world that we do not sympathize with Great Britain, but that we do sympathize with the Boers."

"There is not a graver man living than Paul Kruger, and Cecil Rhodes is a scoundrel. Should the British by overwhelming numbers conquer in the present struggle it will avail nothing, for future generations will take up the burdens where their stricken fathers laid it down, and the outcome is certain."

Montague White, a Boer diplomatic agent also spoke, charging that the press of the country is being controlled in the interests of the British, and saying that even religion is being used to malign the cause of the people of South Africa. He closed by saying: "I feel sure that something must happen soon in the struggle of the 'plain people against capitalism.'" Resolutions were adopted tendering thanks to the twenty senators who recently supported a resolution expressing sympathy with the South Africa republics, "conjuring the President to stand with the chief of a liberty-loving people worthy to be respected to the savage and barbarous war," and calling upon the President to invite the Great Powers of Europe to join in a connected demand on Great Britain to stop the war, and respect the right and independence of the South African republics.

SLEW HIS AGED MOTHER.

Said Jesus Told Him to Commit the Crime.

Reading, Pa., May.—An awful murder was committed at Mount Aetna, six miles north of Womelsdorf, yesterday, when David Clay, in insane frenzy, battered in the head of his aged mother with a hammer. The circumstances are such as to make it extraordinary in the annals of criminology.

The murderer says: "I did it because Jesus told me."
He declares he has been bewitched and that his mother was a witch. It enraged him to see her blowing smoke from her tobacco pipe at the table, so he killed her.

Clay is a widower, 42 years old, and has been employed by Isaac Bardner, merchaut. He sat down to breakfast this morning with his three children and his mother, Rebecca, the widow of George Clay. The old woman, who was in her eighty-sixth year, contentedly puffed away at her pipe.

RAINED BLOOD ON HER HEAD.
Suddenly Clay jumped up and made a dash for his aged parent. He seized hammer lying nearby. His mother half arose, only to receive a terrible blow from the hammer on her head.
While she lay prostrate her son, with the fury of a demon, bent over her and dealt her six more blows in rapid succession.

The children ran for the neighbors, who on arriving at the house found Mrs. Clay lying on the floor in a pool of blood, which flowed from wounds in her head and deep gash in her forehead. She was still living, but expired in a couple of hours.

BOUND HIM HAND AND FOOT.
Clay was still so infuriated after the deed that no one dared to approach him. Constable Frank Ditzler swore out a warrant, and with eight Snyder for his arrest, and with eight men he entered the house to take him into custody. The murderer was desertate, and resisted savagely, frightening officers and men. After a fierce struggle, he was subdued. He was then bound hand and foot with stout ropes and lifted into a farm wagon and driven to Womelsdorf. At the latter place he was taken out of the wagon and carried to an electric car and brought to the city.

NOTION OF LORD'S COMMAND.
At the jail, Clay spoke of his crime, at times weeping. He said: "I talked with Jesus, and He said that I should do it; that He would stand by me. And God also said I should do it and that He would stand by me, too."

He said he had intended to shoot his mother in the head, but that she had such a hard skull that this would have been impossible, so he took a hammer to break her head.
He stated that he had been bewitched for some time.

"No, not much," said he, with a

THE BEST NEWS YET!

TROUT LAKE CITY, B. C., APRIL 20, 1900.

"Your letter came while I was out, and I note what you say financially and otherwise, and
certainly feel much interested in the property and more confident of the outcome than ever since my last explorations. I have men at work inside tunnel at $12 per foot and no stated amount of work.
I will enclose a penciling showing how we are doing the work and give my reasons for the same.
We traced two leads down by the end of Crosscut, of fine appearance (see diagram). Mr. Pettipiece was up to see the property and remained over night. I also had Mr. Shannon, the Geologist, up with me to confer with in reference to the property and the way it should be developed and so on.
He will give his opinions through the columns of the "Eagle." He is a very conscientious and careful man and slow to advance ideas without proof. I asked him what he thought of my plan of development. He carefully looked the situation over inside and out and stated it was the best. He said in reference to the property that "it was one that merited an outlay of money and one no one should be afraid to invest in." He mentioned that in many respects it resembled the "Silver Cup."
We will encounter lead No. 2 I think by May 1st, and I am very sanguine we will have Ore at over 100 feet deep. We will have to drive 100 feet to get No. 3 lead. Now if your company can stand
the expense of 100 feet of work at this time it certainly would be wise to do so, for we know at least something of the merits of No. 3. When we get the Main Ore Body located we then are made.
It is there and I hope soon to be able to report having it. The conditions have never looked better than now.

J. W. Westfall.

Copies of the "Eagle" can be had on application. The work is being vigorously continued and we hope soon to be able to report having struck the Ore Body. Matters were never better for us than now and if you want a good investment get our shares while there is time.

In the spring the birds are singing.
As they build their summer home,
Blades of grass and buds are springing.
O'er the mead the cattle roam,
In the spring your blood is freighted
With the germs that cause disease.
Humors, boils, are designated Signs warning you of these.
In the spring that tired feeling
Makes you every day shrink,
Makes you feel like begging, stealing,
Rather than engage in work.
But there's something known that will
Man to health and vigor lead.
You will find Hood's Sarsaparilla.
Just exactly what you need.

LOVE ON THE FARM.

A potato went on a march
And sought an onion bed.
"That's pie for me," observed the squash,
And all the beets turned red.
"Go away," the onion, weeping, cried;
"Your love I cannot bear."
The pumpkin be your lawful bride,
You cantaloupe with me!"
But onward still the tuber came
And laid down at her feet;
"You could never by any name,
And it will smell so sweet;
And I, too, am an onion root,
And you I've come to love."
He don't turn up your lovely nose,
But sympathize with me!"

"I do not carrot all to wed,
So go, sir, if you please."
The modest onion meekly said,
"And lettuce, pray, have need
Do think that you have never seen Myself or my kindred spoke Too long a maiden I have been For favors in your eye!"
"Ah, spare a carrot!" the tuber prayed,
"My cherry-red bride you'll be;
You are the only weeping maid
That's curried now with me!"
And so the wily tuber spoke
He caught her by surprise
And, giving her an artichoke, Surrounded her with his crew.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

The Toronto firemen believe there would be less danger from open use of fireworks than from exploding them on the city.

Two men by the name of Stratton are on Her Majesty's pay roll in Ontario. One draws $500 per month as Provincial Secretary and the other $4 per month as Postmaster. It is said the latter eats and sleeps better than the former.

Aldermen and Councilors are often called Solons. Solon was, if we remember right, one of the wise legislators of Greece. But this cannot be an applied analogy to the majority of aldermen and councilors of this age. The analogy might be right too if we were to make a distinction between Greece and "Greece."

Much is being said about the amount of crime that constantly prevails. We think if there were a few lashes added to the sentence each week there would be less crimes than there is. Imprisonment, with three meals per day, a comfortable bed and the mastering of a trade in penitentiary is simply a premium upon crime. There should be some severe flogging that would give experienced crooks and juvenile thieves a terror of the jail. The sooner it is adopted the better will be the safety of private property.

Speaking in the New York South African committee the nobleman Webster Davis, late assistant secretary of the interior of the United States, who as it is generally known, resigned his position that he might speak freely regarding the present war, said: "McKinley's all right, he is a patriot of the Lincoln type." We will bet a dollar to a doughnut that after the Boer peace delegates have interviewed McKinley that he will be the greatest enemy of the United States.

A private in the Dublin Fusiliers, who collected a quite surprising number of bullets in his body, was assailed with questions by a pompous legislator from Cape Town. He wearily described his wounds. Two bullets through his helmet, one in his shoulder, another in his "fuf," and two explosive bullets through his left breast. "It's a wonder you weren't killed," said the legislator. "They must have passed perilously near the region of the heart." "They did that, indeed," said the Fusilier, "but I was right enough, for sure me heart was in me mouth." There is no getting over the fact that Pat is always equal to any occasion.

The Ottawa and Hull Fire Committee have issued a notice to the effect that no more clothing is needed for the fire sufferers, sufficient supplies of that nature having been received.

Owing to the paper famine caused by the destruction of the large paper mills of the Eddy and Laurendeau company by fire, it is proposed to give the newspapers some relief by cutting off the postage and abolishing the duty on American manufactured paper.

The First Baptist Tabernacle, of Cincinnati, is to be connected by telephone with each of its members as desire to hear the sermon and services without leaving their homes. A transmitter has been placed in front of the pulpit, and the Cincinnati Telephone Company will put the instruments of subscribing church members in connection with it. The pastor of this church, the Rev. Dr. Barbour, some time ago had a transmitter in his pulpit, which was connected with the private line of an elderly lady who was unable to leave her house to attend church. This arrangement is said to have worked satisfactorily for nearly four months. We have no objection to such a telephone connection as the latter, but when it comes down to putting in a system like the one above described we think it will serve to create an habitual Sunday inaction. It will be safe betting that such of its members as desire to hear the sermon without leaving their homes will have their phones placed close enough to their beds to enable them to "unozze" through the service.

"Ex Pres." Kruger as it will soon be written will it is said "seek refuge in the United States." We don't think he will be the "greatest of all the gods." It is the policy of such American politicians as Webster Davis to take the refuge of the earth and shelter them peacefully in their great land of liberty where the eagle will screech with joy when "Kruger comes marching home."

President Compters of the American Federation of Labor, addressing a meeting at Toronto recently said that in his opinion eight hours work per day was enough for the average man, and so it is, but while there are one class of laborers waiting to cut the throat of the others, in other words, while one class of laborers are ready to take the place of a striking class the eight hour day will be a long time coming.

The success with which Lord Roberts is now leading the British forces in South Africa is proving a bitter pill for Russia, France and portions of the United States to swallow. The turning of the tide robs them of a great deal of the enjoyment they found in criticizing the action of the British generals and in abusing the whole British army. Before the leaves begin to fall great Britain will have added another Kingdom to her vast domain. This will leave a deep sting in the French and Russian governments, who have all along, been jubilant while the British were meeting with reverses and humiliated when the news of British successes were cable.

House Cleaning Song.

Sing a song of cleaning house.
Pocket full of nails!
Four and twenty dustpans,
Scrubbing broom and pail!
When the door is opened,
Wife begins to sing—
"Just help me move this bureau here,
And hang this picture, won't you, dear?
And stretch this one a little more,
And drive this nail, and screw this screw,
And here's a job I have for you—
This closet door will never catch,
I think you'll have to fix the latch;
And oh, while you're about it, John,
I wish you'd put the cornice on
And hang this curtain when you're done
I'll hand you up the other one!
This box has to have a hinge
Before I can put on the fringe;
And won't you men that broken chair?
It'd like a hook put up right there;
The bureau drawer must have a knob;
And here's another little job—
I really hate to ask you dear—
But could you fix a bracket here?"
And on it goes when there are through
With this and that and those to do,
Ad infinitum and more, too,
All in a merry jiggle,
And isn't it enough to make
A man wish he was single? (Almost).

The favorite cathartic is Hood's Pills, 25 cents.

This Was a Narrow One.

Many stories of marvelous escapes from Boer shells that were poured into Kimberly during the siege have been told, but this is equal to any of them. Miss Mallett was lying on her bed in her room when a servant came to the door and asked for some money. Half-raising herself to take the purse from her pocket, her feet were removed from the bed, when one of the hundred-pound monsters crashed through the roof of the house, struck part of the bed on which but a moment before the lower portion of her body had been lying, and so on through the floor without exploding. The bed was covered with debris from the roof, but the woman escaped unhurt.

The Marrying Month--Like Easter a Movable Festival

There is a common idea that when a man and woman fall in love and make their minds to commit matrimony, the time and seasons have nothing to do with the matter, but that, having resolved to take the desperate leap, they do so without regard to month or day. If this were the case, then according to the doctrine of probabilities, the marriages of the world should be pretty evenly distributed over its months, and no one could have the preference over another. It is, however, a singular fact that there are favorite months for marriage; that even impatient lovers restrain their desire to be indiscreetly and wait the season which their country in deemed most propitious for matrimony. The month of June, like the festival of Easter, is movable. It is not the same in all countries, for, while some countries prefer one, others choose an entirely different month, often in their season, as the favorite for solemnization of marriage rites. Russia, for example, considering the importance and sanctity of Christmas, the festival and of Easter as the holiest of the season of the year. It is not unreasonable to conclude that the greatest number of marriages would take place either in December or in the Easter month. Such, however, is not the case, for instead of being one or the other of her favorite festivals at the time of her marriage, the Russian girl chooses the month intervening between the two, the most suitable for assuming the new responsibilities of the marriage relation.

The month of December is the worst of the year among the Russians for marriage purposes, but for a quite different reason from that which makes it unpopular. Throughout Europe, Russia, the Advent season is distinguished above all others as the season of courtship. In many of the villages there are still held marriage fairs, at which are assembled all the eligible young women of the village, each clad in her choicest attire, and virtually placed on exhibition for inspection by the young men and their parents, for it should be understood that the fathers and mothers are very important factors in determining the course of true love.

the land of the Northern Bear. Usually they manage the business on beginning to end, selecting a young, healthy girl, suitable for their son, then looking up her parents, and offering with them as to the items property each family shall contribute to the new establishment. Finally, an agreement is reached, the kitchen utensils, the bed, the two chairs, a little stock of provisions and the picture to hang in the corner of the room are duly apportioned between the two households. In January or February, at a date convenient to the family of the neighbors, who all are other affairs of the same kind, the bride is invited, come with her trousseau, put up a house for the wedding people, and feast for a week at the expense of their parents.

HUNGARIANS' CHOICE.
In Hungary the most favorable months for matrimonial purposes the January, February and November, the first having 165, the second 267, and the third 284, out of every 1,000. The winter season in the land of the Huns seems therefore, the most favorable for marriage, a fact which may be noted, however, in nearly all agricultural countries, for not only do the young people of both sexes have more leisure during the winter for those social entertainments which in every country are provocative of matrimony, but they also find this season has its advantages as a time of preparation, marrying and living with their parents until spring, then setting up an establishment for themselves. During the summer months the intense heat of the great Hungarian plain, while possibly having no effect upon the courting, seriously discourages matrimony for the number of marriages in June, July and August combined do not equal that of January alone.

GREEKS CHOOSE OCTOBER.
In Greece, which is further to the south than Hungary the cooler months are in high favor. Among the people who recently made so signal a failure in their effort to thrash the Sultan, unfavorable marrying months are October 461; January 148; November, 145; and April, 135; the preference for October being probably inspired in part, at least, by the deliciousness of the season. In September the summer heat comes to an end, the autumn rains revive the withered foliage, the flowers once more bloom, the hills are again green and for a few weeks the land of Demosthenes enjoys a second spring.

IN SUNNY ITALY.
In Italy, as in Greece, the pleasant months of the year are preferred for purpose of matrimony, the greatest number of unions taking place in February, November, April and October, which have 167, 139, and 111, respectively. In March, the number falls off to 46 in the 1,000, a fact accounted for, not only by the inclemency of the season, but for March is to Italy what May is to lands of higher latitude, but by the discouragement of marriages by the clergy during the annual period of humiliation and prayer. There was a time when the church peremptorily forbade the celebration of the sacrament of matrimony by any of its priests during Lent, save in case where one of the parties was believed to be dying and desired to have the ceremony performed for the benefit of the survivor; but so many eager and impatient couples crawled through this loophole by feigned illness and subsequent recovery that the ecclesiastical authorities finally relaxed the rule, and contented themselves with discouraging Lenten marriages, a still more effective deterrent being found in the conscientious scruples of the guests against eating and drinking the good thing provided on such occasions.

The effect of Lent on matrimony may be seen by a contemplation of the marriage statistics of two cities, Berlin and Vienna, on the capital of the German empire, where Protestantism is in the ascendant, the other of a Roman Catholic state. In Berlin April is the best month in the year; in Vienna it is one of the worst; the former city having 168 in 1,000, and the latter but 78; the difference representing in some degree, the regard felt in the north for the period of fasting.

HOW IT WORKS IN FRANCE.
In France, where the women at least are devoted to the fashion, the influence is almost as strongly marked as in Austria, impatient couples hurrying to be married before the beginning of Lent and after the conclusion of that period, thus making February and April two of the best months, the former having 163 and the latter 111 in 1,000. As to the months next in favor are November and June, with respectively 131 and 118. July, August and September are not popular either in urban or rural France; though, of course, there is giving in marriage during the warmest and most comfortable months the business suffers a serious decline in the summer season. This however, is the rule of the world over. When the dog star rages by some curious contradiction the fever of love is tempered to moderation, perhaps on the theory of Similia Similibus, or perhaps because young people find the heat of the sun sufficiently oppressive without elevating their own temperature by the fire of love. The most ardent avowal does not protest much when the thermometer is at 100 Fahrenheit; he gives himself a rest and lets the party of the second part take a good deal for granted until the mercury climbs down from its lofty perch and the cool breeze of autumn dry up his perspiration, and fan again into a blaze the smoldering fire on the altar of his devotion.

THE SCANDINAVIANS.
In Scandinavia, where it might be expected that the months of spring, the pleasantest of the year, would be most popular for marrying, there is something of a disappointment in the discovery that this is not the case, but that the clergyman's busy season is the early winter, the months of November and December being the favorites, one with 164, the other with 154. For this there is a reason quite sufficient to account for the popularity of so unpropitious a season. Throughout Scandinavia the principal industry is fishing. It is carried on to some extent during all months of the year, but when the West Indian winds sweep across the Atlantic in the late autumn and early winter and last into fury the waters of the narrow fjords on the Norwegian coast, even the hardy descendants of the Vikings hesitate to venture forth on a useless as well as dangerous task, for winds and waves that imperil the life of the fisherman also prevent the success of his voyage. The spring and summer, with a few pleasant weeks in the autumn, are his fish harvest season, and during these his days and a large portion of his nights are passed in the boat, the people of the coast. Throughout the English-speaking world the favorite wedding month is June, during which, as a rule, occur nearly two-thirds of the 1,000 marriages every year. The antiquarians who are fond of finding far-fetched analogies trace the preference for June weddings back to Roman days, when the month of June was sacred to Juno, the patroness of brides and matrimony. If they were correct, it would be reasonable to suppose that the June month would be most popular in Italy, where the country people still retain many relics of pagan superstition and observance. The fact that June is no longer the favored month in Italy, but that as already shown, climatic and religious influences have shifted the majority of the weddings to other months, causes, rather than a deduction from the month of June, have been at work on the British Isles. In that high latitude the month of June is the season which in the middle United States is represented by May, the season of budding leaves and blooming flowers. Love-making in the spring time when the language of flowers is on every lip, when the birds are billing and cooing on every bough, when the balmy breezes invite to outdoor life, is as natural to the inmate of the palace as of the tenement. The early English settlers in America located in a country whose climate did not materially differ from the season of that of England, and from New England the preference for June spread little by little over the whole continent.

THEN COMES OCTOBER.
Next after June popularity comes October. For this month also is a favorite period for the contraction of alliances matrimonial (the men of books and learning find an antiquarian explanation in the fact that among both Greeks and Romans in autumn, the season of grapes and vintage, occurred one of the most notable festivals of the year. But in this, as in the former case, it seems useless to seek far-fetched reasons when a plain common-sense explanation is at hand. In this country spring and autumn are the pleasantest seasons of the year and even in matters of the heart people consult their own convenience far more frequently than is generally supposed.

WEDNESDAY THE FAVORITE.
So far as the day of the week is concerned Wednesday is the favorite. If there were anything in the antiquarian theory, the favorite week day among the Anglo-Saxons ought to be Friday, for Freia, the Saxon goddess after whom our day of ill-luck and misfortune is named, was like Juno, apostrophe of matrimony, but no English or American girl, however devoid of superstition, would care to take the risk of being married on Friday. Freia was the wife of Woden, who has given the name to our Wednesday, but the transfer of the favorite week day for weddings from the day of Freia as among the pagan Saxons to the day of Woden, was probably caused by convenience rather than by any regard for the feelings of either Woden or his spouse. Wednesday is the middle day of the week, and therefore the most convenient, for it affords time for preparation after the preceding Sunday, and opportunity for travel before the Sunday following. Thus in the day of the week, as in the selection of the month, the convenience of those interested becomes the most important factor.

TEST MARKET REPORTS

PETERBOROUGH.

MR. ENGLISH'S REPORT.

There has been another very dull week in the market, and prices are still coming in. The farmers are all busy expecting to be through with their rush week. Next week's market should be a fair one. The following prices ruled during the week.

Wheat.—There were a few loads of No. 1 and No. 2, and sold readily at last week's quotations 63 to 64c.

Oats.—As indicated to the farmers in a week's report, there was a good demand for oats, and quite a load was sold. There is a ready market for No. 1. Prices, 30 to 31c.

Peas.—There were a few loads of peas this week and prices were firm small as selling at 63 to 65c and Canadian duties at 75 to 76c.

Rye.—A few loads of rye came on the market and sold readily at 50c.

Barley.—The buyers were enquiring for rye, but only two loads were on the market this week. Quotations 45c.

Blackwheat.—One load was offered and sold on the market at 45c.

Butter.—There was a good supply of butter on the market, and prices were the same as last week. It is particularly requested that pound rolls be well up to weight. Quotations, 10 1/2c.

Eggs.—There is a good market for eggs at the prices quoted last week—9 to 10 1/2c.

Cheese.—Several loads of April cheese are marketed this week, being sold to Geo. Fitzgerald, for Hodgson Bros., Montreal. The prices realized were between 10 1/4 and 10 1/2c. The factories which weighed on the market were Central Smith, Trevern, Shearer and Lang.

Hay.—There were nearly 50 loads offered this week, and sold from 7.50 to 8c but the average price was 7.50c. There was very little clover hay and no enquiries were made for small lots.

Straw.—A number of farmers have asked to the chances of marketing straw. There have been a few enquiries for it in the week, but no doubt the livery men will get it. Prices, 12 to 13c.

Hides.—There was very little change in the price this week, with the exception of black skins, which were a little firmer.

Live Stock.—The live stock market this week has been fairly active, quite a few cattle coming in, as well as a number of hogs. Prices all around seem to be very much firmer. There seems to be no appearance of a change in the market, although a decline in the price was looked for.

Mr. McParland of New York, shipped several carloads of yearling calves to American points. He has been paying 25 to 30c per hundred for good colored steer calves, and 22.50 and 23c for other calves. The American market, in respect seems to be firmer. Mr. J. Hughes of Cavan brought in five very early finished steers and cows which sold to Messrs. Leblond & Gandy at 34.35 per hundred. There were two very fine export steers, which weighed 2,350 lbs.

Mr. John Mervin bought a fine steer and a bull from Mr. Geo. Russell at 4c per lb.

This hog market on Wednesday was a very large one and the quality of hogs brought in was much better than has hitherto been brought in. Mr. Robert Stewart bought his usual quota and Stabler Bros. had a very large drove. The prices paid were in the neighborhood of 36 per hundred for select hogs.

Light hogs were only worth 34 and 35 Neck fat sold at 35.25 to 35.50. All these hogs were weighed on the market and the drovers and sellers were generally satisfied with the weighing done by the market clerk.

The town is assisting the new market clerk in every way in order to have everything handy for the farmers. A new set of platform scales will be installed shortly and the pens will be enlarged in order to accommodate the increased number of cattle and hogs.

Farmers having heavy finished steers would do well to leave their names with the market clerk at the first opportunity as it will assist him in giving information to the buyers who are looking for such stock.

A WIDEAWAKE CHURCH.

It Advertised, Created Interest and Got the Crowd.

The First Universalist Church in Heverly, Mass., began last October to advertise its theology. The aim was to put our distinctive beliefs before the people of the city. Each week for about four months we took from ten inches to half a page in the Saturday edition of the Times. An almost half-page description of our church, its organization and its work constituted the opening article. Then our creed was printed. Short articles followed stating our beliefs in regard to God, the Christ and immortality. Longer articles were prepared and circulated as tracts. Reasons for contributing to the support of the church, even if one did not attend, were given. Offerings to the Universalist Church were suggested. The benefits of the Bible school were dwelt upon and parents were urged to send their children to the First Universalist Sunday school. A special series of doctrinal sermons was arranged to follow the advertising and full reports of the sermons were printed in the papers.

Results.—Our church and our theology in a few weeks became the best known in the city. The advertising was novel in this section. People talked about it. Theological discussions were frequent in the streets and in the shoe factories. Universalist literature was called for and thousands, year after year, of pages were distributed. The church was filled every Sunday evening during the time of advertising, the Sunday school room adjoining was used to accommodate the overflow, and on one evening at least over two hundred people were unable to gain admittance to the building. There was absolutely nothing sensational in the advertisements or in the preaching.—"The Pastor," in the Church Economist.

A POOR PIECE OF WORK.

The Sewer Connection With the Stanley Piano Co. a Disgrace.

For several months past the Stanley Piano Company's building has been in a very unsanitary condition, due to the negligent manner in which the sewer pipes were laid by the town some three years ago. The Times made a visit to the scene of the trouble yesterday, the Stanley Company having been served by the Board of Health with a notice to remove from their premises all nuisances at present existing thereon, such as sewer gas or any other unsanitary matter of any kind, within twenty-four hours from the receipt of the notice. If not complied with legal action would be taken. Acting in conjunction with the terms of the notice Mr. Stanley opened up the road in front of his premises. A glance clearly showed the cause of the trouble, which throws the matter upon the officials. The eighteen inches long showed a rise of four inches, and in some places three and four were on the incline. Others had become broken as he required. During the cold winter weather it was necessary to keep the windows in the top story open and send up additional steam to keep the flat half-heated. The basement of his premises has been flooded, and considerable damage of stock has thus been caused.

Speaking of the matter, the Stanley said: "It is one of the most regrettable features of the town, and must prove a serious detriment to the future welfare of the town. If manufacturers are to be subject to the mercy of parties who know no more about sanitary inspection than some of the folks fresh of a farm."

The treatment Mr. Stanley is receiving is simply gross injustice. Here we have a gentleman who has placed his wealth in our midst, employing a considerable number of hands, who spend their earnings here, and who has been preparing plans for some time for the building of large additions to his premises, receiving in plain words unqualified discouragement. We do not know what shape the matter will take, but we hope the town will at once take the matter in hand and put the sewer connection in good shape.

YOUNG'S POINT.

The steamer Majestic is in better than ever. She has been completely overhauled, and will again be under the command of Capt. Scollard, while Mr. Frank Young will look after the furnaces. This boat is very popular. The Lakeview House has been put in order for summer business. Mr. Kearney is a model hotel man.

Mr. C. Young, whose illness was reported through the Times, has completely recovered. The Brooks House is again to the fore. This house was very popular last season, and the outlook for the future is very bright.

Rev. Father Fitzpatrick has chosen Lakefield for his picnic grounds this year. The choice is, perhaps, a wise one, although many would like to have had it at the old place. The picnic is the great event of the season for the locality, and large crowds are expected this year on the 24th of May, the day set for the event.

The Times is read by everybody in this locality. It is the brightest and best newspaper that comes to the point.

Burleigh Falls Power.

Lindsay Post.—Mr. Alex. Culverwell, of Peterborough, managing director of the Central Ontario Power Co. is in town to-day to consult the company's local director, Mr. R. J. McLaughlin. Mr. Culverwell reports his company has recently closed a power contract of $12,000 per year, and has almost completed negotiations for a new manufacturing concern for Lindsay, who require over one hundred horsepower.

The company at present are arranging to start hydraulic work at their Burleigh Falls property.

Sudden Death.

The death took place in Ashburnham Thursday of Mr. William Speer, a well known citizen of Ashburnham. He was sick only two days and his death was quite unexpected. He resided from his farm two months ago to reside in Ashburnham. He was 64 years of age. He leaves a widow and four daughters. The children are Mrs. Stephen Gaskins, Ashburnham, Mrs. John Spence, Toronto, Mrs. Thistlewaite, New York, and Miss Mary and Ann, who reside at Monroe Ave., Ashburnham, from which place the funeral will take place on Sunday at 2 o'clock. Interment will be made at the Little Lake cemetery.

A PROFESSIONAL WOMAN.

Experiments Made With Food.

A certain professional woman in New York, connected with one of the large institutions there, has had a curious experience with an experiment in using certain kind of food. It seems that in October last she had a serious illness and was at the point of death, the brain and body in the last stages of exhaustion. Her remarkable experience with the food was brought to the attention of the makers by word of her friends, and in reply to a letter she wrote as follows: "I have no objection to the public knowing of the wonderful transformation my system has undergone by the use of Grape-Nuts since November, 1899. I began using the food when convalescing and when in an exceedingly low condition. And used a small quantity and became so fascinated with the flavor that I gradually discontinued nearly all other food, including tea and coffee.

"Up to now I have consumed about 150 packages and have gained 20 lbs. in flesh. Am a marvel to all my friends who are aware of my former state of health. There are about fifty families who have adopted the use of Grape-Nuts because of my experience. You can give my name and home address, but do not mention my profes-

THE QUEEN'S BIRTHDAY.

A Programme of Events Drawn Up for the 24th May.

The following is the programme of events for the Queen's Birthday celebration in Peterborough:—The programme includes a grand military parade of infantry and cavalry starting at 10.30 a.m. from the Central Park, where a feu de joie will be fired at noon after which the school children will sing patriotic songs.

In the afternoon a bicycle parade will be held, when wheels will be offered for the most attractive decorated bicycles.

The "sports" begin at half past two on Nicholas Park oval.

The committee in charge of the bicycle parade is composed of Messrs. E. E. Lord, chairman; Frank McPherson, Fred Davidson, Thos. Barrie, Albert Talbot and J. M. McLeod.

The sports committee is composed of Messrs. R. E. Layfield, Quarter Sergeant; Lieutenant Walker, E. C. Patterson, Major Miller, Capt. Bennett, Capt. Clegg, Lieut. McWilliams, George Tovey, A. H. Stratton, Staff-Sergeant Sharpe, C. F. McGill, Sergt. Wand.

In the evening fireworks will be fired from the top of the Court House hill by Chief Rutherford, Assistant-Chief Craig and the fire brigade assisted by Alderman C. B. Robertson, Major Miller and P. H. Dobbins.

Yesterday morning Mr. Robert Fair and Mr. Alex. Gibson canvassed the merchants for the purpose of raising additional funds and succeeded in raising $54.00. Those contributing were Robert Fair, LeBrun, Alex. Gibson, R. M. Roy, A. H. Stratton, E. F. Mason, W. G. Ferguson, Myles Henry, Richard Hall & Son and C. N. Brown, signal connection." Mrs. E. N. Wood, 832 Amsterdam Ave., New York City.

There is a reason. The makers of Grape-Nuts select certain parts of the grains of the field that contain delicate particles of phosphate of potash and albumen. These elements, when combined in the human body, go directly to rebuild the gray matter in the brain and nerve centres of the body.

This is a demonstrated fact and can be proven by any one who cares to make the test. When one nourishes and builds up the brain and nerve centers, that is practically the keynote to the whole health proposition, for when the nervous system is in perfect poise, all parts of the body respond.

Grape-Nuts are for sale at all the large grocery stores in the country and can be found in use in practically all of the best families in America.

How would it be to get all the pro-Borders in town and make them lead the procession on the Queen's birthday? They'd be right in line with the Borden in Africa then, who are leading the procession to Pretoria.

Messrs. R. Hall & Co. are going out of the ordered clothing business and will begin Tuesday next to sell off everything in that department at a bargain. Give these people a call and see what they can do for you.

Royalty

Editor Morning Times: Sir,—If the Queen was not royal what would be her name? 2. What are the names of the royal families of the leading monarchs of Europe? 3. What would happen if the both President and Vice President of the United States died?

Ans.—1 Mrs. Albert Wettin. 2. Guelph of British Empire; Romanoff of Russia; Hohenzollern of Germany; Boyov of Italy; Bourbon of Spain. 3. In case the President died first, the Vice President would become President. If the other way, the Senate would elect a Vice President.

The Constable Backed.

Editor Morning Times: Sir,—I am very much interested in the row which is going on between the County Constable and Chief Roedel, over the question which of the two are to do the county work. I think, sir, you struck the nail squarely on the head when you suggested that all fees earned by our overpaid constable go into the town treasury. This would certainly end the dispute. I hope our Council will at once take this matter up and see that the suggestion is given effect.

"A Cheerful Look Makes a Dish a Feast."

"Cheerful looks" depend just as much upon physical well-being as upon natural disposition and temperament. If the blood is disordered, the brain is starved, and no "dish is a feast," for the reason that the vitalising elements do not reach the proper spot.

A step in the right direction is to purify the body by the use of a natural remedy. Hood's Sarsaparilla is Nature's remedy. It acts upon the blood, and whether the seat of the disorder is brain, stomach, liver or kidneys, the purifying process of this medicine is equally sure and successful. It never disappoints.

Great Sufferer.—"Have used Hood's Sarsaparilla for indigestion, constipation and finds it builds up the whole system and gives relief in cases of catarrh." WILLIAM E. WILSON, Montreal, N. B.

Sour Stomach.—"My system was out of order. I suffered from headache and sour stomach. Took Hood's Sarsaparilla, my health improved and I gained 15 pounds." MAXWELL D. SHARROW, Colebrook, Ont.

Bad Cough.—"My sister was troubled with a cough which caused pain in her left side. She was confined to her bed. We gave her Hood's Sarsaparilla and in a few weeks she was able to sit up in bed, her appetite improved and the cough and accompanying pain disappeared." LIZZIE WALKER, 24 Cottingham Street, Halifax, N. S.

Dyspepsia.—"My husband suffered with dyspepsia. Physicians did not benefit him. Two bottles of Hood's Sarsaparilla relieved him. My husband's father and our little boy have been wonderfully benefited by this medicine." MRS. O. F. CHAMBERLAIN, Glen Sutton, Que.

THE FORCE OF HABIT.

Showing How Completely One Habit May Supplant Another.

"Habit is a curious thing," said Mr. Joggelin, "but the completeness with which one habit can be supplanted by another seems more curious still."

"I had a chair that I had used for years and which, as I was firmly convinced, was by long odds the most comfortable chair ever made. After breakfast, when I read the paper, I used to sit in that chair, and after dinner at night I settled down into it, with a cigar, in peace and happiness and thought there never was a chair that combined so many good points as to height and pitch of seat and slope of back and all that. I had never seen a chair that suited me so well."

"But one day this chair was tipped over or something or other happened to it. I don't know what, but something so serious that it was put out of commission. With our usual conservative slowness we put off from day to day and from week to week getting that chair repaired, and, as a matter of fact, it was two or three years before we had it fixed up and brought into use again. Meanwhile I had singled out another chair which I came commonly to occupy. This didn't begin to be as first so comfortable as the old one had been, but gradually its objectionable points disappeared, and I'm blessed if it didn't begin to develop good points that I had never suspected in it, and I came at last to look upon it as a very comfortable sort of chair indeed. But at last the old chair—the good old chair—was fixed up again and brought back into use, and the day it appeared I looked forward to settling down in it at night with all the old time comfort."

"But when, with all those pleasant anticipations, I came to sit in it again I did not find the pleasure that I had expected. It was too high or too low or the seat sloped too much or something. I don't know what. It wasn't as it used to be to me. I tried it once or twice more after that and then gave it up and went back to the new chair. My new habit had become firmly fixed. I liked the new chair better, and now as I settled down in it its good points were at once emphasized and softened and rounded into completeness, and I accepted it in full as the chair of satisfying comfort and wonder as I looked across at the other what I ever could have seen in it to make me like it so much."

India Rubber Industry.

The bulletin of the Royal gardens, Kew, states that the falling off in the production of India rubber at Lagos is due to the reckless way in which the trees are being exhausted. There is a want of control over the collectors, who tap young trees and destroy whole rubber forests by overworking, so that this industry, which is an important source of wealth to the colony, is in danger of extinction. A similar disaster occurred in Madagascar, and now active steps are being taken to preserve the industry by the establishment of plantations of rubber producing plants.

Shoes in Olden Days.

Early Britons wore shoes of raw cowhide, with the hairy surface outward. The Anglo-Saxons showed an advance, for they were black and laced by a leather thong. Then came what might almost be termed the bag shoe of the Merovingian period, tied round the ankle, a similar easy sort of covering obtaining in Germany, and so by gradual stages from the medieval shoe to the pointed shoe, a queer early German specimen, the band round the ankle being of engraved brass. The Irish shoe of early date is worthy of note, as for many years the Irish went not only barefooted, but barelegged, while their bodies were most gorgeously arrayed.

KROONSTAD IS OCCUPIED BOERS IN FULL RETREAT

Lord Roberts Entered the Town With His Troops
Last Saturday Evening.

THE BOERS HURRIEDLY TREKKING TO VAAL RIVER

The War, so far as Free State is concerned, is Practically Over, as the Berghers are heartily tired of fighting and the Quarrel with Transvaalers.

London, May 12.—The British troops occupied Kroonstad without opposition, the Free State having retired on approach of the forces. The Union Jack is now flying in the market place. President Steyn has removed the seat of government to Lindley, about fifty miles distant.

Kroonstad, Orange Free State, May 12.—The arrival of Lord Roberts was hailed with enthusiasm by all the inhabitants. Three hundred Free State men were anxious to surrender. The bridge to the south had not been destroyed, but the large bridge near the town had been demolished. The Irish Brigade with the Federals yesterday burned the goods shed. According to the townspeople many of them were drunk. The Boers are now trekking to the Vaal river, where they are encamped. Gen. French encamped northeast of the town and despatched a force to cut line. The project succeeded late last night, but unfortunately after the departure of the last train. Although the troops had marched 16 miles, they were in excellent form on entering the town. Many arrests have been made, chiefly of those who had maligned the British. It was found that many persons have been deported from Ladybrand for ultra-sympathy with the British.

President Steyn has gone to Lindley the new seat of the Free State Government. A number of the burghers are trekking homeward, and opposition in the Free State is practically over. All the prisoners in the hands of the Boers agree that the quarrel between the Free State and the Transvaalers is so acute that the Transvaalers have decided to leave their allies, whom they accuse of cowardice and lack of patriotism. Most of the Transvaal prisoners think that if they are defeated at the Vaal River the Boers will retreat to Pretoria, but there appears to be a growing distrust in the Transvaal Government. In a word, the back of the Boer resistance seems to have been broken. Burghers are fighting without their previous stubbornness. They seem ready to retreat on the slightest pretext.

The prisoners, even the Transvaalers, appear glad to have been captured. They say they are sick of a war which can have only one end. Several have exclaimed: "We have lost our liberty, but why should we lose our lives?"

London, May 14, a.m. The war is practically over says the Daily Chronicle's Kroonstad correspondent, and in less definite terms this is the vein to be gathered from all the correspondents. They picture the Boers as utterly demoralized and disheartened by Lord Roberts' unexpected rapid advance and by his facile turning of the carefully prepared positions of the Boers. There was practically no fighting, and there are no further details to give respecting the occupation of Kroonstad. The correspondent of the Daily Telegraph says: "The Union Jack was hoisted in the market place by Mrs. Lockhead, the American wife of a Scotchman. Mosh of the horses of the Boers are in a wretched condition, but President Kruger declared he will continue the war."

It appears that the Boers at Kroonstad had been reinforced by 3,000 men from Natal last Friday, and that altogether 10,000 with 30 guns trekked from Kroonstad on the approach of Lord Roberts. The Boers made an ineffectual stand at Boschrand and had elaborate intrenchments in front of Kroonstad, which offered great facilities for a rear guard action. Their only anxiety, however, appears to have been to get away safely with all their guns and convoys, which again they have successfully accomplished. The few stores they were unable to carry away they burned.

President Steyn is reported as having been frantic with rage, and as having kicked and cuffed the burghers, after vainly imploring them to continue the fight.

Lord Roberts after a march which is regarded as worthy of rank with his famous ous march to Kandahar, has thus covered another stage of his campaign. Experience has taught the critics to be very chary in accepting reports of Boer demoralization.

CANADIANS IN THE LEAD.

London, May 12.—11.35 a.m.—Lord Roberts telegraphs to the War Office under date of Geneva Siding, May 11, evening, as follows: "My headquarters, with Pole-Carew's division, marched twenty miles today, and are now at Geneva Siding, 14 miles from Kroonstad, and about six miles from Boschrand, where the Boers are holding entrenched positions. Gordon's brigade is in touch with them. Tucker's division is a short distance southeast and Hamilton's force is still further east."

"French, with Porter's and Dickson's brigades and Hutton's mounted infantry, is some distance due north of this place."

"We have taken nearly 100 prisoners during the last few days. All the Free State men who could give a good account of themselves have been disarmed and allowed to return to their farms."

"The nights are getting much cooler."

EIGHT MILES FROM KROONSTAD.

London, May 12.—2.30 p.m.—The War Office has received the following despatch from Lord Roberts: "Boschrand, May 12.—9.05 a.m.—I am eight miles south of Kroonstad. The enemy evacuated the first line of entrenchments during the night. We are now reconnoitering towards Kroonstad."

Gen. French's cavalry seized the drift over the Vaal river at 4.30 last evening, just in time to prevent the passage being opposed by the enemy."

BRITISH IN THE TRANSVAAL.

London, May 12.—A despatch from Klerks says that British outposts from Fourteen Streams have entered the Transvaal.

BULLER IS ADVANCING.

He Probably Intends to Turn the Biggarsburg Position.

London, May 12.—Boer reports state that General Buller is moving on Heilmakkar, probably to turn the lines on the Biggarsburg. Buller's skirmishing is reported to have taken place today near Pomeroy, Natal, in the Heilmakkar Pass.

WHITE FLAG TREACHERY AGAIN.

Inniskillings are Shot Down and Captured Under the Emblem of Peace.

Geneva Siding, May 11.—Morning.—The British forces have arrived here, marching splendidly. Gen. French in the advance. Firing was heard yesterday in the direction of his force. Some of the Inniskillings had approached a kraal where a force of Boers was concealed.

A white flag was flying from the kraal. While the troops were unsaddling their horses a deadly fire was poured in from the windows of the farm house, killing several of the Inniskillings. A score of them were also captured, most of whom had been wounded.

It is expected that the railway to the Vaal River will be completed to-night. The line is almost entirely destroyed north of the river, but beyond, where the British are, the Boers retreated from their positions too hastily to do much damage. The Boers are reported to be entrenching themselves around Kroonstad, twenty miles off.

MISSING CANADIANS RETURN.

WILL UPHOLD THE MUNROE DOCTRINE.

Senator Lodge Makes a Speech at Washington Which Foreshadows Trouble With Germany.

Washington, May 11. (special).—In the Senate today Senator Lodge (Massachusetts) declared if Germany should exchange with Denmark the Province of Schleswig-Holstein for the Danish West Indies, and if Germany should undertake to assume control, the United States, after making a protest, would send a fleet to St. Thomas to maintain the Monroe doctrine and prevent the transaction. If France or Germany should endeavor to gain a foothold in Brazil the United States would be obliged to protect and regard persistence in such a purpose as a declaration of war. The speech coming close on the heels of Secretary Root's declaration in New York of the necessity of maintaining the Monroe doctrine by the force of arms, is regarded as especially significant.

REQUIRED TO STUDY ENGLISH.

Quebec Roman Catholic Bishops Making Teaching of English Compulsory.

Quebec, May 12.—Much attention is attracted in educational and political circles here to the increased teaching of English in this province. The Roman Catholic bishops of the different dioceses of the province are making the teaching of the English language compulsory in the schools under their charge.

A few days ago complaint was made to the Bishop of Three Rivers that the Brothers did not teach the children English as their schools in St. Ann, whereat His Grace made it his business to see to the matter personally, and insisted that the English language be taught forthwith.

In the parish of St. Theile, which has not one English-speaking person,

TWO MONSTER MEETINGS HELD.

Evangelist Geil at Murray St. Baptist and St. Paul's Presbyterian Churches.

The Saturday evening attendance at the Murray Street Evangelistic services was very fair considering the outside attractions, and the fact that so many were unable to leave their business occupations. Mr. Geil expressed himself as being pleased with the number present and announced that the services would hereafter be held in St. Paul's church, to-morrow the regular 3 o'clock lecture will again begin and be repeated every afternoon until Sunday next, when the meeting will be held in the Opera House and will be open to men only. The regular evening services will be held in St. Paul's until Sunday evening next, when he will give his farewell address. Mr. Geil took for his subject Saturday night "Prayer." He said: "A Christian leads three lives. The first was a life of prayer on the circumference and is shown in the words 'Let your light so shine before men that they may see your good works, that ye may glorify your Father which is in Heaven.' People to-day go by what folks say. Your business is what God says. Oh, the life for Christ, the life for prayer."

The second life was "prayer within the precincts of home." There is no place like the Christian home. How much religion is there in your home. A young man came to me and said he wanted to go out into foreign missionary work. "How many people have you converted around your home?" None, he answered. "And you want to go out to convert foreigners and you never tried it around your home?" Well, but you see Mr. Geil, prophet hath no honor at home. "And when did you become a prophet?" Try your honor at home young man, if you are not fit to do Christian work around your own home you are not fit to try upon the poor heathen out in South Africa. If you cannot try your religion at home and succeed, you can't succeed anywhere else. A young woman stood at her father's coffin and wept bitterly. Stepping to her I asked why did she weep so intensely. I could not get a reply. I asked again. Is it because you are deprived of his care? It's far worse than that, she replied. Is it because you are thinking that your mother will be gone from you too some day? It's far worse than that she replied again. Not knowing what could be worse than that I implored her to tell me, and looking at the cold face of her father she burst out again in profuse sobbing, and replied, "It's because my father never prayed. Ah, young people, does your father pray? Is there prayer down at your house? Do you ask father to pray?"

The third life is "prayer in the state." If you lead a life of prayer in a secret place, and in the home, you will lead a life of prayer in the state, you will have a power for home and state. Christ set the Christian example when he prayed at night in the Garden of Gethsemane. The Christian should set his child an example to pray, so that he may grow up a power for home and state. An infidel, a sort of a banian rooster infidel, once said, "prayer is supreme nonsense." One day this infidel went out to row on the lake, the boat turned upside down. The little infidel hangs on for dear life. Suddenly he begins to pray, he's wet now, and he says, Oh Lord if thou wilt only get me out of here I'll do better. Mark you, he's wet now, he wants out and he prays again. He gets out, and

TO BE CROWN COLONIES AFTER THE WAR IS OVER

Mr. Joseph Chamberlain Foretells the Future of South African Republics.

THE WAR WAS JUST, NECESSARY AND INEVITABLE

Krugers Claims to Have Documentary Proof of a Devilish Conspiracy to Annihilate the Republics—His Impassioned Words to the Volksraad.

London, May 12.—Mr. Chamberlain made a speech yesterday before the Liberal-Unionist Association of Birmingham. He referred to Lord Roberts' attempt to form a new liberal-imperialist party, which would consist of "foolish political virgins, who would trim the Unionist lamps fourteen years too late."

He said that the war in South Africa was just, necessary and inevitable, and he is willing, if necessary, to take the responsibility of it upon himself and should, he fully incorporated into the standard that it was a capitalists' war, not the country will emerge from the war stronger than it had ever been before. He warned his hearers against the efforts of politicians to rob the country of the fruits of victory.

He declared that the republics must, and should, be fully incorporated into Her Majesty's dominions. After the war there must be an interval, long or short, according to the behaviour of the people, when the whole administration and appointment of the authorities to carry it out, would rest absolutely with Her Majesty's Government. The might be called a military administration, but he preferred to call it a Crown colony administration, like that of India and the West Indies. After a while the colony might become a self-governing colony. A tone of confidence and strength pervaded the speech throughout and it was enthusiastically received.

THE TIMES' COMMENTS.

London, May 12.—The Times says: The small section of people who have persuaded themselves that the war in South Africa is a crime, and Mr. Chamberlain, the head criminal will find it difficult to explain away the enthusiastic reception given by the electors of Birmingham to the Secretary of State for the Colonies. The interest of the nation, as Mr. Chamberlain said, is not for a moment domestic politics, but in the struggle into which we have been drawn by the Boers. There has never been any doubt among the vast majority of the subjects of the Crown that the cause which we are fighting for is a just cause, and that whatever misdeeds and delinquencies may have occurred in the outset the ultimate success of the operations in the Boer republics, who so rashly and insolently provoked war, was assured under the firm and steady command of Lord Roberts.

A DEVILISH CONSPIRACY.

Krugers Impassioned Words to the Volksraad.

Cape Town, May 11.—At the closing of the Volksraad on Monday, May 7, President Kruger cried out: "God of the Volksraad, shall this be the final act? No! It shall not. God will be merciful and strengthen the right. Ours is the right."

Thirty thousand burghers have fought two hundred thousand British soldiers. The providence of God we are still alive to fight our vindictive and voracious foe, our eternal enemy since 1836.

The President added that he had documentary proof of a "devilish conspiracy to annihilate the republics."

BOER AGENTS AT WORK.

They try to Induce Britons to Become Burghers of the Transvaal.

Lorenzo Marques, May 11.—Knowing the anxiety of British subjects to remain in the Transvaal, Boer agents are trying to induce them to accept burghership, promising exemption from military service. Many who have thus been entrapped have earned the contempt of genuine burghers, who in several instances have successfully re-monetized. The latest refugees amplify the former stories of command-deering and looting. The worst feature of the scandal is the seizure of ladies' and children's apparel and bicycles, and the wholesale disposal of goods for the pecuniary benefit of Boer officials.

SATISFIED WITH LYDDITE.

Lord Roberts Says the Projectile is Very Useful.

London, May 12.—In reply to a War Department inquiry as to the efficiency of other types of the Lyddite shells in use in the African campaign, Lord Roberts has telegraphed home that all the generals commanding at the front are perfectly satisfied with the new projectile. Since their first use in the Sudan war, various improvements have been made, and the 6,000 rounds sent out on Saturday in the Dunvegan Castle for use with the siege train at Pretoria are, as nearly as possible, perfection.

BOERS RAE RETIRING.

They are not Pushing Their Advance on Bloemfontein.

Eden, May 11.—The Boers south-east of Bloemfontein, who are threatening Bloemfontein, retired somewhat today, but it is impossible to say where they may turn up next, owing to their great mobility. General Grouart was in today's issue.

RELIEF NEAR MAFKING.

XA Flying Column, 3,000 Strong Has Reached Vryburg.

London, May 12.—Important war news comes to-day from Boer sources. A Pretoria telegram announces the approach of a British flying column, 3,000 strong, on the western border, moving northward by forced marches night and day. The column is reported to have reached Vryburg on Wednesday, and that place is only about 180 miles south of Mafeking. The investment of the town, therefore, may be raised in a day or two, or at least by the 18th instant, to which date Roberts asked Col. Baden-Powell to hold out. Extraordinary secrecy has been preserved with regard to the movements of the relief column which is probably the mounted portion of General Hunter's force. The main body of the division was, according to the latest reports, still at Fourteen Streams.

ADVANCE ON MAFKING.

Boer Stories of the Movement to Relieve Baden-Powell.

London, May 12.—The Lorenzo Marques correspondent of the Daily Mail, in a despatch dated Friday, May 11 says: "The Boer papers report severe fighting on the western border. The facts are very much confused, probably by design, to conceal the truth from the burghers, but there is enough to show that the Boers admit a British occupation of Taungas. Taungas is 40 miles south of Vryburg. A special despatch from Christiansburg, Transvaal, published Wednesday by the Standard and Diggers News, says: 'Six hundred British cavalry crossed the Vaal Friday at Kalkberg, about 15 miles below Fourteen Streams, and went to Taungas, followed by commandos. A second detachment of the British crossed at the same place Saturday. The Griqualand, under General Aswegen, after being reinforced, repulsed the British and forced them back in the direction of Taungas. General Aswegen was killed. The other Boer casualties were seven wounded. The British loss was heavy. Everything was brought away from the laagers except a few tents left to attract the enemy's shells. Taungas is occupied by about 3,000 British.'

MOVEMENT CHECKED.

A special telegram from Monday, dated Monday, in the same paper, records the British seizure of Fourteen Streams Sunday afternoon. It says: "The British force at Wilbrand was overwhelming. Subsequently the enemy moved their line toward our positions, bombarding them with much effect that the burghers were compelled to retreat, which they did in regular order. To-day a forward movement of the British was checked by our forces, who drove them back in two places."

A WATERY GRAVE.

A telegram from Pretoria, dated Tuesday, in the Standard and Diggers News, says: "The British in their passage along the Stellaland border toward Mafeking, near Taungas, with great success. Hundreds of British troops met a watery grave while attempting to cross the Vaal. A second advance was made upon Taungas by 7,000 British troops and 16 guns. Communication with Taungas was cut Sunday afternoon."

The Great Master of Prose and Poetry.

Rising above the babble of latter-day literature the voice of one writer rings strong and clear—the voice of Rudyard Kipling. His works are distinctively British. He writes of the Empire and the modern. He voices the thoughts and aspirations of the British people. And yet his works are read in every tongue of Europe, and in the United States he is the most popular author of the day.

If you like conventional, effeminate reading, don't take Kipling. But if you like something different—something new and fresh—if you like originality, virility, power and insight, then you want to read Kipling and own his complete works. The Times has arranged for a few sets of the authorized edition. See our offer in today's issue.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

The civic employees at Montreal are in a bit of a fix. City Treasurer Robt. has a list of over four hundred permanent employees who during the past year have had their salaries raised for various reasons. No doubt the local Lottery schemes received the bulk of their money. An effort is now being made to put an end to these illegitimate enterprises.

Any scheme which causes the citizens of Peterborough to spend their money outside of the town is a bad one. Any scheme which will cause our people to spend their money at home is a good one. Let us therefore thank the finance committee of the council for the liberal grant made for the Queen's birthday and 12th of July demonstrations at their last meeting.

An itinerant dealer in London has been selling, at half-price, apiece khaki-hooded canaries in the London suburbs. The man asserted that this variety had just been introduced into England from Morocco, and that in singing it could beat the nightingale. One lady who invested in the curiosity found that the special tint wore off the plumage of her bird in a day or two. She consulted an expert, who pronounced the specimen to be a very ordinary canary, worth a couple of shillings or so, which had been stained the popular color.

The McIntyre tragedy in Toronto in which the thirteen year old son shot his father dead because he was refused to do as he desired has been shown to be the outcome of reading these cheap trashy novels that are responsible for fully seventy-five per cent of the juvenile crime of the present day. It is time the government should enact legislation prohibiting the sale of such crime education. Why put restrictions upon the sale of certain less literate papers published in the States and allow this, the very worst class to be sold? Seventy-five per cent of the boys reading these same works steal away in silent corners to read them, when in itself is an incentive to evil. The worst is sure to follow.

The Boston Board of Health has issued the following edict affecting the barbers. The rules provide that the shops together with all the furniture, shall be kept, at all times in a clean condition. Mugs, shaving brushes, and razors shall be sterilized by immersion in boiling water after every separate use thereof. A separate clean towel shall be used for each person. Alum, or other material, used to stop the flow of blood, shall be used only in powdered form and applied on a towel. The use of powder puffs is prohibited. The use of sponges is prohibited. Every shop shall be provided with running hot and cold water. No person shall be allowed to use any barber shop as a dormitory, and every barber shall cleanse his hands thoroughly immediately after serving each customer.

The Belleville Intelligence says: "We believe Belleville has more ladies' wheels and more pretty girls riding 'em than any place of its size on the map of Canada." You wouldn't think so Mr. Intelligence if you ever visited Peterborough.

The number of people said to be affected by the famine in India is estimated at 25,000,000, nearly twenty times the population of Canada. It is further estimated that not more than one fifth of that number are actually being relieved.

A Baptist Church in Cincinnati has put in electric fans to keep the church cool during the hot weather services. No doubt that church will have the best congregations during the warm season.

"The Strength of Twenty Men."

When Shakespeare employed this phrase he referred, of course, to healthy, able-bodied men. If he had lived in these days he would have known that men and women who are not healthy may become so by taking Hood's Sarsaparilla. This medicine, by making the blood rich and pure and giving good appetite and perfect digestion, imparts vitality and strength to the system.

The non-irritating cathartic—Hood's Pills.

CZAR AND SHAH.

A Russo-British clash in Persia should at least give us some musical Lullaby war map names with which to offset the Boer tongue twisters.—St. Louis Republic.

It is quite possible that we are to have an interesting sequel to the peace receipt of the emperor of Russia and that the coming conflict between Russia and England is not far distant.—Chicago Record.

Both Russia and England have always frankly admitted that an Anglo-Russian war of supremacy in India is bound to come at some time. It is reasonable to suppose that it shall be precipitated by the government which sees a sudden advantage too great to be ignored.—St. Louis Republic.

The ardent solicitude for the amity of the shah is due to the mobilization of a Russian army on the Afghan frontier and the confessed intention to occupy Herat at an early day. Having explored all the routes to British India, the czar has decided to mark his baggage "via Persia."—Philadelphia Times.

RECENT INVENTIONS.

Breathing in rough water is made easy by a new life preserver, which has a vertical tube secured to the front of the air chamber, with a mouthpiece through which air is drawn from the top of the tube, which extends above the head.

To prevent the reins from catching under the horse's tail a new harness attachment is formed of a metal yoke secured to the back strap, with fingers extending on either side to carry the lines, a brace being set at right angles with the yoke to hold it vertical.

By the use of a Tennessee man's device horses can be checked and unchecked without leaving the carriage, a short strap being used to connect the reins over the back pad, with a second strap joining the first strap to the check reins, in order that a pull on the reins can guide the check over the hook.

UNCONSCIOUSNESS.

The Causes That Induce This Condition and Its Various Phases.

It is often difficult when a person is found unconscious to determine the cause of the condition. Yet this determination is of the greatest importance, since upon it must depend the treatment and perhaps the life of the sufferer.

Of course this is a task for the physician, and it is often one that taxes his acumen to the utmost. But there are certain signs which every one may learn to know and so be prepared to prevent maltreatment before the physician arrives.

The chief causes of a sudden loss of consciousness are apoplexy, Bright's disease, diabetes, drunkenness, opium poisoning, injury to the head, epilepsy and fainting.

A person found unconscious should be placed on his back, the clothes, especially those about the neck, should be loosened, and he should have plenty of air, curious spectators being kept at a distance.

If the breath smells of alcohol, the first thought is that the man is drunk, but it is most unsafe to assume this to be the case without corroborative evidence. The man may have taken a drink just before the accident befell him, or he may have been slightly drunk, and in that condition he may have had a stroke of apoplexy or have fallen or been struck a blow on the head, or some bystander may have poured whisky down his throat with the mistaken idea of helping him.

The head should first be examined to see if the skull is broken, if there is a wound of the scalp or if blood is coming from one of the ears, which is a sign of a fracture of the base of the skull.

Note should be taken of the breathing. If it is very slow, six or eight times or less a minute, the probability is that the case is one of opium poisoning. If the respiration is rather slow and snoring, with blowing out of the lips and of one cheek, apoplexy or concussion of the brain may be suspected.

In unconsciousness resulting from Bright's disease the breathing is usually more rapid and not noisy, and in that resulting from diabetes the inspiration is slow and prolonged, while expiration is short and quick.

A drunken man can usually be aroused temporarily if spoken to in a loud voice or pricked with a pin, and the same is true of one suffering from Bright's disease, but in apoplexy and opium poisoning the unconsciousness is usually complete.

Unconsciousness may be hysterical in its nature and may simulate any of the types mentioned above. A dash of cold water in the face will often restore consciousness with great rapidity in such a case.—Youth's Companion.

For Williams and Didn't Know It.
"John," said the wife, "who air you fer in the race fer sheriff?"
"I'm fer Tompkins just as last."
"No, John, you ain't fer Tompkins; you're fer Williams."
"I said Tompkins," replied John.
"I know you did, John. But, all the same, you're fer Williams!"
Then he made a grab for his hat and was about to make for the door when she locked it and, standing against it, said:

"Don't let us fuss over this matter, John. Be reasonable now an own up that you're fer Williams."
He fumbled with his hat and kicked the fire.
"Molly," he said, "if you ain't as good as a mind reader I'll give it up! Cause I'm fer Williams just as last! Don't you?"

WILD DAYS IN KANSAS.

BORDER TOWN WHERE MEN DIED WITH THEIR BOOTS ON.

For More Than Two Years Hays City Was Ruled by the Gun and Scores of Lives
Were Wiped Out.

The decision of Congress to give old Fort Hays to the State of Kansas for use as a branch of the State Agricultural College has started a flood of remembrances about the town of Hays City, which sprung up to the north under the protection of the garrison.
Hays City started with the building of the first trans-continental railroad across the plains. All the border characters who had followed the construction of the railroad westward went to Hays City, then known as Fort Hays.
There was nothing law nor order there for two years after the town sprang up. All the vicious, depraved people on the frontier who preyed on the railroad laborers and cowboys were at Hays City at some time between 1870 and 1876. When the railroad construction had moved westward Hays City became an exclusively cowboy town.
Ninety-five per cent of all the men in Hays City were armed. Merchants had their sleeping rooms walled in with extra boards and galvanized iron to protect themselves from stray bullets. The precaution was necessary. The dancing girls, who comprised women from 14 to 30 years, went to Hays City from all over the west. Hows of saloons and gambling houses were run openly and at full blast day and night, week after week.

HICKOK THE BOSS KILLER.

There were murderers by the score in Hays City. Wild Bill Hickok was the boss killer in Hays City. He boasted that he had killed 17 white men in his day. But Masterason, now of Denver, was in Hays City for two years. He had the reputation of having slain four men before he reached the town, and he increased the number by two men in Hays City. Over in a sun-baked cemetery on a side hill, west of Hays City, lie all who died in the town until 1880.
There are about 230 graves, and nearly 50 of them were filled by tragedies of some sort. It got its name, Hickok, 18 years ago, because so many of its occupants died with their boots on. In one grave a woman, and three men, who killed one another in a brawl about winnings at faro, were buried together. The bodies were carried directly from the dance hall, where they fell, to the grave.
Four miles south of Hays City, on the farm of a prosperous Russian, stands a cotton-wood tree (one of very few trees in this locality 30 years ago) on which five persons were lynched.

Only slight provocation was needed for murder. The Empire Hotel, a frame structure with a few bunks and much room for a saloon and gambling, was the scene of a sample shooting affair.
One day in December 1872, a gambler named Lewis, from Chicago, had a dispute with the bartender, Jim Daly, about how rich was a friend of theirs in a dance hall down the street. Lewis ran into the door, and, turning, drew his pistol and fired at Daly. The latter snatched his pistol from behind the bar and returned the fire. This was kept up until both men had emptied their pistols, and then Daly, being mortally wounded, went to the back of the saloon, laid himself out upon the billiard table and died. While the shooting was going on a little stage driver named Freeland decided to take a hand in the fighting. His only weapon was a singlebarreled, muzzle-loading pistol. Taking this in his hand, he rushed up behind Lewis, and, at the distance of only a few yards, shot him squarely between the shoulders. Then, without waiting to see the result of his shot, he dropped his weapon and fled.

The Flight of Freeland.

Lewis who happened to be wearing a heavy overcoat, did not even know that he had been shot, and continued his main fight as if nothing had happened.
When about a mile from town the fleeing Freeland saw some men and reported that he had killed Lewis. Then he continued his flight, and from that day to this no human being is known to have seen him alive or dead.

THE KILLING OF LEWIS.

It was such a flagrant case that Lewis was arrested and tried, but a trial of three days gave him the usual acquittal. The news of the killing of Jim Daly was carried to Union, and an old comrade of his from Denver, named Flanagan, buckled on his belt of cartridges, and, with his shooting iron, went to Hays City. He reached 10 days after the shooting at the Empire Hotel. He ate a big meal at the best restaurant in town, and had a dozen stiff drinks of whiskey. Then he started out to find Lewis. He found him in a keno game. Going up to the gambler he tapped him on the shoulder and said:
"So you killed my old partner, Jim.
Well, I'm going to shoot you dead."
At that he drew his pistol and shot Lewis through the forehead. His trial was the most notable case in western Kansas in those days. He was acquitted on his promise to go back to Union and stay there.

SOME OF WILD BILL'S SHOOTING.

No story of the exciting day in early Hays City is complete without something about James William Hickok, better known as wild Bill. He was a notorious desperado and man killer, and on that score was hired to keep order as city marshal in Hays City. When a salary of $200 a month was offered him he put on a silver star and took two huge loaded revolvers and started out on his new duties. His revolvers were very heavy, and his favorite way of using them was by clubbing. Grasping the handles, he would pound an obstreperous cowboy into insensibility with the outmost ease. He never let up for a moment in his endeavor to keep order. His treatment of his old companions and men made him many enemies, and he declared they would have his life. He never walked on the sidewalk, knowing there might be an armed foe lurking for him. His bitterest foe was Philip Cole, who declared he would shoot him on sight. One day Hickok stood in front of the Daisy saloon.
Cole came up the street and neared the sidewalk. There was a shot fired at the marshal, whether by Cole or some cowboys nearby will never be known, but in an instant Wild Bill drew both his revolvers and placed two bullets in Cole's breast. The holes where they entered were not two inches apart, although the men were 20 feet from each other. The shooting emptied the neighboring saloons, and 100 or more men were on the spot in a moment. Hickok ordered them disperse at once and they did so, and they dispersed. Before the bystanders had fallen back far Mike Williams, who had heard the shooting, came running up from another part of the town.
Either Wild Bill did not recognize him, or thought that Williams had turned against him, for, with the same unerring aim that he had just exhibited, he leveled both revolvers again and two more bullets found their mark.
Williams sank, bleeding, to the ground.

Alex. Ross, aged 74, of Dutton district, is dead from blood poisoning.
He stepped on a rusty nail two weeks ago.

THE BEST NEWS YET!

TROUT LAKE CITY, B. C., APRIL 20, 1900.

"Your letter came while I was out, and I note what you say financially and otherwise, and
certainly feel much interested in the property and more confident of the outcome than ever since my last explorations. I have men at work inside tunnel at $12 per foot and no stated amount of work.
I will enclose a penciling showing how we are doing the work and give my reasons for the same.
We traced two leads down by the end of Crosscut, of fine appearance (see diagram). Mr. Pettipiece was up to see the property and remained over night. I also had Mr. Shannon, the Geologist, up with me to confer with in reference to the property and the way it should be developed and so on.
He will give his opinions through the columns of the "Eagle." He is a very conscientious and careful man and slow to advance ideas without proof. I asked him what he thought of my plan of development. He carefully looked the situation over inside and out and stated it was the best. He said in reference to the property that "it was one that merited an outlay of money and one no one should be afraid to invest in." He mentioned that in many respects it resembled the "Silver Cup."
We will encounter lead No. 2 I think by May 1st. and I am very sanguine we will have Ore at over 100 feet deep. We will have to drive 100 feet to get No. 3 lead. Now if your company can stand
the expense of 100 feet of work at this time it certainly would be wise to do so, for we know at least something of the merits of No. 3. When we get the Main Ore Body located we then are made.
It is there and I hope soon to be able to report having it. The conditions have never looked better than now.
J. W. Westfall.

Copies of the "Eagle" can be had on application. The work is being vigorously continued and we hope soon to be able to report having struck the Ore Body. Matters were never better for us than now and if you want a good investment get our shares while there is time.

THE HEIGHT OF POLITENESS.

As Exemplified by an Officer on a British Man-of-war.

This is a story of the height of politeness.
It is told by Angus Evan Abbott,
the author, and it is, I believe, absolutely true. Mr. Abbott is a Canadian by birth and education, and on first coming to England he was, as most Americans and Canadians are, eager to catch a glimpse of the queen. But as her majesty did not live in his suburbs, Mr. Abbott's wish remained ungratified for some time. However, one day he found himself in Portsmouth and learned that the royal yacht, with the queen and Princess Beatrice aboard, was to cross from the isle of Wight to Portsmouth.
Hastening down to the landing place, he discovered that there was not the ghost of a chance of catching sight of her majesty on land, so he went to the waterside, hired a small boat and rowed out into the great harbor. Pushing out from the inner port, wherein rode a mighty fleet of battleships and cruisers all adutter with bunting in honor of the queen, the writer found himself on the broad outer bay, alone except for a dotted line of men-of-war's boats indicating the route to be taken by the queen's yacht.

Pulling in his oars and allowing the boat to float at will, Mr. Abbott got his glasses focused ready for the queen's yacht and put in his time reading a book.
All at once he heard a voice sounding as though it came from the clouds. It was gentle, aristocratic of accent and apologetic in diction. It said, "I beg your pardon, but would you mind letting me pass?"

Glancing quickly up, Mr. Abbott beheld the bow of the mighty battleship Minotaur towering over his little rowboat like a precipice, and peering over the brow of the cliff of iron was the calm face of a naval officer. The ship was swinging slowly into harbor and was but a few yards away, coming directly toward the tiny rowboat.

In the words of the novel, "To some the ears and pull for his life was the work of an instant." When Mr. Abbott was clear of the battleship, the naval officer, not a ghost of a smile on his face, said,
"Thank you very much," and the ship crept past. Mr. Abbott claims that naval officer to be the politest man living—

They were having a few questions in the Central School the other day on the meaning of common abbreviations and titles. "Now, what does B. C. mean?" the teacher asked a little girl who was dressed in a pink apron and wore her hair in two tiny pig tails. "Before Christ, ma'am," she answered proudly. "And what does A. D. mean?" inquired the satisfied teacher of a small boy next in line. The boy hesitated, and the little girl in the pink apron waved her hand excitedly, her eyes shining with enthusiasm. "Well, you may tell them, Mary." "Alderman Dawson," she piped, and immediately the school was dismissed for recess.

St. Andrew's Anniversary.

The sixty-fifth anniversary of St. Andrew's church and the eleventh anniversary of the ordination of the pastor, was celebrated yesterday.

Rev. A. L. Geggie, the well known and eloquent preacher of Dunn Ave. church, Toronto, conducted both services in a very able and pleasing manner. Mr. Geggie is a man of unique experiences and to-night at the reunion will give an address on "Scottish Humor." A Scotchman by birth and tuition, Mr. Geggie is eminently qualified to speak on the subject chosen and no doubt everybody will be delighted with his humor. The offerings yesterday will be devoted to home missions and the Ottawa fire relief fund. The receipts of to-night's meeting are to be devoted to the Women's Foreign Mission Fund.

The musical selections at both services yesterday were admirably rendered. The Misses Bellegambe and Wrighton and Messrs. Brown and Skitch rendered solos and quartettes. In addition to Mr. Geggie's address to-night there will be presented a program of unusual merit.

Charged with Burglary.

Two boys, David Kimball and Sidney Fisher were charged with stealing two copper boilers, one from John Weatherhead and the other from Mrs. Cameron, which they sold to a city junk dealer. Information was given the police and arrests followed. The case came up at Saturday morning's police court, both boys being remanded. Another lad named Ferguson, was charged with stealing an umbrella from Rev. Mr. Baskov. This case was also remanded. It is likely that all the cases will be tried at to-day's court.

Police Court.

Albert Allen is in the cells charged with burglarizing Thompson & Son's establishment in Havelock, on April 23, when two suits of clothes were stolen. The local police have been patiently working on the case for a couple of weeks, with the result that they secured enough evidence to warrant them in the belief that Allen was the man they wanted, and he was accordingly arrested.

WINE VS. COFFEE.

A Test Case.

"A wine maker's wife on whom I was calling a year or two ago urged me to drink a large cup of very strong coffee which I had declined to take a glass of wine for the reason that the wine affected me unpleasantly. The coffee was so strong that my head reeled and rolled for two or three days, and I decided the wine would have been the more temperate drink, after all."

"I had been a moderate user of coffee but had been suffering from sick headaches for some time and was becoming very suspicious that coffee was the cause of them. After this experiment, the drug power of coffee was made plain to me. I abandoned it altogether and had a long season of hot water drinking, which is not enjoyable, as you will admit."

"After a while I was introduced to Postum Food Coffee, and it proved a joy and promise of pleasure to come. It tasted so much like coffee that I waited for some of the evil effects to develop. They did not come, so I drank it three times a day, and still continue. The habit spread from me to the rest of the family. Even father, a confirmed coffee drinker, 84 years old, now drinks Postum with great relish, and his health has been better the past winter than for several years."

"On Christmas we had a reunion of several old-time friends and served Postum instead of coffee. One of the ladies, who holds an important educational position and must care for her nerves, said, 'Give me the smallest cup—I dare not drink coffee.' She was told that it was not coffee, but was Postum. After drinking a little of it she said, 'I never liked Postum before. The way we made it, it was so colorless and flat, but this is delicious,' and she passed up for the second cup."

"I explained that she could always have Postum delicious as if she would follow the directions as to the amount to use and the time to boil." Mrs. M. F. Haiman, Prospect park, Cal.

The circulation of the Times is increasing rapidly the past few days. Now is the time for the merchants to reach out for the summer trade. When business is most likely to be dull, that is when advertising is most needed. Judicious advertising pays. Any other sort of advertising is money wasted. The Times affords judicious advertising.

The number of people who "never read ads." is so small, indeed, that it is seldom taken into account. Practically everybody reads advertisements. Those who are most attractive in form and matter are naturally most widely read. The advertiser who can make his advertisements the most interesting is bound to obtain the widest publicity and to make the largest sales.

The Town officials have notified the Stanley Piano Company that steps will be taken to repair the sewer in front of their premises. Mr. Stanley says that this will not help him out any as the sewer is too high to drain his premises, and there must be something done to enable him to keep his building in a sanitary condition. As an evidence of the prospects of their building larger premises, Mr. Stanley says the company are now receiving large orders from the Pacific Coast, and that a New York firm are negotiating for the agency for several districts in that State.

Church of Christ Scientists.

"Soul and Body" was the subject of the sermon yesterday. The Pastor: The Bible and Science and Health explained. Soul or Spirit signifies Diet. In him we live and move and have our being. Heavens mythology and Jewish theology have perpetuated the fallacy that intelligence, soul and life can be in matter, and idolatry and ritualism and the outcome of these man-made beliefs. The science of Christ teaches us that we are made of spirit.

"Welcome, Evil, If Thou Comest Alone."

One evil that cannot come alone is impure blood. If this is allowed, it is attended by kindred ailments galore. This condition means that every vein and artery of the body, instead of carrying the flow of life, is laden with a slow and impure fluid that is harming instead of healing.

It is unfortunate when there is "bad blood" between people. It is worse when it is inside of you. Hood's Sarsaparilla will not make enemies friends, but it will make "bad blood" good blood, and blood should be of the best quality. Hood's never disappoints.

Pimples—"My face was covered with pimples and blackheads but after taking Hood's Sarsaparilla a short time, I was entirely cured, and my skin left smooth and clear. I recommend Hood's Sarsaparilla very highly." MAY RYAN, North Street, Chatham, Ont.

Erysipelas—"I would strongly urge the use of Hood's Sarsaparilla for erysipelas or any scrofulous disease. I have received great benefit from Hood's Sarsaparilla for the former complaint. It is an excellent blood purifier." Mrs. H. D. West, Church Street, Cornwall, Nova Scotia.

Tired Feeling—"I had no appetite and experienced a tired feeling. Different medicines did not help me. I tried Hood's Sarsaparilla and in a short time I was enjoying perfect health. Since then we always take Hood's Sarsaparilla when we need a blood purifier or tonic." Mrs. S. KINGS, Beatrice, Ont.

Stomach Trouble—"I had pains in my sides and kidneys. Stomach and liver troubles caused my distress. I had doctored without avail and used many medicines unsuccessfully. My sister advised Hood's Sarsaparilla and in a short time it bettered. I am now stronger and sleep better. I shall never be without Hood's Sarsaparilla in the house." ## THE TRIUMPHAL ENTRY INTO FREE STATE CAPITAL

Colonial Troops Forming Roberts' Bodyguard the First to Enter the Captured Town.

HEILBRON IS NOW CAPITAL OF THE FREE STATE.

No Further Word Received About Relief of Mafeking—Buller Now in British Country Which Had Been Administered and Annexed by the Transvaal.

Pretoria, Saturday 12.—(via Lorenzo Marquez.)

A War bulletin has been issued here announcing that the British are advancing against the Boers at Helpmakaar and Tonder's Nek. The burghers this morning, attacked Mafeking. The telegraph at Malopo says that a heavy rifle and cannon fire was heard before six o'clock Monday, and that the Kaffirs' location was in flames within an hour and was totally destroyed. At 10 o'clock he adds, everything was quiet. At a meeting of 350 Afrikaner women held yesterday it was resolved to ask the government for arms and ammunition, and to suggest that they do the work of the men officials in the town, who they declared "ought to be fighting at the front." The resolution was carried unanimously.

The Volksraad asserts that the British prisoners in the hands of the Boers will first feel the effects of the embargo placed on tinned meats and clothing destined for the Transvaal at Delagoa Bay.

London, May 15, 3.15 p.m. Gen. Buller's turning of the Biggarsberg position was effected by a bold movement. The Boers had evacuated Helpmakaar, but were making a stand Monday evening at Bloemfontein, seven miles from Dundee. The correspondents on the spot regarded this as a rear guard action intended to cover the retreat of the army. At the same time General Hildyard took Indaba, and it is reported that the Boers withdrew in disorder.

General Buller, who seems to be employing his full strength, is expected to push on. His first marches were 45 miles in three days. He is thus breaking into British territory which had been administered for six months by the Transvaal as though it were part of the Republic, the Boers holding courts and levying taxes. His success, therefore, has political as well as military consequences.

While Lord Roberts' forces are concentrating at Kroonstad, where they will rest for a day or two, his horsemen have penetrated 18 miles northward. In the squadron which cut the railway 15 miles beyond Kroonstad, was the American scout Fred Burnham.

Two hundred Boers who had hidden in the river jungle near Kroonstad to escape service, have surrendered to the British and taken the oath of allegiance. According to a despatch from Bursleigh to the Daily Telegraph, dated May 10, Paul Botha and McDonald, members of the Free-State Volksraad demanded that the country should call a meeting to vote for peace as further resistance was of no avail, and reports to make President Steyn a prisoner. Nothing definite has been heard about the expected relief of Mafeking. The Cape Town correspondents continue to wire that relief is fixed for Tuesday, or Wednesday. Inquirers at the War Office are told that the news of the relief will be made public immediately upon its receipt. No word has come to hand at midnight.

AN IMPRESSIVE CEREMONY.

Roberts' Entry Into Kroonstad Was a Notable Occurrence.

London, May 14.—The Times has the following despatch from Kroonstad, dated May 12:—

Lord Roberts' entry was an impressive ceremony. The Field Marshal and his staff rode in at the head of Gen. Pole-Carew's division, and took their stand at the Market Square, where the whole of the infantry and artillery filed past. As Lord Roberts took his position a Union Jack was floated over the Court House. The crowd cheered vociferously; only those who had recently disarmed stood aloof, evidently greatly impressed. The infantry had marched seventeen miles, yet, with the exception of the British entry into Ladysmith, no scene so impressive has been seen during the war. The Guards, swinging past to the accompaniment of drums and fifes, seemed vastly proud of this fulfillment of Lord Roberts' promise to march at their head into the next capital occupied. The Landrost sent a deputy to Lord Roberts, who refused to accept the surrender except from the Landrost in person. From the moment the entry was made the burghers began to surrender their weapons.

Many of the Boers are hiding and are ready to come in as soon as they are sure of safety.

FRENCH TOO LATE.

The move of the cavalry was just too late to cut the line north, and the Boers in their flight were able to remove all the rolling stock. Lord Roberts' movements have paralyzed discipline and concerted opposition on the part of the Boers.

English residents at Kroonstad say the burghers simply flocked back from the entrenchments, half-heartedly constructed at Boschplaat, and that Steyn, with his own hand, whipped them out of the ambulance train. The commandos after the fight at Zand river divided from six to about three, owing to deserting.

There was open conflict between the Transvaal and Free State Boers at Geneva Siding. Neither Steyn's patriotic appeals nor Botha's remonstrances seem to do anything to stem the backward flow. Steyn is reported to have gone to Heilbron. The country between Boschplaat and Kroonstad might have been effectively held if the spirit had been willing. Considerable quantities of stores were captured here, though the enemy destroyed much. General French is halting to-night at Jordan Station.

HEILBRON THE NEW CAPITAL.

He Declares This Town the New Capital of the Free State.

Kroonstad, Saturday, May 12.—President Steyn has gone to Heilbron, not Lindley. He has declared the former the new capital. Four hundred burghers have given up their arms here and in this neighborhood. Although the bridge across the Vaal has been destroyed, good deviation exists where the road ran before the bridge was constructed.

The Transvaalers are reported to be marching at the Vaal.

The Standard and Diggers' News of Johannesburg shows that disensions exist in the Transvaal Volksraad. Railway repairs are progressing rapidly. The town accepts the occupation quietly.

BOERS HAD TEN GUNS.

But Their Only Anxiety Was to Get Away Quickly.

London, May 14.—It appears that the Boers at Kroonstad had been reinforced by 3,000 men from Natal last Friday, and that altogether 10,000 men, with twenty guns, trekked from stand on the approach of Lord Roberts. The Boers made an ineffectual stand at Boschrand and had elaborate entrenchments in front of Kroonstad, which offered great facilities for a rear guard action. Their only anxiety, however, appears to have been to get away safely with all their guns and convoys, which, again, they have accomplished. The few Boers they were unable to carry away they burned. It is said the Boer houses are in a wretched condition.

VANQUISHED BY AN IRISHWOMAN.

Lord Kitchener Could Not Destroy a Farm Which She Defended with Barley.

New York, May 14.—A batch of correspondence from the London office of the Associated Press contains the following:—

"While Lord Kitchener was engaged in suppressing the Prieska rebellion he ordered the destruction of a certain farmhouse. Not seeing any signs of his orders being carried out, he rode over with his staff, and found an interesting situation. In the door way of the doomed farm stood a pretty young Dutch girl, her hands clasping the door posts, and her eyes flashing fire from beneath her sunbonnet.

"The Irish sergeant in charge of the detail: 'wisha now, acushla,' etc., the party of destruction was vainly endeavoring to persuade her to let them pass in, but to all his blandishments of 'arrah maiden turned a deaf ear, and a deadlock prevailed. Lord Kitchener's sharp 'what's this,' put a climax to the scene. The girl evidently guessed that this was the dreaded chief of the staff, and her lips trembled in spite of herself.

"Kitchener gazed sternly at her, standing bravely though tearfully there, and turned to his military secretary and said 'put down, that the commander's orders with reference to the destruction of Nightman's farm could not be carried out owing to unexpected opposition, forward, men.'

ONE KILLED, THREE WOUNDED.

Another List of Casualties in the Canadian Contingent.

Ottawa, May 13.—The Government has received a cablegram from Lieut. Col. Otter announcing that the following casualties in the Royal Canadian Rifles occurred on Thursday last:—

CANADA TO HAVE REPRESENTATION.

In the Privy Council of Great Britain at No Distant Date, Says Mr. Chamberlain.

London, May 14.—In explaining the Australian Commonwealth Bill in the House of Commons Mr. Chamberlain said it would make Australia an indivisible federal commonwealth, united for the most important functions of Government, with intercolonial free trade, a common tariff for all the colony and common control of the national defence. Such a consummation was as much to Great Britain's interest as to Australia's. What was good for Australia was clearly good for the whole Empire.

The Empire rejoiced at this great, free, progressive movement, which was a monument to legislative competency and worthy of all the great labor that had been expended on it.

After explaining the difference between the Australian proposals and the Canadian constitution, Mr. Chamberlain pointed out that as foreign countries were concerned in the new constitution, it was important that

Lord Roberts, in his despatch of Thursday evening last, thus referred to the action in which the above casualties occurred: "Hamilton's column met with stubborn resistance, and Smith-Dorrien's brigade (including the Canadian infantry), was engaged for some hours in protecting the rear and flank of his force."

CONDITION OF THE WOUNDED.

Ottawa, May 14.—According to information received at the Militia Department this morning in regard to the four casualties reported on Saturday, Pte. F. Armstrong, R.C.A., Quebec, was slightly wounded, Pte. A. R. McLean, 38th Dufferin Rifles, was severely wounded and Pte. G. W. Leonard, 22nd Oxford Rifles, was dangerously wounded.

TALKS WITH A BLACKBOARD.

Evangelist Geil on Humility and Obedience, in St. Paul's Church Last Night.

The audience at last night's meeting was not large, owing to various other attractions, which so seldom occur together. Mr. Geil spoke from the Book of Chronicles on the repentance of Manasseh and illustrated his points on the blackboard.

The first point was "He humbled himself" and asked them present if they were willing to humble themselves and become as little children, wholly acceptable unto God. The Lord says you must be dead to sin and worldly notions.

The second point was "prayer." To humble yourself you must pray. A freshman at college would not humble himself to study. One night the attendants, of several months decided to treat him in some manner calculated to make him humble himself, and taking a rail and a rope they repaired to his room at 2 a.m., and jamming the rail through the door, rushed to his bed, tied the rope around his waist, led him down and out to the well. Lifting up the lid, they promptly lowered him to within a few feet of the water, where they let him hang a few moments. Then they cut the rope and down he went into the cold water with a splash. After giving him a few duckings, they brought him up and let him go. It is unnecessary to say he humbled himself next day—there was no trouble teaching him after that.

IMMENSE STORES OF GRAIN.

General Rundle's Force Makes a Valuable Seizure.

Thaba N'Chu, May 12.—Gen. Rundle's men are now in touch with the enemy on a continuous line 30 miles long. General Grenfell entered Newberry's Mills unopposed and captured immense quantities of grain. Four hundred Boers attempted to save the stores, but finally retreated towards Klokop. The enemy's position and numbers were fairly well ascertained, but they are now retreating. Over 50 armed prisoners have been taken by our scouts, including another of Mr. Steyn's brothers. All the commandos are retreating on Lindley.

A Boys' Essay On Horneis.

A hornet is the smartest bug that flies. He comes when he pleases, and goes when he gets ready. One way a hornet shows his smartness is by attacking his own business, and making everybody who interferes with him wish they had done the same thing.

When a hornet wings a fellow he knows it, and never stops talking about it as long as his friends will listen. One day a hornet stung my pa (my pa is a preacher) on the nose, and he did not do any pastoral visiting for a month without talking about that hornet.

THE KAISER WILL GO SLOW.

Washington Believes He Will Stave Off a War Until His Navy is Prepared.

New York, May 14.—A special to the Herald from Washington says:—

It is the belief of well-informed department officials here that Germany will heed the warnings given her by Secretary Root and Senator Lodge by more strongly urging the passage of the bill providing for the increase of the navy desired by the German Emperor.

It is thoroughly appreciated that Germany is not now ready to take any action which will involve her in war with the United States, and the Administration does not expect trouble before the German fleet has been very largely increased.

measures which might involve the Imperial Government in the most serious responsibilities should be interpreted by a tribunal in which all the parties had full confidence.

The Government could not consent to clause 74, relating to the Appeal Court, because it meant the abolition of the Imperial veto, would be prejudicial to the unity of the Empire, and might lead to a conflict of authority between the proposed new High Court and the Privy Council. There was by no means unanimity on the subject in Australia, and the Government would ask the House of Commons to so far amend the bill as to retain the power of the Court of Appeal.

The Government proposed to introduce in the House of Lords forthwith a scheme to appoint for seven years a representative each of Canada, South Africa, Australia and India, to be members of the Privy Council, and who would act as Lords of Appeal.

CAVALRY LEADER KILLED.

London, May 14.—3.15 p.m.—The War Office has received the following despatch from Lord Roberts:—

"Kroonstad, Sunday, May 13.—There were more casualties in the cavalry division on May 12 than reported by me. I have been unable to get an exact account of what occurred, as the commanding officer, Captain Elworthy, was killed and two officers were wounded at the same time and have been sent to the rear. But it would appear that a party of our men, going to a kraal on which a white flag was flying, were suddenly attacked by a large number of the enemy. Two officers, Capt. Haig, of the Sixth Dragoons and Lieut. Wilkinson, of the Australian Horse, were made prisoners, and twenty-one men are still unaccounted for. Some of them have turned up, the cavalry covered a considerable distance on May 12, and men reported missing have been rejoining during the last few days."

The above despatch refers to the losses sustained by the Inniskillings May 10, as detailed in the despatches of the Associated Press from Saturday last. The troops were fired on while unsaddling their horses, having approached the kraal unsuspiciously while a white flag was flying from it.

RELIEF OF MAFEKING.

Mr. Wyndham Says It Will Shortly be Accomplished.

London, May 14.—The Parliamentary Secretary of the War Office, Mr. Geo. Wyndham, in the House of Commons today declined to divulge Lord Roberts' plans for the relief of Mafeking, but added significantly that he hoped that they would shortly be accomplished.

GERMANS SURPRISED.

Roberts' March Worthy to be Compared With Kandahar.

Berlin, May 13.—The occupation of Kroonstad by Lord Roberts, without opposition has caused the greatest surprise here. The military expert of the Local Anseiger finds an explanation in the fact that many of the Boers have deserted. He says:—

"Lord Roberts' advance was splendidly executed. It is worthy to be placed beside the Kandahar expedition. The situation has changed so greatly in favor of the British that the fate of the Free State Boers is settled. President Steyn's

BULLER AGAIN MOVES AND SCATTERS BOERS

He Advances From Ladysmith and Carries Boers' Positions on Biggarsberg Range.

A FOUR DAYS' MARCH CROWNED WITH SUCCESS.

Strong Positions Which the Boers Held for Months Fall Into Hands of the British Troops—Additional Casualties Are Reported by Lord Roberts.

London, May 15.—A special despatch from Stone Hill Farm, Natal, dated today says:—

"Gen. Buller's march commenced Thursday, when he left Ladysmith in strength. Within two miles of Helpmakaar the Boers opened a heavy artillery fire and the British guns replied, while a portion of Buller's troops worked round the Boer flanks. The British attack was pressed home Sunday. Bethuen, on the right, outflanked the Boers, whose splendid defensive position was practically taken.

"General Buller's march, subsequent to the attack, was carried out without a hitch.

"The British are still pushing on."

SUCCESS OF GENERAL BULLER.

He Attacks and Defeats the Boers Near Ladysmith.

London, May 14.—A despatch received by the Associated Press from Helpmakaar, Natal, dated 12.05 p.m., to-day, brings the first intimation of success attained by General Buller in Northern Natal. The sender of this despatch evidently assumes that news of the affair has been received direct from the scene of hostilities, for he merely says:—

"Gen. Buller's official telegram notifying his success at the Biggarsberg, received here an hour ago, has given keen satisfaction. It is confidently anticipated that Dundee will be occupied by the British to-day. The residents of the North country are delighted, as forcing the Biggarsberg means that they will speedily be enabled to return to their homes. At about the time this message was filed another despatch to the Associated Press, dated Stone Hill Farm, 3.30 this morning says:—

"After four days' march eastward at the foot of the Biggarsberg ridges in the direction of Helpmakaar, which was occupied by the Boers, the second brigade on Sunday led the attack on their extreme right. In the direction of Pomeroy a small party of burghers occupied a ridge overlooking Helpmakaar, but they did not wait for the assault."

Recent British scouting in the direction of the Biggarsberg has shown that the Boers were in great force on the Biggarsberg. So apparently General Buller concluded that it was necessary to clean them from their rear before commencing a movement in the direction of the Drakenberg range. If this is his plan he has possibly divided his forces, sending one column eastward to threaten Vryheid and Utrecht and take Laings' Nek in the rear, while a westbound column attempts to form a junction with the forces of Lord Roberts via the Harrismith road.

It is also said that Gen. Botha (the commander-in-chief of the Boer forces) threatens to resign if any preparations are made for the wanton destruction of property.

Mr. Cecil Rhodes starts for Beira, Portuguese East Africa, to-day.

The correspondent of the Reuter Telegram Company at Cape Town says the American residents here are taking steps to repudiate the statements of Mr. Webster Davis, the former United States Assistant Secretary of the Interior, who recently visited South Africa.

News from Mafeking is expected speedily. The War Office is reported to have expressed the opinion that news of raising the siege of that place may be expected by Wednesday.

BOTHA DESTROYED THE BRIDGE.

General French Came Into Contact With the Retreating Enemy.

London, May 14.—The Times has the following special from Kroonstad, dated May 12:—

The advance guard of General Gordon's cavalry, early this morning approached the suburbs of the town. The Boschplaat position was found to have been abandoned, the entrenching tools having been left behind. Lord Roberts sent Ensignwooden as a scout into the Town Hall to call upon the Landrost to surrender. Lord Roberts entered at 1 o'clock. About 300 Free State burghers remained to surrender. General Botha evacuated the place yesterday, destroying the wagon bridge and burning the railway bridge. It is believed that General French came into contact with the retreating enemy at Roovala last night.

From the general bearing of the townspeople it would seem that so far as the Free State is concerned the war is practically over. The troops were received with expressions of pleasure, and the Free State will probably refuse to fight across the Vaal river. It is doubtful if there will be further opposition until the Vaal river is reached. A portion of General French's cavalry entered the town from the north a little after 10 o'clock at night.

END IS VISIBLY NEARER.

The Times Says the Boer Defence Has Apparently Collapsed.

The rapidity of Roberts' advance and the apparent breakdown of the Boer defence will turn attention to the settlement at the end of the war. It would be rash to underestimate the character of the struggle which may still await us, but extends during the last few days to some of our continental critics' parades, have brought the end visibly nearer.

movement eastward is interpreted as confirming the rumors of blockades between the Transvaalers and the Free State."

KITGER READS ONLY THE BIBLE.

Oom Paul Never Heard of Either Shakespeare or Goethe.

London, May 6.—A. G. Hales, profiting by an enforced stay among the Boers relates a curious anecdote on Kruger. He writes:—

"Once, when out on a shooting expedition, the party had gathered around a camp fire and the conversation turned upon literature. There were English, Hollanders, Germans and Boers present, and each of them had much to say concerning celebrated writers of prose and poetry, except Oom Paul. He smoked his eternal 'long stem' and held his peace. The Germans and English nearly came to stripping off coats concerning the relative merits of Goethe and Shakespeare. At last they turned to the one silent figure at the camp fire, saying, 'Look here, Oom Paul, which do you think the greatest writer of the two, Goethe or Shakespeare?'

"Never read either of 'em," growled Kruger.

"Mein Gott," ejaculated the German.

"Only this," said Oom Paul, peeling a frayed and tattered Bible from his pocket, "and I have not half mastered its glories. Yet I have read it day and night for well nigh forty years. When I have exhausted the Bible I'll perhaps find some time for Shakespeare and Goethe."

FRENCH STILL IN FRONT.

His Cavalry is Keeping in Close Touch With the Boers.

London, May 14.—Telegrams from Kroonstad indicate that Gen. French's cavalry is keeping in touch with the Boers. But perhaps Lord Roberts will be compelled to order a brief halt of his main body in order to allow the troops to recuperate after their exhausting marches of the past week.

All the correspondents agree that to all intents and purposes the Free State Boers have severed their military alliance with the Transvaal, though scattered bodies, they say, will hold out here and there for some time. At the same time a despatch from Cape Town dated to-day says a proclamation will be published this week annexing the Orange Free State.

It is also said that Gen. Botha (the commander-in-chief of the Boer forces) threatens to resign if any preparations are made for the wanton destruction of property.

Mr. Cecil Rhodes starts for Beira, Portuguese East Africa, to-day.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

The Toronto news in an Editorial draws the attention of parents to the danger of allowing firearms to be found within reach of their children. So many "didn't know it was loaded," and "didn't mean to shoot" cases occur that we reproduce the article intrusting the same may bear fruit in this neighborhood.

A mong the lessons that parents may learn from the shooting of Peter McIntyre by his son Thursday in the danger of leaving firearms within reach of their boys. A healthy lad takes to a gun as naturally as he takes to a neighbor's orchard, and not having any better judgment in the handling of a revolver than in the consumption of green apples there is an equal probability of trouble arising from either. But beyond the natural tendency of a boy to trifle with a gun when he gets a chance, there seems to have been something in the lad's training that at least failed to restrain his inborn peevishness, if he was not allowed to grow up without any restraint upon his will. Granting that the boy had no deliberate intention of shooting his father—and nobody can believe he had—what is to be said for a boy who at the age of 13 undertakes to frighten his father by pointing a revolver at him?

If the fault is in the boy's character are traceable to the over-indulgence of a fond father, the parents has paid dearly for his unwise leniency. Not only has his own life been forfeited, but the life of the son whom he loved too well has been ruined also. In this thought, too, there is a lesson for parents. It is not by excessive kindness and the indulgence of every childish whim that boys and girls can be made into normal and useful men and women. A boy is a heavy responsibility to his father—not a toy—and those who regard their children in that light and endeavor to fulfill their parental obligations are those who will have least reason to mourn the play of their birth.

Writing of the recent election of the Rev. Dr. John Robbins, a Congregationalist, to the high position of Moderator of the church of Scotland in England, the Hamilton Spectator says: "It is very odd. When a well-to-do and ambitious Canadian congregation wants a preacher of the superior class, a man is imported from the old country and is paid a high salary. Had Mr. Robbins remained in Canada, he would probably have been preaching in some one-house village like Truro or Gloucester, at a starvation salary, while all the 'anaps' were being given to imported clergymen. But Mr. Robbins went to England. There his worth was recognized, and he now occupies the highest position in the gift of his Church in the whole of England."

Capital is having its own troubles these days. The rapid strides made by labor organizations in various parts of the country, is shaking the small capitalists considerably. The Standard Oil Company is not worrying much however, although they have not done so badly towards their employees having recently raised their wages ten per cent. we can forgive some of their faults on this account.

We notice a number of exchanges publishing a communication written by R. T. Steele of Hamilton to the effect that dandelions are a pest and that every lawn owner should rid their lawns of the obnoxious weed. The editors foot note it with a statement that dandelions are on the noxious weed list and that citizens are liable to a fine if not destroyed. These editors must be misinformed or rather must jump at the conclusion that the original writer of the article is correct, for if we know anything, we know that dandelions are not on the statutory noxious weed list. Canada thistles, ox-eye daisy, wild oats, ragweed and burdock are the only weeds covered by the act, nor do we know of any municipality having a by-law that covers dandelions. Of course desire to see the lawn rid of the weed in question is a commendable one, and should be put into effect.

The Presbyterian Synod of Toronto and Kingston has been discussing bribery in elections, which all deplore. The convener for Kingston extended the scope of his report by condemning what he called the bribery which prevails in business. "Bribery," he said, "is everywhere and everything. Where shall we go to escape the temptation? I gave up my grocery man because of his bribery in grocery. I left my butcher because he offered me trading stamps. I gave up my religious paper because bribed with an elegant Bible. Bribery is rampant." Yes, and Sir it will continue to be rampant everywhere until the church in a concerted effort take a decisive step in the right direction rejoining the matter.

MULE THAT GOT HIS REVENGE.

Kicked His Cruel Driver and Strayed in Triumph.

The mule is thought to be an exceedingly dull and unappreciative beast, but there is one on the west side that is neither dull nor unappreciative. His driver belabored him unmercifully for not pulling a load that was heavy enough for two mules to haul. The man pounded and swore and pounded again, but, do his best, the mule could not budge the wagon, and after several earnest attempts he quit trying.

That exasperated the driver more than ever, for he thought the mule was "playing off" and he fell to beating him harder than ever. Meanwhile the mule would turn his head toward the driver as if trying to see what the next form of punishment would be, but subsequent events showed that his muleish mind was figuring on revenge against the driver.

Doubtless he got the idea of what he would do from the careless way the driver fooled about his hind legs. But, anyway, his muleishness seemed very much pleased when he found he was to be released from the wagon, even if it was to give the driver a fear hand with his club. In a few minutes the mule found himself tied to one of the wheels of the wagon and felt the heavy blows of the club, but he took things philosophically and kept one eye on the driver. Presently the driver got in the position the mule was waiting for, when, like a flash of lightning, two heels struck the driver, and when they picked him up it was found an ambulance would be needed to take him home.

The mule seemed to glory in his work, or kick, rather, and perhaps the bystander who laughed to see the driver punished for his brutal treatment of the mule only imagined it, but he felt sure the mule joined in the laugh, for his eyes seemed to say that he was immensely pleased over the play he had made with his heels. But, be that as it may, when the bystander approached the mule he was met with marked demonstrations of friendship, the mule going so far as to try to rub his nose against the bystander's face. When the ambulance came the mule watched them put his driver into it, and as it drove away he raised his voice in a deafening bray and pranced about as if too happy to good even a good meal of oats, corn and hay. The bystander went away firmly of the belief that the mule knew a whole lot.—Chicago Chronicle.

Ten little Generals, with reputations fine;
 One asked a policeman, and then there were nine.
 Nine little Generals, wiping off a side;
 One lost his cavalry, and then there were eight.
 Eight little Generals wishing Paul in heaven.
 One made a mess of it, and then there were seven.
 Seven little Generals all in a fix;
 One said "Retire, boys," and then there were six.
 Six little Generals anxious to "arrive";
 One let his gun go, and then there were five.
 Five little Generals going for the beer;
 One thought him far away, and then there were four.
 Four little Generals. One of them got free.
 Came away to London, and then there were three.
 Three little Generals. Roberts said "Ill home."
 Then—but where's he gone to?—there was only one.
 Never mind the Generals—now he's got the moon.

THE COLORADO COPPER MINING COMPANY

LOCATION OF OUR MINES

THE COLORADO COPPER MINING COMPANY is fortunate in being the possessor of five splendid showing properties in the great Salda copper belt, the principal copper producing region of this portion of the Rockies. All of our claims have been more or less developed, and it is our purpose to put the same on a paying basis as soon as possible.
Our company owns, clear of incumbrances, the following claims: The Sedalia Extension, the Sedalia Extension No. 2, which property adjoins the great Sedalia mine, which has been a big producer for upwards of twenty years; the Copper King of Colorado, which immediately adjoins the above; the Copper Queen of Salda, a very promising property, only a few steps from the depot in Salda. This claim occupies an imposing position on a mountain just north of the city; and last, but by no means least, the Buckhorn, located two miles east of Salda, at Oloro Junction, on the main trunk line of the great Denver & Rio Grande Railroad, and also on the Arkansas river, which in length is one of America's greatest streams.

BURNHAM, FAMOUS SCOUT,

WHO IS IN THE BRITISH SER-VICE IN SOUTH AFRICA.

Is a Native Texan and Comes of a Famous Family of Soldiers and Indian Fighters
—Some Thrilling Border Deeds.

The ablest scout in the British service in South Africa is an American, Frederick H. Burnham. He is a native of San Saba county, Tex., and comes of a family noted in the military history of the south. His ancestors fought in the war of 1812 and the Mexican struggle and one of them, Jesse Burnham, was regarded as one of the fathers of the Long Star Republic, when Texas threw off the Mexican yoke.

When Frederick was an infant in the cradle his father and mother fought a band of Mesquero-Apache Indians and killed five of them at the doors and windows of their home. Frederick himself when only 10 years old.

KILLED HIS FIRST INDIAN

He strayed out on the prairie a short distance from the house after a pet lamb when he was surprised by three mounted Indian warriors. The savages were evidently lying in wait and anxious to avoid making any noise. One of them made friendly signs to the boy saying, "Me good Indian—no hurt little boy," as he stealthily advanced but the youth was too wary for his foe, and he turned and fled like a deer. All hope of avoiding discovery was now lost to the Indians, and they pursued the youth to the door of the house, raining arrows about him. Mrs. Burnham and a cowboy who was on the opposite side of the house saw at about the same moment the mother seized a rifle and reached the door just as her boy leaped over the yard fence. She held the gun threateningly toward the Indians, desiring to reserve her only shot until her boy was inside of the house. Just as the youth sprang side of the door the cowboy fired and dropped one of the Indians. The boy, who was more enraged than terrified, seized his mother's gun and brought down another redskin.

FIGHTS 11 COMANCHE INDIANS.

William Burnham, father of the scout fought a battle with eleven Comanches on the San Saba hills one morning to look after his stock, and when about a mile from his house he discovered a band of Indians circling about a herd of horses. Mr. Burnham did not wait to count his foes, but driving the spurs into the flanks of his horse and waving his hat as if motioning to troops behind to follow, he dashed forward among the stampeded ponies and fired with his usual precision. His boldness and the accuracy of his aim started the indians, and for a moment they stood as if undecided as to the best course to pursue. Burnham drew his revolver and dashed straight toward the chief.

At the crack of the pistol the old warrior rolled upon the grass.

The Indians, becoming convinced that their bold assailant was alone, raised a warwhoop, and as they circled about him they sent a shower of arrows him-ing through the air close to the defiant man's head. Burnham realized that his courage and audacity would be of little avail against such great odds, and he galloped among the frightened ponies, killing another Indian as he cut through their circle. The Comanches, fighting with unusual courage, pressed closer, and shot several arrows into Mr. Burnham's body. Feeling that he was growing weaker from the loss of blood, the desperate man threw himself over on the side of his horse and made an effort to escape by flight. The horse was wounded, too, and both

HORSE AND MAN WENT DOWN.

under a rain of arrows. There were four bullets in Burnham's gun. Mr.
Burnham's hat fell off, exposing his bald head, and when the Indians rushed upon him with drawn scalping knives to take a trophy of the battle they spent one fatal moment jabbering about Mr. Burnham's bare skull.
A bald head always amuses an Indian.
They seem to think that the victim has practiced some art to trick his enemies of a scalp. While the Com-anches were laughing about their fallen foe's bald head Mr. Burnham suddenly recovered his senses, and instanctaneously realizing what had happened he sprang to his feet and began to shoot at his surprised assailants. Four Com-anches fell, and the others fled from a man whom they afterward described as "one who could come to life."
He died several years afterward from the effects of his wounds.

DARING OF BUFFALO BURNHAM.

Perhaps the most daring of the family was old Buffalo Burnham.
When the present South African scout was 15 years old the latter was captured by a band of marauding Comanches.
Buffalo rode after the band, dashed into the camp and presented himself before the chief, demanding the return of the boy, his nephew. The old Comanche chief, whose name was Buffalo Hump, told him that he admired his courage, and asked him what he had to give for the prisoner. The Texan looked at the Indian fearlessly in the eyes, and then slapping his hand upon his own breast, said "Myself I will give you old Buffalo Burnham. Bind me and set the boy loose and free to return to his mother, who mourns for him."

"My young men will burn you with fire," said the chief.

"Let them light their fires, and when the young boy has been set free and his face turned toward his mother
I will stand in the flames and die to please Buffalo Hump's young warriors and his squaws and children." Struck by the extraordinary act of valor, Buffalo Hump ordered the boy to be released, and, taking the youth's hand in his own, he led him forward and pressed his head against the white man's bosom.

"You may go," he said, "for such love and such bravery Buffalo Hump's eyes never saw before."

When the old veteran was about to leave the camp a warrior came and gave to young Burnham a pony, saying that the animal was a present from the chief.

Frederick H. Burnham, who is now attached to Lord Robert's command, has seen service in South Africa before.
He took a prominent part in the war against Lobengula and figured conspicuously in other South African disturbances.

For Williams and Didn't Know It.

"John," said the wife, "who air you fer in the race fer sheriff?"
"I'm fer Tompkins fust an last."

"No, John, you ain't fer Tompkins;
you're fer Williams."

"I said Tompkins," replied John.
"I know you did, John. But, all the same, you're fer Williams."

Then he made a grab for his hat and was about to make for the door when she locked it and, standing against it, said:

"Don't let us fuss over this matter, John. Be reasonable now as own up that you're fer Williams."

He rammed with his hat and kicked the fire.

"Melly," he said, "if you ain't as good as a mind reader I'll give it up!
Course I'm fer Williams fust an last!
Durn him!"

THE BEST NEWS YET!

TROUT LAKE CITY, B. C., APRIL 20, 1900.

"Your letter came while I was out, and I note what you say financially and otherwise, and
certainly feel much interested in the property and more confident of the outcome than ever since my last explorations. I have men at work inside tunnel at $12 per foot and no stated amount of work.
I will enclose a penciling showing how we are doing the work and give my reasons for the same.
We traced two leads down by the end of Crosscut, of fine appearance (see diagram). Mr. Pettipiece was up to see the property and remained over night. I also had Mr. Shannon, the Geologist up with me to confer with in reference to the property and the way it should be developed and on.
He will give his opinions through the columns of the "Eagle." He is a very conscientious and careful man and slow to advance ideas without proof. I asked him what he thought of my plan of development. He carefully looked the situation over inside and out and stated it was the best. He said in reference to the property that "it was one that merited an outlay of money and one no one should be afraid to invest in." He mentioned that in many respects it resembled the "Silver-Cup".
We will encounter lead No. 2 I think by May 1st. and I am very sanguine we will have Ore at over 100 feet deep. We will have to drive 100 feet to get No. 3 lead. Now if your company can stand
the expense of 100 feet of work at this time it certainly would be wise to do so, for we know at least something of the merits of No. 3. When we get the Main Ore Body located we then are made.
It is there and I hope soon to be able to report having it. The conditions have never looked better than now.

J. W. Westfall.

Copies of the "Eagle" can be had on application. The work is being vigorously continued and we hope soon to be able to report having struck the Ore Body. Matters were never better for us than now and if you want a good investment get our shares while there is time.

CZAR AND SHAH.

A Russo-British clash in Persia should at least give us some musical Lalla Rookh war map names with which to offset the Boer tongue twisters.—St.
Louis Republic.

It is quite possible that we are to have an interesting sequel to the peace receipt of the emperor of Russia and that the coming conflict between Russia and England is not far distant.—Chicago Record.

Both Russia and England have always frankly admitted that an Anglo-Russian war of supremacy in India is bound to come at some time. It is reasonable to suppose that it shall be precipitated by the government which sees a sudden advantage too great to be ignored.—St.
Louis Republic.

The ardent solicitude for the amity of the shah is due to the mobilization of a Russian army on the Afghan frontier and the confessed intention to occupy Herat at an early day. Having explored all the routes to mark his baggage "via

RECENT INVENTIONS.

Breathing in rough water is made easy
by a new life preserver, which has a vertical tube secured to the front of the life chamber, with a mouthpiece through which air is drawn from the top of the tube, which extends above the head.

To prevent the reins from catching under the horse's tail a new harness attachment is formed of a metal yoke secured to the back strap, with fingers extending on either side to carry the reins, a brace being set at right angles with the yoke to hold it vertical.

By the use of a Tennessee man's device horses can be checked and unchecked without leaving the carriage, a short strap being used to connect the reins over the back pad, with a second strap joining the first strap to the check rein, in order that a pull on the reins can guide the check over the hook.

A SUMMARY OF THE BRITISH-BOER CAMPAIGN

CANADIANS IN THE LEAD.

London, May 12.—11.35 a.m.—Lord Roberts telegraphs to the War Office under date of Geneva Siding, May 11, evening, as follows:
"My headquarters, with Pole-Carew's division, marched twenty miles to-day, and are now at Geneva Siding, 14 miles from Kroonstad, and about six miles from Boshrand, where the Boers are holding entrenched positions. Gordon's brigade is in touch with them, Tucker's division is a short distance southeast and Hamilton's force is still further east."
"Broadwood's brigade overtook a part of the enemy's convoy yesterday afternoon at Potgieter's Laager, southeast of Ventersburg, and captured several wagons and some prisoners."

"French, with Porter's and Dickson's brigades and Hutton's mounted infantry, is some distance due north of this place."
"We have taken nearly 100 prisoners during the last few days. All the Free Staters who could give a good account of themselves have been disarmed and allowed to return to their farms."
"The nights are getting much cooler."

EIGHT MILES FROM KROONSTAD.

London, May 12.—2.30 p.m.—The War Office has received the following despatch from Lord Roberts:
Boshrand, May 12.—9.05 a.m.—I am eight miles south of Kroonstad. The enemy evacuated the first line of entrenchments during the night. We are now reconnoitering towards Kroonstad.
Gen. French's cavalry seized the drift over the Vaalch river at 4.30 last evening, just in time to prevent the passage being opposed by the enemy."

BRITISH IN THE TRANSVAAL.

London, May 12.—A despatch from Kimberley says that British patrols from Fourteen Streams have entered the Transvaal.

WHITE FOAG TREACHERY AGAIN.

Innskillings are Shot Down and Captured under the Emblem of Peace.
Geneva Siding, May 11.—Morning.—The British forces have arrived here, marching splendidly. Gen. French in the advance. Firing was heard yesterday in the direction of his force. Some of the Innskillings had approached a kraal where a force of Boers was concealed.

A white flag was flying from the kraal. While the troops were unloading their horses a deadly fire was poured in upon them from the windows of the farm house, killing several of the Innskillings. A score of them were also captured, most of whom had been wounded.
It is expected that the railway to the Zand River will be completed to-night. The line is almost entirely destroyed north of the river, but beyond, where the British are, the Boers retreated from their positions too hastily to do much damage. The Boers are reported to be encircling themselves around Kroonstad, twenty miles off.

MISSING CANADIANS RETURN.

Sir Alfred Milner cables that they are all safe.
Ottawa, May 11.—Hon. F. W. Dorden this evening received a cablegram from Sir Alfred Milner stating that Privates C. A. Delisle, 48th Highlanders; Moorehouse, 7th Batt.; Allan, and Nilant, 6th Batt., members of the first contingent, who were reported as missing on April 30, have turned up safely.

A DEVILISH CONSPIRACY.

Kruger's Impassioned Words to the Volksraad.
Cape Town, May 11.—At the closing of the Volksraad on Monday, May 7, President Kruger cried out:
"God of the Volksraad, shall this be the final act? No! It shall not. God will be merciful and strengthen the right. Ours is the right."
Thirty thousand burghers have fought two hundred thousand British soldiers. By the providence of God we are still alive to fight our vindictive and voracious foe, our eternal enemy since 1858.
The President added that he had documentary proof of a "devilish conspiracy to annihilate the republics."

BOER AGENTS AT WORK.

They try to Induce Britons to Become Burgers of the Transvaal.
Lorenzo Marques, May 11.—Knowing the anxiety of British subjects to remain in the Transvaal Boer agents are trying to induce them to accept burghership, promising exemption from military service. Many who have thus been entrapped have earned the contempt of genuine burghers, who in several instances have successfully remonstrated. The latest refugees amplify the former stories of commanding and looting. The worst feature of the scandal is the seizure of ladies' and children's apparel and bicycles, and the wholesale disposal of goods at a price far below the market value. The pecuniary benefit of Boer officials.

SATISFIED WITH LYDDITE.

Lord Roberts Says the Projectile is Very Useful.
London, May 12.—In reply to a War Department inquiry as to the efficiency or otherwise of the Lyddite shells in use in the African campaign, Lord Roberts has telegraphed home that the general commanding at the front are perfectly satisfied with the new projectile. Since their first use in the campaign, the various improvements have been made, and the 8,000 rounds sent out on Saturday in the Durban Castle for use with the siege train at Pretoria are, as nearly as possible, perfect.

BOERS RAE RETIRING.

They are not Pushing Their Advance on Bloemfontein.
Eden, May 11.—The Boers south-east of Bloemfontein, who are threatening Bloemfontein, retired somewhat today, but it is impossible to say where they may turn up next, owing to their great mobility. General Grefel succeeded in pushing them back near Rapaikop, while General Brabant pushed forward in the direction of Hands Drift, along with Gen. Campbell and the Sixteenth Brigade.
The body of Boers had appeared at Vercon on the Ladybrand road.

RELIEF NEAR MAFKENG.

XA Flying Column 3,000 Strong Has Reached Vryburg.
London, May 12.—Important war news comes to-day from Boer sources. A Pretoria telegram announces the appearance of a British flying column, 3,000 strong, on the western border, moving northward by forced marches night and day. The column is reported to have reached Vryburg on Wednesday, and that place is only about 100 miles south of Mafeking. The investment of the town, therefore, may be raised in a day or two, or at all events by the 18th instant, to which date Roberts asked Col. Baden-Powell to hold out. Extraordinary secrecy has been preserved with regard to the movements of the relief column which is probably the mounted portion of General Hunter's force. The main body of the division was, according to the latest reports, still at Fourteen Streams.

A WATERY GRAVE.

A telegram from Pretoria, dated Tuesday, in the Standard and Diggers' News, says—"The British in their passage along the Stellaland border toward Mafeking, met Taungs, with great success. Hundreds of British troops met a watery grave while attempting to cross the Vaal. A second advance was made upon Taungs by 7,000 British troops and 14 guns. Communication with Taungs was cut Sunday afternoon."

Several of the streets are being cleaned. The scraping off of the mud, which has been in evidence all spring to what was badly needed.

The Crowning Production of a Great Physician.

Paine's Celery Compound

The Great Life Renewer and Health Giver.

A Noted Physician's Opinion.

Paine's Celery Compound was the crowning production of America's most eminent physician—Professor E. E. Phelps, M. D. Such a physician could only give what was worthy of his great and elevated character to suffering humanity. His best hours were devoted to the perfecting of what is now known in millions of homes in Britain, Europe and on this continent as Paine's Celery Compound, nature's food medicine for the nerves, brain and blood.

After our long winter and late spring, a host of people of every age have left in a weak, languid, and depressed condition of health. The nerves are unstrung, the body is emaciated, the blood is stagnant and impure digestion is faulty and constipation is doing its deadly work. You safety, health and future physical happiness demand the immediate use of Paine's Celery Compound, whose marvelous virtue are recognized by our ablest physicians, many of whom make personal use of it in their homes. Dr. A. W. K. Newton, writing to the proprietors of Paine's Celery Compound, says:
"The formula of Paine's Celery Compound led me to give it a personal trial, and I was much pleased with the result. I prescribe it for men and women who have no appetite, cannot sleep, and for the weak and run-down. For this condition, and for disorders of the blood and nerves, it has no equal. It is the best possible remedy to keep up one's strength and energy during the spring and summer months."

Knows What He's About.
"I believe Higginson smokes the vilest cigars on earth. When he drops in at my office, I always give him a good cigar to keep him from lighting one of his own."
"Drops in every day, doesn't he?"
"Generally."
"I thought so. I know Higginson. He is a fellow of a good deal of thrift and ingenuity."—Chicago Tribune.

Wit and Humor.
"What's the difference between wit and humor?"
"If a man says humorous things about you, it makes you laugh; if he says witty things about you, it makes you mad."—Chicago Record.

A horse attached to a buggy created considerable stir on Water street near the Library Saturday afternoon. He took a dash on his own account up the street and jumped the sidewalk. Fortunately no one was hurt.

Short Story of the Day

BLACK JACK.

There was not an atom of vice in Black John, but he was a fearless beast for a weak-armed rider who did not understand his idiosyncrasies. Trained to "go against the bit" by the heavy handed village blacksmith from whom Jasper Carson bought him, he had a mouth like steel ropes. With a thirty-pound pressure on the bit he could single-foot a mile in 2:30 under the saddle and withal so smoothly that he gave his rider the impression of sailing through the air. A powerful man could check him by main strength and awkwardness without first releasing the pull on the bit, but the easiest and most expeditious method was to slacken the reins and say: "Whoa, John!"

If the command were given sharply the stop might be sudden as to unsaddle an unwary rider, but that was not Miss Lackland's part. It was his training. His walk, fox trot and canter were perfect in their ease, but it was as a single-footer that Black John excelled.

Nannie Carson rode him frequently and sometimes to the discomfort of her escort, who, mounted on a horse of ordinary speed, found it difficult to keep her in sight.

It was probably admiration of Miss Carson's prowess as a horsewoman and a desire to emulate it that induced Miss Lackland to accept Jasper Carson's offer to teach her to ride. The theory advanced by Miss Stubbs, the peripatetic bureau of information for the village, that Miss Lackland wanted to give her a lesson in horsemanship to propose a worthy of mention only for purposes of contradiction.

Anyhow, Miss Lackland's ambition to learn to ride had an exhilarating effect on Jasper Carson. He bought a new sidesaddle and was more than ordinarily critical of the work of his groom.

The riding lessons were given in the early morning in order that the canorous might not see and deride Miss Lackland's inexperience. She had grace and courage and soon looked at home in the saddle. Though still a trifle awkward in manipulating the reins, she was a creditable pupil and Jasper Carson was proud of his position as instructor. Yet he was not entirely contented. It was pleasant to ride with her along sylvan paths and see the supple lines of the new-walked flowers and drink the dew from greasy cups. It was pleasant still to see the girl's cheeks glow and her eyes sparkle as the wagon morning breezes caressed her.

But Jasper Carson had something in his heart to say to Miss Lackland, and he had promised to say it during one of these delightful rides. It would be so easy, he thought, to see his soul in the garden while riding by her side. Regularly after going to bed he would picture the scene; the horses would be walking and he would quote a line of poetry, then tell her in an eloquent terms as he could command that she was all the world to him. What would follow he could not reduce to tangible form, but it would be blissful. When the morning came he found the brave resolutions of the night before had vanished. Try as he might, he couldn't say the words. Even the poetry which he had carefully memorized refused to come to his tongue.

voice, Jasper Carson dashed on, cursing and praying by turns. He fancied himself standing by Miss Lackland's corpse, and wondered could he live after that.

When Black John turned into the bridge path the mare's lean brown head was at his flank.

"Whoa, John!" shouted Carson. But John felt the pull on the bit and hearing the clatter of the mare's hoofs thought it was a race and put on a little more steam.

Miss Lackland's wrists ached, and she was frightened too badly to heed Carson's prayers to her to drop the reins.

But John felt the pull on the bit and hearing the clatter of the mare's hoofs thought it was a race and put on a little more steam.

She saw it, too, and bent low in her saddle. As she crouched she looked her hold on the reins.

"Whoa, John!" shouted Carson, pulling up so suddenly that his mare slid forward on her haunches.

Black John heard the command at the instant the pressure on the bit was released and he stopped in his abrupt style. His head had passed under the bough.

Miss Lackland plunged forward and would have gone over Black John's crest but for a friendly snag that caught her hair and jerked her back.

For a woman to come to that period known as change of life. It is almost always a period of suffering, and the deangement of mind and body is some times so great that the family life is utterly marred by the unhappy wife and mother. At such a time every woman needs just the help that is given by Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. It works with Nature, soothes the nerves by nourishing them, and cures diseases of the delicate organs. In brief, it makes weak women strong; sick women well.

"Favorite Prescription" contains no alcohol, neither opium, cocaine, nor any other narcotic.

"I have taken four bottles of 'Favorite Prescription' for female weakness and change of life," writes Mrs. Lizzie A. Bowman, of New Matamoras, Washington Co., Ohio. "Before I began taking it I could not do anything. I had such pains in my head and in the back of my neck that I could not see my work. Now I can work every day and do not suffer. I recommend 'Favorite Prescription' to all women suffering in the period of change of life. It is the best medicine I have ever found."

Every woman should send for a free copy of Dr. Pierce's Medical Adviser. Send 31 one-cent stamps to pay expense of customs and mailing only for the book in paper covers, or 50 stamps for cloth, to Dr. R. V. Pierce, Buffalo, N.Y.

One of the strongest superstitions of the English Navy.

One of the very strongest and most ineluctable of all superstitions in the royal navy, a superstition that is almost as strong today as ever it was, is that vessels bearing the names of royal personages are doomed to ill luck, and, strange as it may seem, there is an undeniable historic basis for this feeling.

Some of the most terrible disasters ever known in connection with our navy have concerned war vessels with royal names. Two vessels called the Royal James came to disastrous ends. One of them exploded, and some 800 officers and men perished. The other ship so named was actually carried off the mouth of the Thames by the Dutch Admiral de Ruyter under circumstances disgraceful to those in charge of the craft.

Then there is the forever memorable disaster to the Royal George, an unlucky ship which, after having been in service for many years, was wrecked in 1782, and sank in sight of crowds at Spithead, over 1,000 souls, among whom were 800 women, being sacrificed. And second only to this hideous disaster is that which afterward befell the Royal Charlotte, which, after a career of much vaingloriousness, was consumed by fire off Leghorn, over 800 of the very flower of the navy perishing with her.

When in 1893 the Victoria, a new vessel and the very triumph of modern invention so far as naval architecture went, was rammed and sank at once in sight of the whole fleet and when hundreds of lives were lost, there was not a sailor, however matter of fact he might be, who did not remember the dire fate of the royally named craft. These instances are only the greatest ones. A score of smaller ones are recalled off by every royal navy man—Tit-Bits.

Going receives tribute in diverse ways. Recently Mrs. Rejane, the famous French actress, was presented with a handsome pair of driving mules by the king of Portugal.

There is a Baron Wilkes mare in the road. Carson lost sight of him and his fair rider. It was only 300 yards now to the bridge path, and the single-footer had a lead of nearly one-fourth of a mile.

Driving his spurs deep into the sides of his mare, Carson gave chase! The mare had a strain of hunting blood in her and a good burst of speed, but Black John was the yards in front when she got her stride, and the bridge path was not more than a quarter of a mile away. If the mare overtook him in that distance it would be a wonderful feat, for the black horse could cover ground like a prairie fire, and Miss Lackland rode forty pounds lighter than Jasper Carson.

As Black John swept around a curve in the road, Carson lost sight of him and his fair rider. It was only 300 yards now to the bridge path, and the single-footer had a lead of nearly one-fourth of a mile.

PUBLIC MEETING AT LAKEFIELD

The Proposed Manufacturing Industry is Discussed.

On Friday evening last, at a few hours' notice, a public meeting of ratepayers was held in the Town Hall, re the application of a company for aid in the establishment of cement works in the village. The meeting was addressed at considerable length by Mr. J. M. Kilburn, a gentleman largely interested in the existing works near Owen Sound, manufacturers of the "Samson" brand of Portland Cement. This gentleman and his associates having recently acquired the mill deposit at Buckley's Lake, and also the water power at Sawyer's Creek, are now asking the village for aid in establishing their works, to the extent of free sight, exemption from taxes for 10 years and a cash bonus of $10,000.

After pointing out the increase in the past few years, and alluding to the advantages which would attach to the location of the works within the village limits, the speaker stated that the total proposed expenditure would be, roughly $200,000, an amount the permanent character of the business rendered it a desirable acquisition.

Heere Hull, who occupied the chair, then invited discussion, and Messrs. Fraser and Strickland, and Messrs. Casement, D. Burgess and others spoke briefly, and various questions were asked and replied to by Mr. Casement.

The feeling of the large majority of a very representative meeting appeared to be in favor of meeting with the company's request, if after investigation the statements presented were verified, and a resolution to that effect was put and carried.

The matter is now in the hands of the Council to enquire into, and if satisfied they will forthwith draw up a draft agreement and by-law for submission to the voters.

Another transaction involving the transfer of a large amount of property in Lakefield, is believed to be on the point of being satisfactorily concluded, and if this is the case, there is little doubt that a new era of prosperity may be in store for the village, and the question of what is our population to do when the Canal is completed will no longer cause anxiety. So mote it be.

Much sympathy is expressed on all sides for the prisoner, who has always borne an excellent character.

We understand an effort will at once be made to have the sentence reduced. The movement, with the aid of many of the citizens, including the Times.

RAWHIDED IN COURT.

Two Very Bad Boys Received Their Deserts Yesterday.

Two boys named Ernie Kimbel and Sidney Ferguson, appeared at the Police Court yesterday morning, charged with stealing a couple of copper boilers. It was these two boilers that were sold to Mr. Mitchell, for Mr. Holmes. The youngsters pleaded guilty, admitting having stolen them in broad daylight and also admitting having chopped numerous holes in the bottoms of the boilers "so they would look old" as they put it.

They were upon the order of Magistrate Dumble rawhided by their parents at the police court and the cries of the boys whilst going through the painful ordeal could be heard for a block away. They are out on suspended sentence until if they fail to go to school regularly they will be brought up any time for sentence which is suspended for the present.

At the last meeting of the Cobourg Council, Mr. Arthur Longmore, of Peterborough, made application for the position of bandmaster for the band, which it is proposed to organize in Cobourg. In his address to the Council Mr. Longmore stated that since he came home from Peterborough several had been at him to organize a band. It would not pay him to leave a good job in Peterborough. If he could get $300 he would stay in Cobourg and take charge of the band. He thought if the Council gave $150 the rest could be made up by citizens in different ways. He said formerly the band got 50c. each for the concerts and that the amount had been raised by the merchants contributing 10c. each week. The matter was left over until next meeting of Council.

The steamers are on Stony Lake waters all at work.

The Eclipse is very busy these days bringing hogs up for the Matthews Co.

Capt. Charlie Calcutt's new palace barge is a daisy.

Capt. Harris will run the steamer North Star from town coming about June 1st.

BITS FROM SHELDON.

Gifts that involve no sacrifice return neither happiness nor pleasure. Where the body is wrung with pain, where it is filled with disease, one cannot be happy.

Do not heed the list of suicides, because they see the ill side of life—the physical side.

We here in America seem to have evolved in the course of our fast living a disease that once was not known—nervous prostration.

It is always very hard to tell which of these two is the more miserable man on earth—the discontented rich or the friendless beggar.

The little child who buys tin toys for a cent in the store gets more pleasure out of giving them to some other little child than the rich man who ostentatiously gives presents worth thousands of dollars.

NO TIDINGS RECEIVED FROM BADEN-POWELL

Considerable Anxiety in London Regarding State of Affairs in Besieged Mafeking.

BOERS WILL MAKE A FIRM STAND HARRISMITH.

Generals Rundle and Brabant Are Taking Possession of the Wide Regions Around Ladybrand Almost Without Opposition—Free Staters Surrendering.

London, May 16. "Food will last until about June 10," is the last official word from Col. Baden-Powell at Mafeking, sent to Lord Roberts under date of May 7. Five days later the Boers attempted to storm the town and it is possible that they succeeded, although nothing is known of the attack or its results except through Pretoria sources, which have no countenance here.

The British relief column is due there now. Ten days ago Gen. Symonds was having difficulty in keeping the burghers together owing to the approach of the British and when the last Associated Press left Mafeking on May 7 Boers had killed on the previous day one of the Horse Guards and had captured several of Col. Baden-Powell's few remaining horses.

Mr. F. D. Baillie has sent to the morning Post from Mafeking under date of May 7 this message:—"This morning the Boers attacked us. Result as usual. There is an aching void here. Pass the loaf." The Transvaal army has taken a position at Blaauwpoort, 50 miles north of Kroonstad. Its road guard is still holding the hills north of the Vaal River, where the Boer scouts are in touch with British reconnoitering parties 20 miles north of Kroonstad. The Boers have held a council of war at Dingy and the British spies have learned that the Boers decided to hold Harrismith as long as possible. Lord Roberts' infantry are still at Kroonstad. The railway laborers are hard at work and the engineers hope to have the line repaired within three days.

The prairie has put on a russet winter coat. The nights are bitterly cold, but the days are hot.

The Free Staters are surrendering in larger numbers than after the occupation of Bloemfontein.

One officer of the Transvaal artillery says:—"There will be no serious fighting this side of Pretoria as Barendse on the Vaal is ineffective. Heavy guns are being mounted at Pretoria, but General Botha is agreed that unlimited success is impossible. President Kruger is obstinate and a majority of the Transvaalers hold firmly with him."

It is estimated the Transvaalers can still muster 30,000 men on the fighting line. General Buller's advance as his telegrams indicate was the instructions of Lord Roberts, and it will come or go forward as Lord Roberts may direct. Certain commentators affiliated to the War Office say that General Buller's orders to keep the Boers employed have been supplemented by an order to drive them completely out of Natal and then move onto Harrismith.

General Rundle and General Brabant are taking possession of the wide regions around Ladybrand almost without opposition. They found the country plentifully supplied with cattle, horses, feed and flour. General Rundle is reducing his transport and feeding his men and animals largely off the country.

The Boers in that quarter surrender daily and it is the expectation of the correspondents on the spot that the eastern section of the Free State will soon be as quiet as the western.

OFFER TO UNITED STATES.

Boers Will Ask McKinley to Declare a Protectorate.

New York, May 15.—According to the Herald the commission composed of Messrs. Fisher, Wessels and Wolmarans, representing the Republics of the Transvaal and Orange Free State, which is expected to arrive here today, is empowered to take important action. The correspondent says: "I have the highest authority for making the statement that the Commissioners are empowered to ask the United States to assume a protectorate over the Republics, this protectorate to tend, if required, towards eventual annexation as territories or States."

"Secretary of State Reitz, who is rapidly breaking down under the strain he is undergoing, voiced this national hope in these words: 'We will maintain our independence if we can. If we can't we will appeal to the American people to take us under their wing. Surely the Declaration of Independence is broad enough to open the ocean. Our last hope is that, having again and again carried our burden of persecution into the wilderness to escape from England, we may be permitted to deposit it at the peace and protection under the Stars and stripes.'"

BOERS COMPLETELY CHECKMATED.

General Rundle Clears Them from Ladybrand District.

Brand's Drift, Sunday, May 13.—General Rundle has completely checkmated the attempt of the Boers to come south again, and the enemy are retreating before the persistent advance of the British. Many have been captured or are surrendering. There were 150 of those yesterday and today, among them President's Steyn's brother.

The Ladybrand district is clear of Boers. They have been evacuated Mequitting's Nek and are now near Lindley.

BOER ENVOYS SIGHTED.

BADEN-POWELL STRIKES A BLOW.

Boers Were Surrounded in Moving Closer to Mafeking.

MAY OSTRACISE TAMMANY.

Crocker's Action Regarding the War Suggests the Proposal.

London, May 15.—The Express today advocates the ostracism of Richard Crocker in England in retaliation for Tammany's attitude on the war. It says:—"It has not escaped notice in this country that the American welcome to the Boer delegates has been inspired and encouraged by Tammany Hall, which is controlled by the notorious Boss Richard Crocker."

"The records of Tammany are already black enough without the addition of this new infamy. But what makes the action of Tammany particularly infamous now is the fact that Crocker claims this hospitality of an English domicile as an English country gentleman, whose runs race horses on the English turf, yet in aiding and encouraging the worst of England's enemies."

"If Crocker finds that the bracing air of the United States does not invariably suit his constitution he should secure the calm seclusion of an English villa, within reach of the Duke of Orleans, whose company he will probably find congenial."

COMMENTS OF THE TIMES.

Roberts Must Make a Halt at Kroonstad for Reorganization.

London, May 15.—The Times says:—"On Sunday the main force of Lord Roberts concentrated at Kroonstad, and is now resting after a rapid and arduous advance, both men and horses are greatly in want of repose, and the organization, on which so much depends, is also in need of bracing up for renewed efforts. Moreover, there are difficulties which call for some delay. The railway bridge has to be repaired, bridges rebuilt and stores brought up over the reconstructed line. By the time these operations are completed the troops, no doubt, will be in good condition for another forward dash on the road to Pretoria. Though little is known with certainty of the intentions and movements of the Boers, it seems probable that a very serious resistance will be offered south of the Vaal River."

AUSTRALIAN FEDERATION BILL INTRODUCED.

A Most Important Step Towards the Organization of the British Empire Now Before Parliament.

London, May 14.—The Secretary of State for the Colonies, Mr. Joseph Chamberlain, rose in the House of Commons today to introduce the Australian Commonwealth bill, which he described as a great and important step towards the organization of the British Empire.

Mr. Chamberlain said it would make Australia an indivisible Federal Commonwealth, united for the most important functions of Government, with intercolonial free trade, a common tariff for all the colony and common control of the national defence. Such a consummation was as much to Great Britain's interests as to Australia's. What was good for Australia was clearly good for the whole Empire.

The Empire rejoiced at this great, free, progressive movement, which was a tribute to legislative competency and worthy of all the great labor that had been expended on it.

After explaining the difference between the Australian proposals and the Canadian constitution, Mr. Chamberlain pointed out that, as foreign countries were concerned in the new constitution, it was important that measures which might involve the Imperial Government in the most serious responsibilities should be interpreted by a tribunal in which all the parties had full confidence.

The Government could not consent to clause 74, relating to the appeal court, because it meant the abolition of the Imperial veto, which would be prejudicial to the unity of the Empire, and might lead to a conflict of authority between the proposed new High Court and the Privy Council. There was by no means unanimity on the subject in Australia, and the Government would ask the House of Commons to so far amend the bill as to retain the power of the Court of Appeal.

The Government proposed to introduce in the House of Lords forthwith amendments to appoint for seven years a representative each of Canada, South Africa, Australia and India, to be members of the Privy Council, and who would act as Lords of Appeal.

Life peerages would be conferred on them, so that they would continue to sit in the House of Lords, although they would not as judges after their term of service had expired. They would be paid the same as Lords of Appeal, and at the cost of the Imperial Government. Mr. Chamberlain said the new constitution, although in important respects unlike any now existing, more closely resembled the constitution of the United States than any other. State rights throughout were jealously preserved.

In Australia the Senate would be elected by the same electorate as the Legislature, and the members of both bodies would receive the same salary.

The Liberal leader in the House, Sir Henry Campbell-Bannerman, said he thought it unfortunate that the Government had not accepted the proposals which had received the unanimous approval of Australia, and, he added, the Opposition would refuse to support the Government proposals in reference to the Court of Appeal.

After Sir Charles Dilke and others had spoken, the bill passed its first reading. The second reading was fixed for May 21.

All the Australian delegates and numerous colonial agents and peers who had formerly been Governors of various colonies, were present in the House of Commons during the debate.

THE BACKBONE OF CHRISTIANITY.

Evangelist Geil Delivers the Best of His Series Thus Far Last Night to a Big Crowd in St. Paul's Church.

"The Backbone of Christianity" was the subject of Mr. Geil's discourse last night, which was presented in the most eloquent language that it has ever been our privilege to hear. Paul, he said, was a man of colossal influence. He desired to go to Rome, the mightiest, most wicked, most learned city on the planet. He desired to go there to preach the Gospel of Christ, which he recognized was the only power that could save Rome. Paul was not ashamed of the Gospel because the Gospel of Christ has a perfect authority. The Bible is a sacred book. It is absolutely perfect. An infidel recently died. I will not mention his name as I am not advertising the devil, but he was a colonel. Instead of going to fight according to his orders, during the rebellion between North and South, he ran in the opposite direction till he came to a pig pen. Here he stopped—birds of a feather—mighty hard on swine. Asked by a California farmer his opinion of Christ, this infidel replied that in his opinion Christ was the greatest character in history. He found no fault in Him! The sturdy Romans could find no fault in Him. Christ never said or did anything that ever brought a flash of crimson to the most innocent face, there was absolutely no fault in Him. His Gospel is as perfect as Him, because He is the author. There is no flaw in any part of it. A perfect author gives a perfect work. Men like to meet men, said Mr. Geil, and to illustrate more completely, he related the story told him by a minister of his acquaintance. After he had been called to a new charge, he was questioned as to his views on the liquor traffic by the board. His answer which contained a double meaning suited the board, and fearing he might make a mistake, one of the members of the board approached him before he began to preach his first sermon—bribery before he preached—and told him that in the church there was a brewer, who could not be a member, but his wife and children were members, and the brewer was a rich donor to the church funds. He was not to preach to offend that brewer. Well, he managed to steer clear of the brewer for three weeks, but finally, for want of something to say, he had to let drive at the brewer, and as he poured shot after shot into him, the members of the board began to shake with fear. After the sermon, the brewer rushed to the pulpit, and grasping the young preacher by the hand, said, "I am glad to meet a man." Men like to meet a man—men are scarce. The question of to-day among people was not how can we best serve God, but how can we best become a reputable church member. A number of students once decided to puzzle their teacher—a professor in biology. So they dissected four bugs, and placed the legs, head and tail of three other bugs on the body of the fourth, and proceeding to the professor's room, asked him to analyze this composition bug. The professor, after taking his microscope, and looking at it, said "Boy, I should call this a humbug." There are a lot of people that are humbugs—religious humbugs. They like to stand on the dancing floor with a deck of cards for a body, wine bottles for legs, and a little religion twined on for tail.

Be a Christian, not ashamed. Paul, when he was Paul, served the devil on horseback. While he was Paul he served God. God was a great power, and Paul was not ashamed of Him. Why are some of you church members? Is it because you want to have your funeral service preached for nothing? Do not be ashamed of God or His Gospel. To believe in the Gospel insures a man's glory hereafter. Be a Christian in the true sense by coming out squarely on the side of Christ. Be not ashamed of any good work, and so glorify your Father in Heaven.

BULLER RETAKES LOST BRITISH TERRITORIES!

Dundee Re-occupied by His Troops and the Enemy Apparently Falling Back From Natal.

LORD DUNDONALD HOTLY PURSUES THE BOERS.

His Cavalry Comes Up With the Enemy's Rearguard and Drives It In Upon the Main Body—Buller Sends Details of Successful Operations in Natal.

London, May 15.—General Buller is making strong efforts to recover the neck of northern Natal which the Boers annexed seven months ago and have since held by force of arms. Again the active struggle of the war is taking place north of Ladysmith which has been watered so often with the blood of both Briton and Boer. Upon the fields of Elandsburg and Dundee General Buller's recent operations have been conducted. His main line of advance has been that by which General Buller with the Dundee garrison retreated on October 24th to join hands with White at Ladysmith, a movement which the amateur experts of that time termed a "brilliant strategic movement."

To the British right at Helpmakaar is Rorke's drift, immortal in the memory of the British people for a deed of heroism. It is to be hoped that General Buller will further illustrate the irony of history and fate by seizing upon the Boers those positions at Laing's Nek, Ingogo and Majuba which have for years been monuments to British disasters, but may yet become the marking posts of British victories.

The strategy of Roberts is clearly dominating affairs in Natal. The operations by which Buller dislodged the Boers from Helpmakaar and the greater part of the Biggarsberg and reoccupied Dundee with its valuable coal fields are so different from those which have been hitherto pursued in Natal as to suggest this opinion. The occupation of Dundee to-day was the result of a feat. While Buller massed troops at the Sunday's River drift, opposite the Boer centre on the Biggarsberg, Colonel Buller with his colonial troops advanced from the neighborhood of Estcourt far to the south upon Greytown and Pomeroy.

Bethuen having reached this latter place Buller made all his disposition for an attack, and the Boers, concentrated on their centre to repel it, entirely blundered to the fact that Bethuen was waiting for a chance to strike their left flank and turn it. The chance was given. Bethuen's colonials dashed forward upon Pomeroy, attacked in three bodies, and before the enemy could make arrangements for its defence, Helpmakaar was carried and the Boer position on the Biggarsberg turned. The occupation of Dundee followed as a matter of course, and as that place is in the rear of the Biggarsberg, the range is no longer tenable by the Boers.

The fighting which took place was distinguished by the brilliant forty mile ride of Lord Dundonald, whose cavalry brigade followed up the Boer vanguard so closely that they were driven in disorder upon the main body, but unfortunately cut off, probably owing to the exhausted condition of the British cavalry.

It seems likely that the enemy are falling back along the line in order to concentrate at Laing's Nek and the Vaal. It is quite evident now that Buller has seized the Dundee coal fields and there is no prospect for the coaling of warships in Durban, the long coast line being completely cut off. The Boers have been driven from the Free State, the junction with Roberts, and the creation of Durban into a base of supplies for the Free State columns may follow.

STORY OF THE OPERATIONS.

General Buller Tells How He Drove the Boers Back.

London, May 15.—The War Office today furnished confirmation of the Associated Press story of yesterday telling of General Buller's move on the Biggarsberg. It is a despatch from Gen. Buller, as follows:—

"Kemp's Farm, May 15.—The following telegrams sent to Roberts are now repeated to you. They begin under date of May 13:—

"In accordance with instructions to keep the enemy occupied at the Biggarsberg, on May 11, I concentrated the third cavalry brigade of the second division and some corps of artillery at Sunday's River Drift on the Helpmakaar road, and directed Col. Bethune to advance on Greytown with the Bethune Infantry, the Umvoti Mounted Rifles and the Imperial Light Infantry. On May 12 we moved to Waschbank and Bethune to Pomeroy, while Gen. Hillyard, from Elandsburg occupied Andola Mountain.

On May 13 I sent Gen. Hamilton with three battalions up the steep slope of the Helpmakaar hill. The third cavalry brigade crossed a hill on each side of the main road and Bethune attacked by the Pomeroy road from three sides. The enemy hurriedly abandoned the position which they had strongly entrenched, and retired to the Nek in the direction of the Helpmakaar, whence we hope to dislodge them to-morrow, as many of them have retired. We have gained the summit of the Berg with the loss of only a few men wounded. I advance to-morrow on Beth and Hillyard moves on Wessels Nek. Our small force, I think, was certainly due to the excellent troop leading of General Hamilton and Lord Dundonald and Colonel Bethune."

A second despatch dated May 14, says:—"The enemy evacuated Helpmakaar New during the night, leaving a rear guard of about a thousand men in front of us. These we have forced back throughout the day under considerable difficulty, as they fired

all the guns on top of the Berg as they retreated, and the wind being favorable to us we were scarcely able to see at all. I halted the infantry, who marched very well throughout the hot smoke, at Beth. The cavalry have not yet reported, but are some miles ahead. We have taken a few prisoners. Our casualties are small."

A third despatch dated from Kemp's Farm, May 15, says:—"Dundonald reported late last night that he had driven the rear guard on to the main body of the enemy, near Buralinden, where they occupied in force a strong position with three powerful guns. Major Gough, with the composite regiment, manoeuvred to the right found their left flank and they retired. Dundonald then halted. He was twenty-five miles as the crow flies from his previous night's bivouac, and he had covered nearly forty miles during the day in a waterless country. I think his pursuit of a very fine performance. From prisoners I learn that the enemy numbered over 3,000 at Helpmakaar, and being now joined by those who left Van Jonder's Pass they must total nearly 3,000 men. We were on Dundee to-day."

"Hillyard reports the occupation of Wessels Nek, and is regaining the line."

GOT BACK THE COAL FIELDS.

Boers are Apparently Falling Back From Natal.

London, May 15.—Judging from Gen. Buller's despatches, the British advance is little more than an onerous march. The Boers, who were active at first, appear likely to have begun the same readiness to retreat which is now marking the movements of the Federals in the Free State. Apparently the burghers are about to evacuate Natal and concentrate for the defence of Laing's Nek northwards, and Van Heenan's Pass westward. The reoccupation of Dundee by the British places the coal supplies there again in their hands.

From elsewhere there is little news of a definite character. Interest for the moment is almost entirely centered in Mafeking, whence the wife of the Mayor to-day received a cablegram telling forth that all was well on May 5.

LOOTED AND LEFT DUNDONALD.

Enemy Entrained at Glencoe and Have Gone to Laing's Nek.

London, May 15, 1.55 p.m.—The War Office has received the following despatch from Gen. Buller:—

"Dundee, May 15, 1 p.m.—We have occupied Dundee. About 3,500 of the enemy left yesterday for Glencoe, where they entrained. Their wagons also left yesterday by De Jager's Drift and the Duthie road. Their Kaffirs said they were going to Laing's Nek. Almost every house in Dundee is completely looted. The navigation colliery is all right. The machinery of the Dundee colliery is destroyed. The houses of the town are damaged, but are structurally intact."

REFUGEES FROM MAPEKING.

Twelve Hundred and Eighty Reached Colonel Plimmer's Camp.

Plimmer's Camp, Friday, May 4, via Natal, Monday, May 8.—Natives who have arrived here say that the bombardment of Mafeking on May 1 was not heavy. Twelve hundred and eighty refugees from Mafeking have reached here.

Patriots who have returned from the northern borders of the Transvaal say they saw no signs of Boers. All is quiet here. The Boers regularly patrol the neighborhood of Mafeking, but do not seem to be disposed to be aggressive.

A TEMPERATE ARMY.

Praise of Men Who Marched from Modder River to Bloemfontein.

London, May 15.—At the annual meeting of the Army Temperance Association Maj.-Gen. Sir George White, the defender of Ladysmith, presiding, a letter from Lord Roberts, dated Bloemfontein, April 19, was read, during the course of which the writer says:—

"There never was a more temperate army than that which marched under my command from the Modder River to Bloemfontein. Nothing but good can result from so many soldiers being brought together in an arduous campaign, when they see how splendidly our temperance men have borne up against the hardships and dangers they have had to face."

CONCENTRATING ON THE VAAL.

Boers are Withdrawing from All Their Southern Positions.

Kroonstad, Monday, May 14.—It is reported that the whole of the Boer forces are concentrating on the Vaal and withdrawing from Biggarsberg and the southwestern borders. It is computed that not more than 2,000 Free Staters will fight on the Vaal.

Railway communication with this place is expected to be open on Tuesday. The transport is working smoothly, the troops and horses are receiving full rations, water is plentiful and the health of the troops is excellent.

HISTORICAL NOTES.

Toronto Evening Star: Newspapers throughout Ontario should warn their readers against so-called stock buyers, who promise to pay big prices for high-grade cattle, but manage to secure $5 from the owners of the cattle to pay the cost of having the pedigree transferred in the Ontario Stock Book, and are seen no more. It has a family resemblance to many other friends perpetrated upon farmers by men who seem to be honest and wealthy.

Stratford Beacon: The only thing that makes us feel at all shaky over Lord Robert's advance in the absence of a letter from Col. Sam. Hughes telling how he had instructed the Field Marshall to proceed. Col. Otter was hit twice with Boer bullets, yet continued to cheer his men on. If Col. Sam. Hughes got within range of Boer fire there would not be sufficient paper in South Africa to report his experiences. That is the difference between a man who fights with his head and hands and one who fights with his mouth and pen.

They are telling a funny story in Belleville a gentleman who used to wear a full beard and now goes clean shaven. He went into a barber shop to get his whiskers trimmed, and the barber who was operating on him got into animated conversation with another customer. The man in the chair got tired of the talk. "Oh, cut it short," he said. "All right," said the barber, but the talk went on. "Oh, say, cut it short," said the man in the chair, again. "D-n it, I am cutting it short," said the barber, and then the customer realized that he had been misunderstood, so he thought he might as well get clean shaven and be done with it, which he did, but the joke is on him, just the same.

Belleville must indeed have some very intelligent people if the gentleman referred to in the story is a fair average of its citizens. But then fish stories are reasonable now.

Well we are going to have a big celebration on Her Majesty's birthday. Tell your friends far and near and do all you can to swell the crowd and make this the greatest demonstration in our history.

A Kingston clergyman was fined for riding a bicycle on the grass in one of the parks. The Belleville Intelligencer says "perhaps he was learning. A man is liable to run anywhere when he is learning." As a sure case that if he tried to keep off of it he would be sure to do the contrary. It is ten to nine that you will strike everything in the road while you are trying to master this art.

Rev. Chas. M. Sheldon must have made a good thing out of the Tropic Capital. We note that he has given to charity some of his profits. His editorial experiences cannot have been so hazardous after all, most editors are content to save $5000 in a life time.

Despite Corbett's defeat in there are people who will have it that he is the best and most advanced man. To settle the issue the next time we should see business when he has the opportunity? There is no getting over the fact that Corbett has faced his betters and is now relegated to the list of "has-beens."

'Tis a long time since we heard anything of General French, but we are always "at ease" about him. Gen. French has been up recently at Doon and eight miles South of Koonstad where he seized the drift over the Valsch river. Gen. French can always be depended upon to achieve success in some degree. He is a born fighter, a shrewd tactician, a brave man, every inch a soldier.

"Opportunity is the Crown of Time."
Now is your opportunity. There is no time when the system is so much in need of a good medicine, like Hood's Sarsaparilla, and no time when it is so susceptible to the benefits to be derived from such a medicine. By purifying, enriching, and vitalizing the blood and toning up the system Hood's Sarsaparilla starts you right for a whole year of health.

Signor Torrello one day met a maiden Who, charmed by his out-stirring art, Stood in front of the cage and applauded the lions As each played its wonderful part—Signor Torrello, In words that were mellow, Laid siege to the fair maiden's heart.

Signor Torrello could look at a lion And cause it to cower in fear, But the look that gave Leo the chills Had no terrors For the lady who's figuring here—Signor Torrello—Alas, the poor fellow! Was conducted around by the ear.

Signor Torrello no longer tames lions, The beasts turned against him, one day, The look that once charmed them had ceased to be potent, They roared and refused to obey—Signor Torrello, Unfortunate fellow, All bloody was matted away! W. H. L. (C. L. F.) Signor Torrello, subdued and discouraged,

Now works by the day with his hands And is badgered for losing the look that made lions In terror obey his commands—Signor Torrello, Alack! how he fell! O His case as known, moral stand!

UNCONSCIOUSNESS.

The Causes That Induce This Condition and Its Various Phases.
It is often difficult when a person is found unconscious to determine the cause of the condition. Yet this determination is of the greatest importance, since upon it must depend the treatment and perhaps the life of the sufferer.

Of course this is a task for the physician, and it is often one that taxes his acumen to the utmost. But there are certain signs which every one may learn to know and so be prepared to prevent maltreatment before the physician arrives.

The chief causes of a sudden loss of consciousness are apoplexy, Bright's disease, diabetes, drunkenness, opium poisoning, injury to the head, epilepsy and fainting.

A person found unconscious should be placed on his back, the clothes, especially those about the neck, should be loosened, and he should have plenty of air, curious spectators being kept at a distance. If the breath smells of alcohol, the first thought is that the man is drunk, but it is most unsafe to assume this to be the case without corroborative evidence. The man may have taken a drink just before the accident befell him, or he may have been slightly drunk, and in that condition he may have had a stroke of apoplexy or have fallen or been struck a blow on the head, or some bystander may have poured whisky down his throat with the mistaken idea of helping him.

The head should first be examined to see if the skull is broken, if there is a wound of the scalp or if blood is coming from one of the ears, which is a sign of a fracture of the base of the skull.

Note should be taken of the breathing. If it is very slow, six or eight times or less a minute, the probability is that the case is one of opium poisoning. If the respiration is rather slow and moaning, with blowing out of the lips and of one cheek, apoplexy or concussion of the brain may be suspected.

In unconsciousness resulting from Bright's disease the breathing is usually more rapid and not noisy, and is that resulting from diabetes the inspiration is slow and prolonged, while expiration is short and quick. A drunken man can usually be aroused temporarily if spoken to in a loud voice or pricked with a pin, and the same is true of one suffering from Bright's disease, but in apoplexy and opium poisoning the unconsciousness is usually complete.

Unconsciousness may be hysterical in its nature and may simulate any of the types mentioned above. A dash of cold water in the face will often restore consciousness with great rapidity in such a case.—Youth's Companion.

A Race With the Sun.

The London Daily Mail says if an aerial machine were capable of traveling at any rate up to 1,000 miles an hour a traveler in it, starting westward from London at a speed of 600 miles an hour, would arrest the progress of time. If he started at 10 a. m., it would always be to him 10 a. m. Should he find his unending day monotonous, he could reverse his direction and get a quick succession of short days and nights of some six hours' duration, but he could regulate the length by the speed of his machine. Suppose he traveled from London one night at 10 o'clock westward at a speed of 1,000 miles per hour. He would soon experience the sensation of seeing the sun rising in the west where it had set a short time before.

MONEY AND WAR.

NATION'S STRENGTH MEASURED BY THE FORMER.

The Great Financial Burden Past Struggles Have Imposed on the Nations of the Earth—its Own Heritage.

Money is an essential to the conduct of war. Before a government can go to war, soldiers must be engaged and trained, fed and clothed, armed and transported to the scene of action. Men must be paid to enroll and drill the troops; butchers, bakers and grocers, tailors, shoemakers and hatmakers, gunmakers and the manufacturers of shot and shell must all be paid for the work they do, or the goods they furnish; laborers must be hired to handle stores of supplies, wagons and drivers to transport them, railroad and steamship companies do not work for nothing, and thus at every point, a government that would go to war is compelled to spend money in enormous amounts, for whatever is needed must be had at once, and the government is often forced to pay exorbitant prices for the advantage taken of its necessity by those who have something to sell.

GREAT WASTE IN WAR.

In addition to the initial expense of equipping an army and putting it in the field, the waste of war is frightful to contemplate. Soldiers in the field or camp are blessed with hearty appetites but what they eat is often only a small portion of what they want, for soldiers are not economical.
They use wagonloads of supplies abandoned by the wayside; they see depots of stores set on fire and burned to prevent their falling into the hands of the enemy; they see immense quantities of provisions sufficient in amount to support thousands of people for months, wantonly destroyed, as a "military necessity," so why should they be economical. Thus it is that the waste of an army exceeds its legiti-mate consumption; during a rapid movement, overcoats and other articles of clothing are thrown away;
during a disorderly retreat, valuable arms are dropped and never recovered, and as soon as reorganization begins the government is requested to furnish new clothing and fresh weapons to supply the place of those that have been lost or thrown away.

These facts furnish partial explanation of the frightful cost of war, a cost which has laid an immense burden of taxation on the shoulders of every nation in Christendom. An eminent political statistician estimates that over 90 per cent. of the debt of every civilized nation has been incurred either on account of war, as a result of war, as pension or disability claims, or of armament supposed to be necessary by the disturbed political conditions of the world in general or immediating attitude of a neighboring state.

THE FRENCH PUBLIC DEBT.

The debt of France, for instance,
last year amounted to $6,446,793,388,
the most stupendous national obligation in the history of finance. This sum, inconceivable in its magnitude, a mountain load which will burden the French people for generations to come, was incurred by one short war.
The Franco-Prussian conflict lasted only a few short months, and it not only decided the place of France in the family of Europe, but it saddled the nation with a debt which in all probability will never be paid. No such indemnity as that demanded by Germany from France was ever asked by any nation, the fact that it was paid with marvelous promptness is the strongest tribute that can be offered, not only to the commercial and industrial prosperity, but to the patriotic zeal of the French.

HOW ENGLAND IS BURDENED.

The national debt of England was incurred entirely during the foreign wars by which the empire was builted.
A well known statistical work contains a table which gives, year by year,
the national debt of England from 1775 down to the present time, and if one knows nothing of the history of the country and a quarter represented in this table, it would still be possible to determine with a close approximation to accuracy, the debt of the various wars in which the empire engaged and something of their severity
by the figures in the debt column.
In 1775 the sum was small, then for eight years there was a rapid augmentation year by year. A brief period followed in which the debt remained almost stationary, then, with the onset of the century, it began to rise and continued to mount higher and higher until 1815, the year of Waterloo. Another period of comparative quiescence followed, then came small variations, making the little campaigns undertaken by Great Britain against various minor antiagonists until 1855, when a considerable rise indicated the Crimean war. Leaving out of the calculation the war in South Africa, the most considerable augmentation of the debt in recent years has been caused by the necessity of increasing the armaments of Great Britain against possible combinations, but at cost money.

THE BURDENS OF OTHER NATIONS.

The debt of Russia is mostly the result of the giant military establishment by which the Iron Empire is maintained in its integrity. During the past few years considerable additions to the Russian debt have been caused by the extension of the empire's railroad system along the southern and western frontiers, but more especially in Siberia.
The railroad debt of Russia, however,
is but a trifle compared with the army debt, and when it is remembered that the Russian army on a peace footing numbers over 800,000 men, no surmise need be felt at the statement that the Russian debt is over three and a half billion.

While France, Russia and Great Britain have the heaviest burdens of debt and taxation, there are other nations afflicted with obligations not so large in amount, but even heavier when compared with the national ability to pay. The debt of Italy, for instance is $2,344,384,388 and that of Austria $2-38,384,388, but in each case the resources of the country are more severely taxed to meet this smaller obligation than are those of the three larger states which have a much heavier debt, and in each case the obligation was incurred either by war or by preparations for warlike contingencies the night arise.
Leaving out the calculation of the national powers, the people of the leading states of Europe are now paying interest on the stupendous sum of $22-385,000,000 the greater portion of which was expended either on war or in armies and navies.

We ourselves have had an experience of the cost of war. Our debt at present is a little more than two billions, a mere trifle when compared with the wealth and resources of this great country but the debt itself like that of every other nation, is in the main, the heritage of war. Our national obligations were heavy immediately after the close of the revolution, but were rapidly undergoing liquidation when the sec-

THE BEST NEWS YET!

TROUT LAKE CITY, B. C., APRIL 20, 1900.

"Your letter came while I was out, and I note what you say financially and otherwise, and certainly feel much interested in the property and more confident of the outcome than ever since my last explorations. I have men at work inside tunnel at $12 per foot and no stated amount of work. I will enclose a penciling showing how we are doing the work and give my reasons for the same. We traced two leads down by the end of Crosscut, of fine appearance (see diagram). Mr. Pettigrove was up to see the property and remained over night. I also had Mr. Shannon, the Geologist, up with me to confer with in reference to the property and the way it should be developed and so on. He will give his opinions through the columns of the "Eagle." He is a very conscientious and careful man and slow to advance ideas without proof. I asked him what he thought of my plan of development. He carefully looked the situation over inside and out and stated it was the best. He said in reference to the property that "it was one that merited an outlay of money and one no one should be afraid to invest in." He mentioned that in many respects it resembled the "Silver Cup." We will encounter lead No. 2 I think by May 1st and I am very sanguine we will have Ore at over 100 feet deep. We will have to drive 100 feet to get No. 3 lead. Now if your company can stand the expense of 100 feet of work at this time it certainly would be wise to do so, for we know at least something of the merits of No. 3. When we get the Main Ore Body located we then are made. It is there and I hope soon to be able to report having it. The conditions have never looked better than now.

J. W. Westfall.

Copies of the "Eagle" can be had on application. The work is being vigorously continued and we hope soon to be able to report having struck the Ore Body. Matters were never better for us than now and if you want a good investment get our shares while there is time.

A SUMMARY OF THE BRITISH-BOER CAMPAIGN

HEILBRON THE NEW CAPITAL.

He Declares This Town the New Capital of the Free State.

Kroonstad, Saturday, May 12.—President Steyn has gone to Heilbrun, not Lindley. He has declared the former the new capital. Four hundred burghers have given up their arms here and in this neighborhood. Although the bridge across the Vaal has been destroyed, a good deviation exists where the road ran before the bridge was constructed.

The Transvaalers are reported to be mowing at the Vaal. The Standard and Biggers' News of Johannesburg shows that dimensions exist in the Transvaal Volksraad. Railway repairs are progressing rapidly. The town accepts the occupation quietly.

BOERS HAD TEN GUNS.

But Their Only Anxiety Was to Get Away Quickly.

London, May 14.—It appears that the Boers at Kroonstad had been reinforced by 3,000 men from Natal last Friday, and that altogether 10,000 men, with twenty guns, trekked from Kroonstad on the approach of Lord Roberts. The Boers made an ineffectual stand at Baschrand and had elaborate entrenchments in front of Kroonstad, which offered great facilities for a rear guard action. Their only anxiety, however, appears to have been to get away safely with all their guns and convoys, which, again, they have successfully accomplished. The few stores they were unable to carry away they burned. It is said the Boer houses are in a wretched condition.

VANQUISHED BY AN IRISHWOMAN.

Lord Kitchener Could Not Destroy a Farm Which She Defended with Blarney.

New York, May 14.—A batch of correspondence from the London office of the Associated Press contains the following: "While Lord Kitchener was engaged in suppressing the Priska rebellion he ordered the destruction of a certain farmhouse. Not seeing any signs of his orders being carried out, he rode over with his staff, and found an interesting situation. In the door way of the doomed farm stood a pretty young Dutch girl, her hands clasping the door posts, and her eyes flashing fire from beneath her sunbonnet.

"The Irish sergeant in charge of the detail: 'wisha now, acushla,' etc., the party of destruction was vainly endeavoring to persuade her to let them pass in, but to all his blandishments of 'arrah maiden' turned a deaf ear, and a deadlock resulted. Lord Kitchener's sharp 'what's this,' put a climax to the scene. The girl evidently guessed that this was the dreaded chief of the staff, and her lips trembled in spite of herself.

"Kitchener gazed sternly at her, standing bravely though tearfully there, and turned to his military secretary and said 'put down, then, the commander's orders with reference to the destruction of nightmen's farm could not be carried out owing to unexpected opposition, forward, men.'

ONE KILLED, THREE WOUNDED.

Another List of Casualties in the Canadian Contingent.

Ottawa, May 13.—The Government has received a cablegram from Lieut. Col. Otter announcing that the following casualties in the Royal Canadian Contingent occurred on Thursday last:

Killed.—Pte. F. W. Floyd, 7th Fusiliers, London.

Wounded.—Ptes. E. Armstrong, R.C.A., Quebec; G. W. Leonard, 2nd

ford Rifles; A. F. McLean, 36th Dufferin Rifles.

No information is given as to the seriousness of the injuries to the wounded.

Lord Roberts, in his despatch of Thursday evening last, thus referred to the action in which the above casualties occurred: "Hamilton's column met with stubborn resistance, and Smith-Dorrien's brigade (including the Canadian Infantry) was engaged for some hours in protecting the rear and flank of his force."

CONDITION OF THE WOUNDED.

Ottawa, May 14.—According to information received at the Militia Department this morning in regard to the four casualties reported on Saturday, Pte. Armstrong, R.C.A., Quebec, was slightly wounded, Pte. A. R. McLean, 36th Dufferin Rifles was severely wounded and Pte. G. W. Leonard, 2nd Oxford Rifles was dangerously wounded.

SUCCESS OF GENERAL BULLER.

He Attacks and Defeats the Boers Near Ladysmith.

London, May 14.—A despatch received by the Associated Press from Pietermaritzburg, Natal, timed 12.05 p.m. to-day, bears the first intimation of success attained by General Buller in Northern Natal. The sender of this despatch evidently

"Gen. Buller's official telegram notifying his success at the Higgarsberg, received here an hour ago, has given great satisfaction. It is confidently anticipated that Dundee will be occupied by the British to-day. The residents of the North country are delighted, as forcing the Higgarsberg means that they will speedily be enabled to return to their homes. At about the time this message was filed another despatch to the Associated Press, dated Stone Hill Farm, 8.30 this morning says:—

"After four days' march eastward at the foot of the Higgarsberg ridges in the direction of Helpmakaar, which was occupied by the Federals, the second brigade on Sunday led the attack on their extreme right. In the direction of Pomeroy a small party of burghers occupied a ridge overlooking Helpmakaar, but they did not wait for the assault."

Recent British scouting in the direction of Dundee has shown that the Federals were in great force on the Higgarsberg. So apparently General Buller concluded that it was necessary to clean them from his rear before commencing a movement in the direction of the Drakensberg range. If this is his plan he has possibly divided his forces, sending one column eastward to threaten Vryheid and Utrecht and take Laing's Nek in the rear, while a westbound column attempts to form a junction with the force of Lord Roberts via the Harrismith road.

CAVALRY LEADER KILLED.

London, May 14.—8.15 p.m.—The War Office has received the following despatch from Lord Roberts:—

"Kroonstad, Sunday, May 13.—There were more casualties in the cavalry division May 13 than reported by me. I have been unable to get an exact account of what occurred, as the commanding officer, Captain Elworthy, was killed and two officers were wounded at the same time and have been sent to the rear. But it would appear that a party of the men, going to a kraal on which a white flag was flying, were suddenly attacked by a large number of the enemy. Two officers, Capt. Haig, of the Sixth Dragoons and Lieut. Wilkinson, of the Australian Horse, were made prisoners, and twenty-one men are still unaccounted for. Some of them have turned up, as the cavalry covered a considerable distance on May 10, and men reported missing have been rejoining during the last few days."

RELIEF OF MAFeking.

Mr. Wyndham Says it will Shortly be Accomplished.

London, May 14.—The Parliamentary Secretary of the War Office, Mr. Geo. Wyndham, in the House of Commons to-day declined to divulge Lord Roberts' plans for the relief of Mafeking, but added significantly that he hoped that they would shortly be accomplished.

GERMANS SURPRISED.

Roberts' March Worthy to be Compared With Kandahar.

Berlin, May 13.—The occupation of Kroonstad by Lord Roberts, without opposition has caused the greatest surprise here. The military experts of the Local Anzeiger find an explanation in the fact that many of the Boers have deserted. He says:—

"Lord Roberts' advance was splendidly executed. It is worthy to be placed beside the Kandahar expedition. The situation is now changed so greatly in favor of the British that the fate of the Transvaal Boers is settled. President Steyn's movement eastward is interpreted as confirming the rumors of bickering between the Transvaalers and the Free Staters."

KRUGER READS ONLY THE BIBLE.

Oom Paul Never Heard of Either Shakespeare or Goethe.

London, May 5.—A. G. Hales, profiting by an enforced stay among the Boers, relates a pathetic anecdote on Kruger. He writes:—

"Once, when out on a shooting expedition, the party had gathered around a camp fire and the conversation turned upon literature. There were English, Hollanders, Germans and Boers present, and each of them had much to say concerning celebrated writers of prose and poetry, except Oom Paul. He smoked his eternal 'long stem' and held his peace. The Germans and English nearly came to stripping off coats concerning the relative merits of Goethe and Shakespeare. At last they turned to the one silent figure at the camp fire, saying 'Look here, Oom Paul, which do you think the greatest writer of the two, Goethe or Shakespeare?' 'Never read either of 'em,' growled Kruger. 'Make Gott,' ejaculated the German. 'Then, what have you read?' 'Only this,' said Oom Paul, pulling a frayed and tattered Bible from his pocket. 'And I have not half mastered its stories. Yet I have read it day and night for well nigh forty years. When I have exhausted the Bible I'll perhaps find some time for Shakespeare and Goethe.'"

FRENCH STILL IN FRONT.

His Cavalry is Keeping in Close Touch With the Boers.

London, May 14.—Telegrams from Kroonstad indicate that Gen. French's cavalry is keeping Lord Roberts with the Boers. But perhaps Lord Roberts will be compelled to order a brief halt of his main body in order to allow the troops to recuperate after their exhausting marches of the past week. All the correspondents agree that to all intents and purposes the Free Staters have covered their military alliance with the Transvaal, though scattered bodies, they say, will hold out here and there for some time. At the same time a despatch from Cape Town dated to-day says a proclamation will be published in a week annexing the Orange Free State. It is also said that Gen. Botha (the commander-in-chief of the Boer

HEILBRON THE NEW CAPITAL.

He Declares This Town the New Capital of the Free State.

Kroonstad, Saturday, May 12.—President Steyn has gone to Heilbrun, not Lindley. He has declared the former the new capital. Four hundred burghers have given up their arms here and in this neighborhood. Although the bridge across the Vaal has been destroyed, a good deviation exists where the road ran before the bridge was constructed.

The Transvaalers are reported to be mowing at the Vaal. The Standard and Biggers' News of Johannesburg shows that dimensions exist in the Transvaal Volksraad. Railway repairs are progressing rapidly. The town accepts the occupation quietly.

BOERS HAD TEN GUNS.

But Their Only Anxiety Was to Get Away Quickly.

London, May 14.—It appears that the Boers at Kroonstad had been reinforced by 3,000 men from Natal last Friday, and that altogether 10,000 men, with twenty guns, trekked from Kroonstad on the approach of Lord Roberts. The Boers made an ineffectual stand at Baschrand and had elaborate entrenchments in front of Kroonstad, which offered great facilities for a rear guard action. Their only anxiety, however, appears to have been to get away safely with all their guns and convoys, which, again, they have successfully accomplished. The few stores they were unable to carry away they burned. It is said the Boer houses are in a wretched condition.

VANQUISHED BY AN IRISHWOMAN.

Lord Kitchener Could Not Destroy a Farm Which She Defended with Blarney.

New York, May 14.—A batch of correspondence from the London office of the Associated Press contains the following: "While Lord Kitchener was engaged in suppressing the Priska rebellion he ordered the destruction of a certain farmhouse. Not seeing any signs of his orders being carried out, he rode over with his staff, and found an interesting situation. In the door way of the doomed farm stood a pretty young Dutch girl, her hands clasping the door posts, and her eyes flashing fire from beneath her sunbonnet.

"The Irish sergeant in charge of the detail: 'wisha now, acushla,' etc., the party of destruction was vainly endeavoring to persuade her to let them pass in, but to all his blandishments of 'arrah maiden' turned a deaf ear, and a deadlock resulted. Lord Kitchener's sharp 'what's this,' put a climax to the scene. The girl evidently guessed that this was the dreaded chief of the staff, and her lips trembled in spite of herself.

"Kitchener gazed sternly at her, standing bravely though tearfully there, and turned to his military secretary and said 'put down, then, the commander's orders with reference to the destruction of nightmen's farm could not be carried out owing to unexpected opposition, forward, men.'

ONE KILLED, THREE WOUNDED.

Another List of Casualties in the Canadian Contingent.

Ottawa, May 13.—The Government has received a cablegram from Lieut. Col. Otter announcing that the following casualties in the Royal Canadian Contingent occurred on Thursday last:

Killed.—Pte. F. W. Floyd, 7th Fusiliers, London.

Wounded.—Ptes. E. Armstrong, R.C.A., Quebec; G. W. Leonard, 2nd

ford Rifles; A. F. McLean, 36th Dufferin Rifles.

No information is given as to the seriousness of the injuries to the wounded.

Lord Roberts, in his despatch of Thursday evening last, thus referred to the action in which the above casualties occurred: "Hamilton's column met with stubborn resistance, and Smith-Dorrien's brigade (including the Canadian Infantry) was engaged for some hours in protecting the rear and flank of his force."

CONDITION OF THE WOUNDED.

Ottawa, May 14.—According to information received at the Militia Department this morning in regard to the four casualties reported on Saturday, Pte. Armstrong, R.C.A., Quebec, was slightly wounded, Pte. A. R. McLean, 36th Dufferin Rifles was severely wounded and Pte. G. W. Leonard, 2nd Oxford Rifles was dangerously wounded.

SUCCESS OF GENERAL BULLER.

He Attacks and Defeats the Boers Near Ladysmith.

London, May 14.—A despatch received by the Associated Press from Pietermaritzburg, Natal, timed 12.05 p.m. to-day, bears the first intimation of success attained by General Buller in Northern Natal. The sender of this despatch evidently

"Gen. Buller's official telegram notifying his success at the Higgarsberg, received here an hour ago, has given great satisfaction. It is confidently anticipated that Dundee will be occupied by the British to-day. The residents of the North country are delighted, as forcing the Higgarsberg means that they will speedily be enabled to return to their homes. At about the time this message was filed another despatch to the Associated Press, dated Stone Hill Farm, 8.30 this morning says:—

"After four days' march eastward at the foot of the Higgarsberg ridges in the direction of Helpmakaar, which was occupied by the Federals, the second brigade on Sunday led the attack on their extreme right. In the direction of Pomeroy a small party of burghers occupied a ridge overlooking Helpmakaar, but they did not wait for the assault."

Recent British scouting in the direction of Dundee has shown that the Federals were in great force on the Higgarsberg. So apparently General Buller concluded that it was necessary to clean them from his rear before commencing a movement in the direction of the Drakensberg range. If this is his plan he has possibly divided his forces, sending one column eastward to threaten Vryheid and Utrecht and take Laing's Nek in the rear, while a westbound column attempts to form a junction with the force of Lord Roberts via the Harrismith road.

CAVALRY LEADER KILLED.

London, May 14.—8.15 p.m.—The War Office has received the following despatch from Lord Roberts:—

"Kroonstad, Sunday, May 13.—There were more casualties in the cavalry division May 13 than reported by me. I have been unable to get an exact account of what occurred, as the commanding officer, Captain Elworthy, was killed and two officers were wounded at the same time and have been sent to the rear. But it would appear that a party of the men, going to a kraal on which a white flag was flying, were suddenly attacked by a large number of the enemy. Two officers, Capt. Haig, of the Sixth Dragoons and Lieut. Wilkinson, of the Australian Horse, were made prisoners, and twenty-one men are still unaccounted for. forces) threatens to resign if any preparations are made for the wanton destruction of property.

Mr. Cecil Rhodes starts for Beira, Portuguese East Africa, to-day.

The correspondent of the Reuter Telegram Company at Cape Town says the American residents are taking steps to repudiate the statements of Mr. Webster Davis, the former United States Assistant Secretary of the Interior, who recently visited South Africa.

News from Mafeking is expected speedily. The War Office is reported to have expressed the opinion that news of raising the siege of that place may be expected by Wednesday.

CURTAIN RAISERS.

Marie Tempest deals the report that she intends to sing in the music halls in London.

Charles Frohman is having a play, based on Peg Woffington, written for Maude Adams.

This thing grows. Fay Templeton mimics Fingers and Fougere mimics Fay Templeton's mimicry of her.

Wilson Barrett's "Sign of the Cross" has been translated into Polish and has made quite a success in Warsaw.

Mrs. Campbell is to revive some of the Masterlink plays in London and produce others never seen there before.

Robert Lorraine, Julie Opp's former husband, who was to have acted with Ada Rehan in England, has gone to South Africa.

Marie Wainwright has engaged Payton Gibbs to play Napoleon to her Josephine in her vaudeville sketch, "Napoleon Versus Josephine."

Wm. Barrett has added Robert Eichen in his dramatization of his novel, "The Londoners," and will act in the play in all probability.

Henrik Ibsen's "When the Dead Awake" has been acted in three German cities with success, although without giving the impression that it was likely to enjoy lasting popularity on the stage.

It seems that the new theater in St. Martin's lane, London, will not be owned by Charles Frohman after all, though that energetic American impresario will hold the lease of it and will establish there his London comedy troupe, headed by Seymour Hicks and Ellaline Terriss.

TOOK PARIS GREEN.

Suicide of an Old Man on Farnell Street by Poison.

Thomas McCutcheon, an old resident, living alone on Farnell-st., committed suicide on Monday afternoon by taking Paris Green. It is supposed he took the dose before 4 o'clock and about 4.30 he appeared in the yard of his house doubled up and holding his hands over his stomach as if in pain.

Dr. McClellan was notified about 6.30 o'clock and when he arrived at McCutcheon's house he found him very low. He had been vomiting severely some time before but was unconscious and could not speak a word. Dr. McClellan applied the stomach pump and removed a large quantity of the fluid. The man was too far gone, however, and passed away about 10 o'clock.

Before the doctor's arrival a neighbor named Gibson was in and talked to the poisoned man. An empty cup with traces of Paris Green in it stood by and McCutcheon admitted having taken the poison.

The deceased was between 65 and 70 years of age. He has a sister living in Iowa, also a sister residing in Rochester. He was very respectable connected. He was not in want, being in fair circumstances, and it is hard to assign any reason for his act.

The Late Mrs. Finn.

The many friends of Mrs. James Finn, No. 105 Lake street, will regret to hear of her demise, which occurred yesterday morning after two years of painful suffering. The late Mrs. Finn was 34 years of age and was the daughter of Mr. John McMahon, of town. She has been married for about five years and leaves her husband and one child two years of age to mourn her demise. This is the third member of Mr. McMahon's family to die in the past four years, and much sympathy is extended to him. Mr. McMahon has been a resident of the town for nearly half a century. The funeral will take place this morning at St. Peter's Cathedral and thence to the Roman Catholic cemetery for interment.

A Young Life Ended.

A particularly sad death occurred on Sunday afternoon, when Bruce, the ten-year old son of Mr. Andrew Hewie, of Ashburnham, passed away. The lad, who was a bright, intelligent boy, and very popular, was taken ill first with rheumatism after school on Friday, the 4th, and this was not considered serious when an obstruction of the bowels necessitated an operation. Much sympathy is felt for the parents in which the Times joins. The funeral takes place this afternoon at 3 o'clock.

AT A SEWING SOCIETY.

Lady Gett Fanny on a Marvellous Drink.

"Our Sewing Society meets every week to sew and we always have lunch. Just as sure as I take a cup of coffee I get so silly and say such absurd things it seems as though I were intoxicated. I feel so ashamed of myself, but cannot help it. My heart will go to a triphammer and I am invariably kept awake half of that night. So I thought I would take my Postum Food Coffee next time and you should have heard the names they called me, 'old maid,' 'crank,' etc. But before the lunch was through, Postum had more than one convert and those who tried it were delighted. They had heard of it but had no idea it was so good."

"I have given a great deal of Postum away to friends, just to convince them how good it is and they invariably adopt it. There are so many people who cannot drink coffee without it. I have given them and Postum Food Coffee to be exactly the thing. Postum and I have been old friends for years. I began the use of it when it was first introduced, four years ago. At first I thought I could not use it for the way I made it, it was so flat and tasteless, but when I found out that it simply required long boiling, the old trouble disappeared and we always have an elegant cup of coffee when we make Postum right." Send Postum Cereal Co., Ltd., Battle Creek, Mich., for the name and address. Put a small piece of butter the size of a pea in the pot, to prevent it boiling over.

"Like Diamonds Raindrops Glisten."

Drops of Hood's Sarsaparilla are precious jewels for the blood which glisten in their use, and, like the rain, disappear for the good of humanity. Each dose when taken is in a very short time thoroughly mixed with the blood and actively getting in its work of purification. Hood's never disappoints.

Running Sore—"My mother was troubled with rheumatism in her knee for a number of years, and it broke out into a running sore. She took three bottles of Hood's Sarsaparilla and is now well. Hood's Olive Ointment helps to heal an eruption." Mrs. JOHN PARR, Cloverlawn, Ancaster, Ont.

Dyspepsia—"My wife suffered from rheumatism, dyspepsia and pains in her stomach. She had medical attendance but did not get relief. She read about Hood's Sarsaparilla and tried it. Three bottles entirely cured her. She is now a well and hearty woman." T. W. COVER, Cape Sable Island, N. S.

Eczema—"I was run down with complaints peculiar to my sex. Large sores broke out on my body head and limbs. I could not do any work on account of the itching. My trouble was termed eczema and I doctored for it for a long time. I then tried Hood's Sarsaparilla and several bottles effected a cure." Mrs. J. G. BROWN, Brantford, Ont.

Swelling—"I had a swelling on my chest. It caused me great pain and many sleepless nights. Physicians advised an operation but my daughter urged that I take Hood's Sarsaparilla instead. I did so and after using six bottles, the swelling went away and I have not had any more pain." Mrs. J. W. C. CHURCHMAN, 432 Front St., Belleville, Ont.

Organs Affected—"I was run down in health and had spells of coughing which left me prostrate. My lungs, heart and kidneys were affected. I took Hood's Sarsaparilla upon advice and soon felt better. I continued the treatment and now feel like a new woman." Mrs. SUMMERVILLE, 217 Ossington Avenue, Toronto, Ont.

THE LATE MRS. SCOTT.

Death of a Prominent Ashburnham Lady Yesterday.

The demise of Mrs. Scott, wife of Mr. Wm. Scott, of Ashburnham, took place yesterday morning at six o'clock, after an illness extending over a year.

The deceased lady's maiden name was Flora McDonald, daughter of the late Kenneth McDonald, of Glenora, Ontario, in the year 1852, and was therefore 48 years of age. In 1878 she married, and she and her beloved husband have for the past eight years resided in Ashburnham. Mrs. Scott leaves behind her husband to mourn her demise, three of a family. These are Dr. Andrew of Toronto, and Lizzie and Florence at home. Besides these there is Mrs. Scott's mother, and seven brothers and two sisters. The latter are Mrs. Ellis and Mrs. Reid of South Dumfries, Brant County, and the brothers are James, who has resided in Ashburnham for some time, William and Edmond of Glen Morris, Alexander, Donald and Loughlin of Brantford and Charles of Calumet, Michigan. Mrs. Scott bore her long period of suffering with Christian fortitude. Her husband and family have the sympathy of the entire community, in which the Times heartily joins.

The late Mrs. Scott was a member of St. Paul's Presbyterian church. The funeral will take place from the family residence, Ashburnham, on Wednesday afternoon at 3 o'clock, to the Little Lake cemetery.

An Important Law suit.

The case of Dover vs. Denn has been going on for some time before Judge Weller as Master in Chancery. Our readers will remember that this case relating to the estate of the late Stephen Wood, who died in 1892, having appointed by his will the defendant, Henry Denne, Thomas, Carruthers and John Burnham his executors. A law having occurred to the estate through the late John Burnham, the plaintiffs, Mrs. Dover and her daughter, seek to charge the other executors with the same. The amount claimed is about $6,000. The evidence has all been taken, and the case was argued by Mr. E. B. Edwards, Q.C., on behalf of the plaintiffs, and Mr. G. H. Watson on behalf of the defendant, Henry Denne, by Mr. W. H. Moore, on behalf of the defendant, Carruthers, and by Mr. R. M. Dennis, on behalf of the Burnham estate. At the conclusion of the argument judgment was reported.

PROSPECTUS

The institution has been formed by the consolidation of the Canada Permanent Loan & Savings Company, the Western Canada Loan & Savings Company, the Freehold Loan & Savings Company and the London & Ontario Investment Company, Limited. The Company has been incorporated under an act of the Parliament of the Dominion of Canada, confirmed by an act of the Legislature of Ontario.

The Company is authorized to carry on the business of lending money on the security of, or purchasing, or investing in mortgages upon, real estate, debentures, bonds, fully-paid-up stocks and other securities of any Canadian Government, or of a municipal corporation or chartered bank or incorporated company in Canada, but is not allowed to lend upon bills of exchange or upon promissory notes. The business of the company is restricted therefore to the safest and most stable classes of security which the Dominion of Canada affords.

The Company may receive money from the public by way of deposit or on debentures.

The debenture holders and depositors of the company have an equal first claim on its entire assets.

As in the general case, the amount lent by the company is less than half of the value of the property taken in security, and as every loan must be approved by an experienced Board of Directors, and by the officers of the Company, it is manifest that the debenture holders and depositors possess a most ample and substantial security for the money they may invest with the Company.

The debentures are issued subject to the restrictions imposed by acts of the Parliament of Canada and the Provincial Governments, which limit the amount to be borrowed upon debentures and deposits to an amount not to exceed in the aggregate three times the amount paid up upon its capital stock until the last day of July, 1904, and it is further provided, also, that the amount held on deposit shall not at any time exceed the aggregate amount of its actual paid-up and undistributed capital, and of its cash actually in hand or deposited in any chartered bank.

A further restriction is made that loans made by the Company upon the debentures, bonds, stocks or other securities of any incorporated company shall not exceed one-fifth of the paid-up capital of any such company nor one-fifth of the paid-up capital stock of the Canada Permanent & Western Canada Mortgage Corporation. As an additional security to bondholders and depositors, at the incorporation of the Company its shareholders voluntarily set aside a sum equal to twenty-five percent of its paid-up capital as a reserve fund, which confers no additional borrowing powers.

This reserve fund amounts to $1,500,000, actually paid up, this sum having been deducted from the amount of the capital as settled on the report of the four expert valuers appointed to appraise the securities of the four Companies, respectively.

Executors and trustees are authorized in Ontario by an act of the Legislature to invest trust funds in debentures of this Company, and its debentures are eligible for acceptance by the Dominion Government as security for the deposit which life and fire insurance companies doing business in Canada have to make.

DEBENTURES

Interest paid half-yearly on debentures issued for three, five or seven years. The debentures can be had in such sums not less than $100 as may be agreed upon and are registered at the Company's offices. Interest accrues from the date on which the money is received by the Company.

SAVINGS DEPARTMENT

Interest is allowed on savings deposits of $1.00 and upwards, paid or compounded half-yearly. Deposits may be withdrawn on such short notice as may be arranged.

LOAN DEPARTMENT

Loans made upon first mortgage on real estate at current rates, and on favorable terms. Call or time loans made upon municipal debentures bonds and stocks.

THE ENEMY HAS NOW EVACUATED BIGGARSBERG

The Free Staters on the Drakensberg Mountains
Are Much Reduced in Numbers.

BULLER OCCUPIES GLENCOE, BOERS ESCAPING.

Transvaal Road Behind Closed Doors, Discuss the Expediency of Destroying the Mines—Battery of Canadian Artillery in Portuguese Territory.

London, May 17. Sir Charles Warren during the operations on the Tugela, has been in the forefront of the fighting which led to recent successes and is awarded a large share of praise by General Buller for its perseverance and courage. The Transvaal Boers have left their strongest position in Natal, south of the rocky ground, near Laing's Nek. Hlatikulu, the most formidable eminence of the Biggarsberg, was abandoned on Sunday and Monday last, the Boers, as usual, being able to take away their guns and baggage. Moreover, the northward march of Buller had the effect of depleting the Free State forces defending the Drakensberg, who are in danger of being outflanked by both Buller and Roberts. It is likely that a few commandos from the Free State still hold that portion of the Biggarsberg which joins the Drakensberg, though their tenure will scarcely be long, as they are subjected to the same risk as their friends on the border mountains. It now seems apparent that the movement of General Buller is paving the way for a junction of the two forces through Van Reenen's Pass via Harrismith, which cannot be long delayed, as the Boers deploring that pass will shortly have three forces threatening them—that of Liebenow at Kroonstad; that of Brabant, advancing from Ladysmith. The abandonment of the pass is therefore only an affair of a few weeks at the farthest. The new concentration of the Boers at Helbronner Station is not seriously taken. Properly it should be termed a halt in order to rest after the incessant pursuit of the past few weeks. In all likelihood it will be followed by a further retreat as soon as Roberts begins to move again. The news that General Buller is preparing a force at Klerksdorp, which is in the Transvaal, almost north of Kroonstad, indicates that General Buller, who was last heard of north of Kimberley, is progressing more rapidly than was thought, and that the Boers anticipate an invasion of their country from the western border.

London, May 17. The War Office has issued the following despatch from General Buller dated Dundee, May 16:—
"We occupied Glencoe yesterday. The Transvaalers have now evacuated Biggarsberg. The Free Staters on the Drakensberg are much reduced in numbers. The Carolina, Lydenburg and Pretoria commandos have been driven north from Hlatikulu on 13th and 14th May. Eleven guns were captured at Glencoe. The last largely being produced by the action of the fifth division, which, during the past few days, has done a great deal of very hard work—marching, mountain climbing, and road making.
"Trains are now running to Wessels Nek Station."

Persons acquainted with Col. Baden-Powell's defence at Mafeking, assert that the occupation of the Kaffir location by the Boers would not endanger the garrison provided relief came quickly. A gentleman from Cape Town says that Mr. Cecil Rhodes has decided to retire altogether from Cape Colony politics.
London, May 16, 3.30 a.m.
The British relief column fought the Boers at Kraaspoort, 12 miles south of Mafeking on Tuesday, according to a telegram received Wednesday night at Lorenzo Marques from Moloop one hundred miles north of Mafeking. This intelligence is accepted here with some reserve, because it is difficult to understand how the news could have been so quickly put on the wire from a place 120 miles from the scene of the engagement.

A correspondent of the Morning Post, presumably John Stuart, is reported captured by the Boers at Kraaspoort. The British public is keenly expectant of the announcement that Mafeking has been relieved. In army circles the opinion seems to prevail that this has already been accomplished, although 2 hours after midnight the War Office said that no news of the relief had been received. The steadfast courage of the hunger-bitten garrison has produced a deep impression and the news of success is awaited with more anxiety than has been felt regarding any other centre of the war.

RECONQUEST OF NATAL.
Buller Has Recovered All Britain's Territory Held by Boers.
London, May 16.—General Buller is rapidly making the reconquest of Natal. Already he has recovered all the territory which the British forces held at the beginning of the war. After recapturing Dundee, he pushed forward to the west along the branch line connecting the colonies with Glencoe Junction, on the main line from Ladysmith into the Transvaal, and yesterday took possession of Glencoe. Thus the British again hold the advanced line for the defence of Natal, which the late General Symonds considered, so ill-advisedly, could be defended against the Boer invasion, but which had to be abandoned. It is interesting to note that the fifth division, commanded by the evening of the 9th General French, two two brigades, General Hutton's Mounted Infantry, including the Canadian mounted contingents, two batteries and six one-pounder Maximas, crossed the Zand River and bivouacked at Dupre's laager, with the object of turning the Boers' right and cutting communications with Ventersburg station. The circle they made was not quite big enough, since General French found 3,000 Boers, with five guns, covering the flank in anticipation of the movement. The Boer force included the Afrikaner Horse, a new corps, each man provided with two horses. The Boers' precautions precluded a strategic outflanking, but by skillful disposition the enemy were tactically turned before nightfall.

The Boers showed a white front, and at one time faced the cavalry in the open when racing for possession of a rise. The skirmishing forestalled the movement, but suffered from rifle fire. By working the brigades in semi-circles to the left General French was able to turn the Boer positions. General Porter's brigade retired magnificently at a walk under a shell fire, and General Dickson's brigade was able to charge a party of 400 Boers, subverting twelve and taking some prisoners. The move was five minutes too late to be absolutely effective, but the enemy turned and fled back. The whole cavalry force thereupon advanced to Graaf Reu.

General French then determined to make a second circle, the object being to cut the railway north of Kroonstad, securing the drift over the Valsch River. As General French arrived in the difficult country near the drift he had the satisfaction of finding the enemy in force advancing in anticipation of the move. One shell was sufficient to show them that they were forestalled. The enemy deployed as they stood, and General French, still pursuing his object, reached a farm at Boshof. It was impossible to move further that night. The force had marched forty miles that day, and had been two days without supplies.

Major Hunter Weston and Scout Burnham, with eight mounted sappers and one squadron, started to destroy the railway. The squadron was left behind, being too cumbersome and the rest of the party pushed north-west, in irregular order, and without helmets. They came in contact with patrols of the enemy, and found that the Boers had a systematic line of pickets. Turning towards America siding they found the Boer army retreating, and some of them bivouacking along the line. Hunter, Weston and Burnham were forced to proceed alone. They surprised a vedette of two men and took them prisoners.

They were repeatedly challenged by passing Boers, but effected a ruse by lying down, their horses in the dark being then mistaken for loose animals. Hunter, Weston and Burnham again kept forward and lay down by the side of the road, and found that the Boers had a systematic line of pickets. Turning towards America siding they found the Boer army retreating, and some of them bivouacking along the line. Hunter, Weston and Burnham were forced to proceed alone. They surprised a vedette of two men and took them prisoners.

COMMITTEE DON'T AMOUNT TO MUCH.

The Boer Peace Commissioners Are Not Received by Representative Men at New York.

New York, May 16.—There is hardly any name in the general executive of the New York committee for the reception of Boer envoys which stands for anything that men respect, not even wealth. Their names only represent race prejudice, corrupt politics and perhaps here and there ignorant sympathies. The members are mostly Dutch and Irish, including the notorious Patrick Egan, one of the Tammany bosses, sundry self-advertising nobodies, and some Germans.

The envoys were eager to hear the latest news from the war. When told of the reverses to their arms, and the advances made by Lord Roberts, they merely shrugged their shoulders. "Such news," said Mr. Fischer, "does not concern us in the least. We read these despatches between the lines; besides, what difference does one or a dozen reverses mean to us? We never propose to stop fighting until we have gained what we are fighting for, our independence."
The delegates were reticent concerning their plans. "We cannot say anything which may hinder our cause," said Mr. Fischer. "We should like to have the Government arbitrate with England, and undoubtedly we shall go to Washington and try to have an audience with President McKinley. If we cannot induce the Government to do what we like, we shall try to arouse the people, so that they will compel the Government to recognize us in that way."

When asked as to the truth of the report that some of the Red Cross men were fighting in the Boer army, Mr. Fischer said: "Of this I know nothing, though some may have joined our forces when they knew the truth. Some attaches who have gone down there to see us fight, have, when they saw us fight and knew the relations of the war, said to us: 'Give us guns, for we want to fight with you.'"

Mr. Fischer said their future plans were still undecided, and that they would be largely guided by events as they happened. As it is, the Reception Committee have received invitations for the delegates from the mayors of sixty towns and cities in the United States, and it is probable that they will visit many of these places before sailing again for the continent.

FOOLS, WHO AND WHAT THEY ARE.

Evangelist Geil Talks to a "Full House" at St. Paul's Church Last Night.

St. Paul's church was crowded last night on the occasion of Mr. Geil's discourse on Fools. There are lots of them, said Mr. Geil, but he didn't mean to insult that that was why the church was so well filled. Fools are people who deal more in reputation than charity. Did you ever study pigology? asked Mr. Geil—ever a pig convert see upwards. A pig cannot see the stars unless you get him on his back. Many people have pig eyes. They cannot see anything high and holy unless they are on their back. You are religious when sick, but you're no use for the preacher unless you're very sick. You always want to see a preacher when you're about to die, or when there's somebody dead. Headless people are fools, and he repeated the parable of the farmer whose crops were so large that his barns would not hold them, and who was visited by the Angel of Death, who said to him, "This night thou shalt surely die—this night thy soul is required of thee." Oh, friends, it is a sad matter when God calls a man a fool. The man who saves 25 cents a day in preparing for a rainy day, is a fool unless he has first sought the love and protection of Almighty God. Thick headed people are fools. A man who says in his own heart that there is no God, is a fool. It is bad enough to say it in the head—but oh my friends, coming from the heart it is terrible. God forbid there are any thick headed fools in Peterborough.

However, after he had said sufficient experience, there chanced to come his way a man who cut him down. This man was an abnormal curiosity—a colossal fool. Then we have the wee-little bit of a fool—the cigarette food—the smallest fools on the planet. This kind of a fool reminds me of a cycle with the rim cut off. Boys and young men, if you want to commit suicide, go and take a big dose of rought on rats—it will do it a little quicker and without half so much amell. You poor little wee-fool—stop trying to commit suicide. If you have no brains go to the butcher shop and buy some. It does not pay to commit sin. If you must boast, boast of the things that are good and high, and holy, and beautiful. Self-confident people are fools. This class carries the most fools, said Mr. Geil. It takes no longer to live a godly life than an ungodly life. It costs no more to live and serve God than it does to serve the devil.

A man had a fool. One day this man hired a carpenter to do a job for him. At dinner hour, the carpenter having eaten his dinner, laid himself down on the chip pile with his head on a chopping block and fell asleep. The fool came along, and seeing an axe lying close by, picked it up, and lifting it high brought it down on the carpenter's neck, severing the head from the body. Picking the warm head up, while the eyes were still quivering, he dug a hole in the chip pile, and placed it in, covering it up. This is a fact, reiterated the Evangelist. The fool's master came up, and demanded a reason for this awful deed. The fool shrieked with laughter, and said what a joke it would be for that carpenter when he woke up to find his head. Ah, my friends, it don't pay to be a fool. Don't go against the teaching of Christ in trying to please yourself. He that is unjust, let him be unjust. There is a chance for fools to be saved. Will you leave the track of fools and get on the track of the wise?

The bouncer is a fool. Whatsoever a man soweth that shall he also reap. The man who says he can take a drink or leave it alone is a fool. A man who tries to be an abnormal curiosity is a fool—the cigarette food—the smallest fools on the planet. A German poet wished to describe how it would feel to be hung. So he got a rope and a box and tied the rope around his neck after fastening it to a beam, and kicking the box from under him—hung by the neck, fortunately or unfortunately—I don't know, which

MAFEKING'S GARRISON REPULSES AN ATTACK.

Portuguese Despatch Says the Defenders Drove Back the Enemy With Great Loss.

BADEN-POWELL'S DEFENCE NEARLY AT AN END.

Between Disease and Famine on One Hand and Boer Rifles on the Other the Garrison Must be on Its Last Legs.
Carrington's Force Delayed.

London, May 16.—The fate of the intrepid garrison of Mafeking now hangs in the balance. Between famine and disease on the one hand and the Boer rifles on the other Baden-Powell and his band of heroes are having their courage and endurance tried to an unheard of degree. The garrison must be on its last legs. It must be fighting the fight of the desperate. After seven months of combat by day and alarm by night and a diet worse than that of the Algerian galleys, every man is in anything but a robust condition. Recognizing this the Boers are pushing the siege more vigorously than ever. The last attack upon the town nearly reached home, for the active quarters which were seized and burned are within the westerly limits of the town and are the nearest point to the centre yet reached by the enemy. Desperate fighting took place and according to an official despatch from Lorenzo Marques the Boers were beaten back. That they could penetrate so far toward the heart of the citadel, hitherto inviolate, shows, however, that the resisting power of the garrison is immensely weaker and that relief must come quickly if it comes in time. There is reason to think that the attack may be a sign that the southern relieving column, last reported at Vryburg nearly two weeks ago, is nearing the beleaguered place and that the Boers intend to make a last despairing effort before retiring. It is to be hoped that this is the case and that one of the most glorious defenses in history may not have provided abortive.

REPULSED WITH HEAVY LOSS.

Lorenzo Marques, May 16.—A Portuguese official despatch says an encounter has occurred at Mafeking and that the Boers have been repulsed with heavy loss.
PROVISIONS RUNNING LOW.
Mafeking Cannot Endure Much Beyond the Present Month.
London, May 16.—A special from Bulawayo to the Times says:—
"Messages from Mafeking show that the provisions are very low, and it is doubtful whether the garrison can hold out much beyond the end of the month. Col. Plumer has contrived to cover the escape of 1,000 native non-combatants from the town, though his attempts to get cattle in have been unsuccessful."

MAFEKING IN SOME STRAITS.

Boers say that Baden-Powell has Surrendered the Town.
London, May 16.—The correspondents make it clear that the besieged British are suffering from perpetual hunger, food is being asked out in quantities only sufficient to preserve life, and that the Boers have now come to eating anything that can be eaten, and are thankful to have it. Horse, locust and mule are familiar articles of diet to everybody, and horsehide brawn is extensively made. It is not bad, though it is somewhat gluey. The whole garrison have relinquished their daily allowance of an ounce of sugar to enable the young women's and children's amount to be increased.

"There's an aching void here. Pass the loaf," writes another, with grim humor.
Lady Sarah Wilson on May 3 telegraphed to her sister in London that her breakfast on that day consisted of horse sausages and her lunch of minced mule and curried locusts.

Nevertheless, all the messages have a certain degree of cheerfulness. Since they were despatched, however, the garrison have been put to a severe test. It is evident that the Boer assault on May 12 was resolute, and resulted in desperate fighting, the result of which is not fully known. There are no reports from the British side, and nothing official from the Boers' side, but some unofficial accounts have reached London by way of Lorenzo Marques.

One account says that after severe fighting in the streets, Col. Baden-Powell asked for an armistice Saturday and surrendered Sunday morning. Unofficial Boer bulletins, however, have also proved untrue that this is not believed.

MORE TROOPS REACH BEIRA.

Over 4,000 of Carrington's force have Been Landed.

London, May 16.—About 1,100 Omore troops, 4,000 in all, have arrived at Beira, Portuguese East Africa. Among them is Lord Dunraven, who accompanied the Dunraven sharpshooters as a supernumerary captain on the battalion staff.
The Governor of Beira, Senhor Noyelles, during a speech at a dinner of the Yeomanry, said:—
"Friends as we have always been of England, we never could have realized the magnificent unity of the Anglo-Saxon race without such an object lesson. Realizing this, Portugal not only congratulates her ancient ally, but rejoices with it, as the strengthening of a friend is the strengthening of ourselves."

Apparently Lord Roberts is still waiting at Kroonstad preparatory to making a swift movement on the Vaal River.

ADVISED TO SURRENDER.

Delegates do not Recommend Resistance Across the Vaal.

London, May 16.—A cable from Cape Town announces that the Boer delegates advised the Transvaalers to surrender if defeated at Vaal. This remarkable announcement is vouched for on good authority and evidently obtains more credence in Cape Town than would a mere rumor.

CARRINGTON'S FORCE DELAYED

Railway Construction at Bambo Creek Hampers His Movements.

Bulawayo, May 13.—The change from a narrow to a broad gauge of the Beira Railway at Bambo Creek is causing great delay in the transport of General Carrington's force. Many horses have died there, and owing to the unhealthiness of the locality a certain amount of sickness among the men is inevitable.

ANOTHER WHITE FLAG OUTRAGE.

London, May 16.—The War Office posts the following despatch from Lord Roberts under date of Kroonstad, May 15:—

"Two officers and six men of Prince Alfred's Guards, while out foraging yesterday a few miles from Kroonstad, sighted a farm flying a white flag, the owner of which surrendered himself with arms and ammunition. They then approached another farm, also flying a white flag. When within forty yards of the enclosure they were fired upon by sixteen Boers concealed behind a farm wall. Two of the men were killed, Lieut. F. H. Walton was wounded, and Lieut. W. H. Evertson and two non-commissioned officers were taken prisoners.
"The owner of the farm states that the Boers threatened to shoot him when he protested against their making an improper use of the white flag."

ELECTED THEIR OFFICERS.

LIBERALS OF WEST PETERBOROUGH IN ANNUAL CONVENTION.
Express Their Loyalty to the Government and to Great Britain.

The annual meeting of the Liberal Association of West Peterborough was held last evening in the old business college hall on Water street, and was attended by a number from all parts of the riding. Mr. G. M. Roger, the secretary, called the meeting to order, and, after asking for the election of a new president to succeed the late president, Dr. Bell, the balloting took place, and resulted as follows:
Election of Officers.
Hon. J. R. Stratton and Richard Hall, honorary presidents.
Peter Hamilton, president.
Geo. Elliott, Smith, and A. J. Gough, town vice presidents.
G. M. Roger, secretary.
Dr. Mober, treasurer.

It was also decided to elect an Executive Committee, to be composed of five town representatives and two representatives from each of the municipalities. These to be subsequently elected.
Expressed Their Loyalty.
It was then moved by Mr. D. O'Connell, Peterborough, seconded by Mr. Graham, Smith, to express the loyalty of the Liberals of Peterborough to the Crown and Empire and to declare themselves ever ready in forum or in field to maintain their connections with and the interests of the Empire with all the energies of their hearts, heads and hands, and to remain true to the traditions of the Liberal party in their relation to Great Britain, which relations had so ably been recently pronounced by the Right Honorable Sir Wilfrid Laurier.

Moved by G. W. Elliott, seconded by A. J. Gough, that they also express their unshaken loyalty and confidence in the Government of Sir Wilfrid Laurier, whose leadership has been so faithfully performed and under whose Premiership so many splendid acts had been given to the Canadian people, such as would best serve to build up and conserve our best interests.
W. F. Kerr moved, seconded by Dr. Mober, that they also express their loyalty and confidence in Hon. G. W. Ross, the able premier of the banner province of Ontario, whose useful legislation would serve to open up New Ontario and crown the province with the greatest blessings that a government could bring upon their subjects.
Hon. J. R. Stratton responded in very able and eloquent terms to this resolution, and also thanked the Association in the most glowing terms for the honor and confidence they had placed in him.
The meeting then broke up with cheers for the Queen.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

The burghers are making noble progress toward Pretoria, with the British bringing up the rear of the procession.

The stubborn resistance made by the garrison in Mafeking is attributed in part to their diet of stewed mule.

The new Hamilton paper is to be called the Post. Hamilton is the post-hole.

A third Canadian contingent for active service could easily be raised now. There is many a man who would gladly leave his happy home during this house cleaning season.

It is a pity that the politicians who loot the treasury cannot be tried by the same august tribunal which gave a Canadian soldier 50 days at hard labor for "looting" a chicken.

Through the operation of Boston's Sunday cigar law, people who wanted to smoke there last Sunday were compelled to buy a cheap box of matches at a large price, and receive the tobacco, cigar or cigarette as a present. That excuse wouldn't hold water the twentieth part of a second before Mr. Dumble's Court.

If the Prince Edward Island government had only attended in time to the switching of a few ballots they would not now have to worry along with a fighting majority of one more than nothing.

If the Boers could only call the game off on account of wet grounds they'd cheerfully refund the gate money.

New York's ice trust has most appropriately frosted out its competitors.

The Bloomington correspondent to the London Daily News has this to say of our boys in service in South Africa.
"To Canada we take off our hats. She has sent us, besides other worthy representatives, a regiment of infantry that wins admiration from every soldier for marching, endurance or fighting. I can challenge comparison with any battalion in Lord Roberts' army and that is saying a good deal." But Lord Roberts says a good deal more. The fact that he has placed the Canadians in the front of his advance and that they occupy that part of honor is more than even the most sanguine Canadian anticipated or thought of. Our boys in South Africa have not only done as good service as the "heroes of a hundred hard battles" but they have shown by their endurance on the field that the Canadians are the most hardy men upon the field. Imagine men, some of them, not yet matured, fresh off the farms, fresh from the office and enclousure going from here in the cold winter to a climate as hot as our warmest summer days, marching hundreds of miles under a scorching sun, facing dangers of dust, deprived of food and water forcing their way to do honor to their native land to win victory for the motherland! It is something for Canadians to be proud of while their success as fighting men, and the unstinted praise they have won from the commander-in-chief should make us doubly proud, we cannot do too much for our brave sons in South Africa.

The Hamilton Spectator says that there are millions of boys who have read defective stories and who have never killed their fathers. Granted. But that is no reason why this class of literature should not be put under the ban of a prohibitive measure. The fact that it has caused boys to slay their fathers and that fact these works are responsible for no small portion of juvenile crime is enough. The Hamilton Spectator unwisely, and perhaps more for arguments sake, always has a tendency to advocate something that is distasteful to the minds of the moral and best class of citizens. The Spectator, in losing its usefulness as a great family journal, is digging its own grave fast.

Strange names occur in marriages some times. Over in Missouri last week Miss Klemwell was married to Mr. Lovegood.—
Toronto Star.

That's about equal to the marriage once recorded between Mr. Cobb and a Miss Webb. It is said that he loved the partner of his choice, such as a spider.—Brant ford Courier.

Within a few weeks Times' exchanges have had marriage notices reading: "Buck-Whet" and Dunn-Brown, and not many years ago we noticed one in which the names were "Young-Lamb," Hamilton Times.

Half the space in the Manila papers is taken up by advertisements of American whiskey and beer. The New York World insinuates that the guileless Filipino may take kindly to this kind of assimilation.

The Trenton Advocates presents the following as "beautiful lines of a real live, spring, poet." The only fault we find about it is that it is too much of a good thing, we feel a great relief when we reach the end of it. Probably 'tis the authors first attempt.

"The Spring has come so bright and
The winter has all passed away,
And there's nothing that seems alarming,
But new scenes rise every day.

We see the little elms skipping
To pasture, fields where they do graze,
And then, again, we see them nippling
The blades of grass as they do raise.

The frogs are in the water croaking
They sleep the water all away—
Now they sound as if joking
Over the new scenes of the day."

Oh how lovely! Trentonites should ward this poet with a leather medal.

"A Penny Saved is a Penny Earned."

Economy is the lesson taught by this saying. It is true economy to take Hood's Sarsaparilla at this season because it purifies, enriches, and vitalizes the blood and thus prevents sickness and puts the whole system in a state of health for the coming season. Every bottle of Hood's Sarsaparilla contains 100 doses—positive proof that it is economy to take only Hood's.

Constipation is cured by Hood's Pills.
25 cents.

A Good Idea.

The proposal to ask the government to complete the canal as quickly as possible from Lakefield to the Wawan Road, (over the Smith street bridge, at Curtis' brickyard) is a good one. It would afford means of bringing down wood if nothing else. There are many thousands of cords of wood on the back waters that can be had almost for the taking away. We suggest that the Board of Trade wait on the County Council at its prime session and have a memorial sent from that body to the government, praying for the early completion of this part of the canal.

Spring.

Spring! Who said spring?
It's a singular thing
How early and often our hopes we revive,
Then we shiver and shake
While something we take
To drive off the blues, and keep us alive.
If pneumonia's his,
And doctors and pills,
Or worse misfortunes you'd gladly eschew,
If you would be wise,
Do as I advise—
Stick to your flannels till they stick to you.

Setting Off Sky-Rockets.

Storekeepers who sell small boys fire works should be able to explain of their youthful customers how the things go off and illustrate the point before letting the small boy go. Yesterday a small boy bought a match from a passer by on Stewart street. He had a small rocket in his hand. The man rummaged for a match, and asked the boy how he intended to hold the stick in his hand.
This would mean that the contents of the rocket would discharge into the lad's hand and if he held the rocket high like a Roman candle, as he mistook it for, he might have got the burning powder in his face. The pedestrian gave him a lesson on how to set off the rocket and advised him to go to some place where there was plenty of room. Boys who know so little about fireworks should not be allowed to handle them.

No Man's Head the Boots.

The Belleville Intelligencer says—
"They are telling a pretty good story of a youngster who took his boots to a shoemaker to be repaired, and the conversation turned on the war, the Knight of St. Crispin remarking that he hoped the British would be "licked out of Africa." "Is that so?" said the little chap. "Well, if that's the kind of a man you are you can't mend my shoes," and he pinned them up and walked out."

A SUMMARY OF THE BRITISH-BOER CAMPAIGN

OFFER TO UNITED STATES.

Boers Will Ask McKinley to Declare a Protectorate.

New York, May 15.—According to the Pretoria correspondent of the Herald the commission composed of Messrs. Fischer, Wessels and Wolmarans, representing the Republics of the Transvaal and Orange Free State, which is expected to arrive here today, is empowered to take immediate action. The correspondent says: "I have the highest authority for making the statement that the Commission are empowered to ask the United States to assume a protectorate over the Republics, this protectorate to extend, if desired, towards eventual annexation as territories of States."

"Secretary of State Reitz, who is rapidly breaking down under the strain he is undergoing, voiced this national hope in these words: 'We will maintain our independence if we can. If we can't we will appeal to the American people to take us under their wing. Surely the Declaration of Independence is broad enough to span the ocean. Our last hope is that, having again and again carried our burden of persecution into the wilderness to escape from England, we may be permitted to deposit it at the peace and protection under the Stars and stripes.'"

BOERS COMPLETELY CHECKMATED.

General Buller Clears Them from Ladybrand District.

Brand's Drift, Sunday, May 13.—Gen. Buller has completely checkmated the attempt of the Boers to come south again, and the enemy are retreating before the persistent advance of the British. Many have been captured or are surrendering. There were 150 of them yesterday and today, among them President's Steyn's brother.

BOER ENVOYS SIGHTED.

Steamer Maasdam Sighted Off Fire Island This Morning.

New York, May 15.—The steamer Maasdam which sailed from Rotterdam twelve days ago with the Boer envoys on board was sighted off Fire Island at 5.35 a.m. today. She will reach her rock about 1 p.m.

BADEN-POWELL STRIKES A BLOW.

Boers Were Surrounded in Moving Column to Mafeking.

Lorenzo Marquez, May 15.—The Boers Saturday occupied the Kaffir location at Mafeking. They were in turn attacked during the night of Saturday and on Sunday found themselves surrounded. The Boers lost seven dead and seventeen wounded. The British loss is reported to have been heavy.

MAY OSTRACISE TAMMANY.

Crocker's Action Regarding the War Suggests the Proposal.

London, May 15.—The Express to-day advocates the ostracism of Richard Crocker in England in retaliation for Tammany's attitude on the war. It says: "It has not escaped notice in this country that the American welcome to the Boer delegates has been inspired and encouraged by Tammany Hall, which is controlled by the notorious Boss Richard Crocker. The records of Tammany are already black enough without the addition of this new infamy. But what makes the action of Tammany particularly infamous now is the fact that Crocker claims this hospitality of an English gentleman and runs race horses on the English turf, yet in aiding and encouraging the worst of England's enemies."

"If Crocker finds that the bracing air of the United States does not invariably suit his constitution he should secure the calm seclusion of an Italian villa, with in reach of the Duke of Orleans, whose company he will probably find congenial."

COMMENTS OF THE TIMES.

Roberts Must Make a Halt at Kroonstad for Reorganization.

London, May 15.—The Times says:—On Sunday the main force of Lord Roberts concentrated at Kroonstad, and is now resting after a rapid and arduous advance, both men and horses are greatly in want of repose, and the organization, on which so much depends, is also in need of bracing up for renewed efforts. Moreover, there are difficulties which call for some delay. The railway bridge has to be repaired, bridges rebuilt and stores brought up over the reconstructed line. By the time these operations are completed the troops, no doubt, will be in good condition for another forward dash on the road to Pretoria. Though little is known with certainty of the intentions and movements of the Boers, it seems probable that no

A TEMPERATE ARMY.

Prizes of Men Who Marched from Modder River to Bloemfontein.

London, May 15.—At the annual meeting of the Army Temperance Association Maj.-Gen. Sir George White, the defender of Ladysmith, presiding, a letter from Lord Roberts, dated Bloemfontein, April 15, was read, during the course of which the writer says:— "There never was a more temperate army than that which marched under my command from the Modder River to Bloemfontein. Nothing but good can result from so many soldiers being brought together in an arduous campaign, when they see how splendidly our temperance men have borne up against the hardships and dangers they have had to face."

CONCENTRATING ON THE VAAL.

Boers are Withdrawing from all Their Southern Positions.

Kroonstad, Monday, May 14.—It is reported that the whole of the Boer forces are concentrating on the Vaal and withdrawing from Biggarsburg and the southwestern borders. It is computed that not more than 2,000 Free Staters will fight on the Vaal.

STORY OF THE OPERATIONS.

General Buller Tells How He Drove the Boers Back.

London, May 15.—The War Office to-day furnished confirmation of the Associated Press story of yesterday telling of General Buller's move on the Biggarsburg. It is a despatch from Gen. Buller, as follows:— "Kemp's Farm, May 15.—The following telegrams sent to Roberts are now repeated to you. They begin under date of May 13:—

"In accordance with instructions to keep the enemy occupied at the Biggarsburg, on May 11, I concentrated the third cavalry brigade of the second division and some corps of artillery at Sundays River Drift on the Helpmakaar road, and directed Col. Bethune to advance on Greytown with the Bethune Infantry, the Umvoti Mounted Rifles and the Imperial Light Infantry. On May 12 we moved to Washbank and Bethune to Pomeroy, while Gen. Hillyard, from Elandsplaagte occupied Indola Mountain.

On May 13 I sent Gen. Hamilton with three battalions up the steep slope of Witbooi hill. The third cavalry brigade crowned a hill on each side of the main road and Bethune attacked by the ordinary road from three sides. The enemy hurriedly abandoned the position which they had strongly entrenched and retired to the Nek in front of Helpmakaar, whence we hope to gladiate them to-morrow, as many of them have retired. We have gained the summit of the Berg with the loss of only a few men wounded. I advance to-morrow on Beth and Hillyard moves on Wemels Nek. Our small jobs, I think, was certainly due to the excellent troop leading of Generals Hamilton and Lord Dundonald and Colonel Bethune."

A second despatch dated May 14, says:—"The enemy evacuated Helpmakaar New during the night, leaving a rear guard of about a thousand men in front of us. These we have forced back throughout the day under considerable difficulty, as they fired all the guns on top of the Berg as they retreated, and the wind being unfavorable to us we were scarcely able to see at all. I halted the infantry, who marched very well throughout the hot smoke, at Beth. The cavalry have not yet reported, but are some miles ahead. We have taken a few prisoners. Our casualties are small."

A third despatch dated from Kemp's Farm, May 15, says:—"Dundonald reported late last night that he had driven the rear guard on to the main body of the enemy, near Buraludine, where they occupied in force a strong position with three powerful guns. Major Gough, with the composite regiment, manoeuvred to the right, found their left flank and they retired. Dundonald then halted. He was twenty-five miles as the crow flies from his previous night's bivouac, and had covered nearly forty miles during the day in a waterless country, most of the time riding through smoke. I think his performance is a very fine performance. From prisoners I learn that the enemy numbered over 2,000 at Helpmakaar, and being now joined by those who left Van Jonders Pass they must total nearly 3,000 men. We move on Dundee to-day."

GOT BACK THE COAL FIELDS.

Boers are Apparently Falling Back From Natal.

London, May 15.—Judging from Gen. Buller's despatches, the British advance is little more than an onerous march. The Boers, who were active at first, appear later to have shown the same readiness to retreat which is now marking the movements of the Federals in the Free State. Apparently the burghers are about to evacuate Natal and concentrate for the defence of Laing's Nek northwards, and Van Rensburg's army westward. The reconnoissance of Dundee by the British places the coal supplies there again in their hands.

From elsewhere there is little news of a definite character. Interest for the moment is almost entirely centered in Mafeking, whence the wife of the Mayor to-day received a cablegram telling forth that all was well on May 5.

LOOTED AND LEFT DUNDEE.

Enemy Entrained at Glencoe and Have Gone to Laing's Nek.

London, May 15, 1.54 p.m.—The War Office has received the following despatch from Dundee:—"Dundee, May 15, 1 p.m.—We have occupied Dundee. About 2,500 of the enemy left yesterday at Glencoe, where they entrained. Their wagons also left yesterday by De Jager's Drift and the Dannhauser road. Their Kaffirs said they were going to Laing's Nek. Almost every house in Dundee is completely looted. The navigation colony is all right. The machinery of the Dundee collieries is destroyed. The houses of the town are damaged, but are structurally intact."

THE COLORADO COPPER MINING COMPANY

LOCATION OF OUR MINES

THE COLORADO COPPER MINING COMPANY is fortunate in being the possessor of five splendid showing properties in the great Salda copper belt, the principal copper producing region of this portion of the Rockies. All of our claims have been more or less developed, and it is our purpose to put the mine on a paying basis at once.
Our company owns, clear of incumbrances, the following claims: The Sedalia Extension, the Sedalia Extension No. 2, which property adjoins the great Sedalia mine, which has been a big producer for upwards of seven years; the Colorado, which immediately adjoins the above; the Copper Queen at Salda, a very promising property, only a few steps from the depot in Salda. This claim occupies an imposing position on a mountain just north of the city; and last, but by no means least, the Salda mine, located two miles east of Salda, on the main trunk line of the great Denver & Rio Grande Railroad, and also on the Arkansas river, a rich in length is one of America's greatest schemes.

A BOER CAPTIVE'S ESCAPE

A COLONIAL SPY TELLS HOW HE WAS CAPTURED.

How He Escaped—Shed the Pickets and Received a Shot Which Carried Off His Finger.

From the London Globe.

We have been furnished with the following personal narrative of the adventures of a member of the colonial forces with Lord Methuen, who volunteered to penetrate the Boer lines before Mafeking and learn all he could as to the strength and position of the enemy. Having described how he reached the Boer entrenchments and was captured, he continues as follows: "I thought I was done for then, as the Boer is suspicious at the best of times, and now I knew if I didn't escape their suspicions would be confirmed, and I should be shot, so I determined to get away, if possible.

The English guns, the 4.7, were just starting their usual salutations, and were smashing the rocky stones and boulders into smithereens and ripping great holes in the ground, spurring up masses of reddish-brown dust, all round the Boer trenches. I was taken into a deep trench, most cunningly contrived, and as far as I could make out, quite bomb-proof, as they had dug right under the earth, and where the trench itself was it was covered with sticks and shrub and mud, and then more shrub and more earth, and only a long line of loopholes were visible, and here, well under cover, there were Boers snatched round in their peculiar crouching attitude, drinking coffee and even playing cards at this early hour of the morning, utterly oblivious of the fact that great screaming shells were roaring overhead. I rather marvelled at the calm insouciance of these men, but then I knew how injured they must have become to our shelling and their perfect safety in their cave-like diggings.

I was constricted to a field cornet chap, who promptly blindfolded me, and if you have never been led about by hostile people blindfolded, you can never fully appreciate the distress of mind you are placed in.

"Finally, after twisting about and stumbling over various stones, boxes, etc., the chap stopped me, and I heard one fellow going away from me, and as the sounds of his footsteps suddenly ceased I knew he had gone upstairs, so to speak. In a few minutes a voice shouted out, in Dutch, you know,
'Bring him along.' Immediately they led me, one on each side—was more pushed than led—up a stiff incline, until a sudden rush of refreshing wind told me I was in the open again, and in a few minutes I was halted and the handkerchief taken off my eyes, and I knew I was in the enemy's lair-

er. I couldn't quite get the geography of the place in my mind, and was vainly racking my brain, when a sharp query came from the inside of the wall-encircled bivouac and I was shoved into this place and found my self face to face with a short, thick-set chap with deep twinkling eyes, and I knew in a flash, 'Cronje,'
the English-hater, the farmer-fighter, and man of the people, loved and feared alike by all. He questioned me closely—where I came from, where I was going, and how long I had been here. A hundred things he asked me, twining me eventually into a complicated string of preposterous falsehoods. Then he stopped and laughed, or seemed to laugh, it was more of minister cackle than anything else, and I was rebuffed and marched away; not far this time before they unbanded me, and then one chap quietly remarked, 'You will soon be shot, you d—n rooinek,' I said,
'Thanks, quite as quickly I hope, but something inside was thumping fearfully, and then I looked around as casually as I could at the faces of those who had rapidly gathered around the stone enclosure where I was, and by the jeering faces and whispering mutterings I knew well what to expect. I was in a fearful state now, say I pumped myself down and thought, rapidly and keenly, as one does you know when your life hangs in the balance. A thousand schemes, wild, hopeless all, I dismissed them, and concluded to sit tight and wait, hoping against hope. Minutes went by, then they brought me food; then dusk came and with it hope, although a guard was over me, changing every hour. I spoke cheerfully to every different man who approached me;
some gave me sullen looks and no answer, one chap insulted me, but the last chap, quite a youngster, chatted quite affably with me, and I could see he had been drinking a bit.

"Remembering my flask in my hip pocket, three-quarters full of neat brandy, I pulled it out and offered him a drink. He drank, remarking it was very strong. I assured him it was not; then he sat down, more chat, more brandy. Now my heart was pumping almost audibly, a cold sweat broke out on me as I noticed he was dozy. I persuaded him to have another drink. He had nearly finished it all by this time, and then, while the Boers were all busy with their palms and coffee, I snatched his Mauter from his hand and cracked him savagely over the head. He fell back, and I chuckled his well inside the bivouac and walked out carefully
as I could, with his rifle in my hand.

Making for horses that were picketed near a fire, I scanned them over rapidly and picked out the best I could, and, deliberately mounting it, rode away toward the south. I was hopeless now, and determined to do the business in case I was caught. I let the mare have her head, trusting more to her instinctive knowledge of the surroundings than my own, and I wasn't deceived, as she cantered magnificently toward the beacon lights, which I guessed were the Boer pickets. I skirted these carefully, and steered straight south. I passed two or three Johannes, who merely said 'Good night,'
I answered in kind and soon was well away. I rode as hard as I could, but just as was flattering myself I was safely away, a chap suddenly rose from behind a bush and challenged, ordering me to stand. Knowing it was useless, I laid my hand on the mare's muzzle and robb'd her for leather. Several shots came decidedly close, and one fellow rose dead in front of me with levelled rifle. I hurried to the left, and felt a sting in my left hand.
This, as I told you, took off my finger clean away, although I didn't know it at the time. After a hard ride I got into our lines safely, after being nearly shot by our outposts. I was sent straight in to Methuen, and told him all I knew, and I believe my information was of the utmost value to him."

DEATH NOT PAINFUL.

Mortality Rendered Painless by the Workings of Nature.

Death is nearly always painless.
Mistakes generally from the cessation of the heart's function whatever the cause may have been. The nerve cells may have ceased to act, the muscles may have been worn out, or the heart may have been directly attacked by acute or chronic disease. But in any case want of oxygen in the determining factor, except in the case of poisoning with prussic acid, in which case the whole body is dead before the heart ceases to beat. In every other case the cessation of the heart's action comes first, the general death of the body afterward. Before the heart ceases to function consciousness ceases.

Even the most awful death known,
death by burning, mortality is rendered painless at an early age by suffocation. It is the first moment of experience of the heat that is so terrible. Nature appears to set very real limits to physical torture. Thus, Livingstone, when seized by a lion, tells us that he felt little pain of apprehension, while Dr. Alfred Russell Wallace asserts that the seeming atrocities of animate nature,
such as the killing of birds by beasts
such as the killing of birds by beasts
appear in our imagination.

We see what painful vividness the outward fact, but we do not see the merciful anodyne furnished by nature.
So it is at a death bed. The observers see the clammy brow, the gasping for breath, the rigor mortis sometimes the contorted features—all painful to behold. But, with perhaps the exception of the difficult respiration, the dying man knows nothing of this, and before he has actually expired nature has given him a relief which the dearest friend or most skillful physician could not have imparted. There are also forms of death in which, long before death arrives, the "will to live" has ceased, the patient resigns himself, and life gradually sinks to a vanishing point. Thus death is physically and psychologically painless.

THE BEST NEWS YET!

TROUT LAKE CITY, B. C., APRIL 20, 1900.

"Your letter came while I was out, and I note what you say financially and otherwise, and
certainly feel much interested in the property and more confident of the outcome than ever since my last explorations. I have men at work inside tunnel at $12 per foot and no stated amount of work.

I will enclose a pencilling showing how we are doing the work and give my reasons for the same.

We traced two leads down by the end of Crosscut, of fine appearance (see diagram). Mr. Pettipiece was up to see the property and remained over night. I also had Mr. Shannon, the Geologist, up with me to confer with in reference to the property and the way it should be developed and so on.

He will give his opinions through the columns of the "Eagle." He is a very conscientious and careful man and slow to advance ideas without proof. I asked him what he thought of my plan of development. He carefully looked the situation over inside and out and stated it was the best. He said in reference to the property that "it was one that merited an outlay of money and one no one should be afraid to invest in." He mentioned that in many respects it resembled the "Silver Cup."

We will encounter lead No. 2 I think by May 1st, and I am very sanguine we will have Ore at over 100 feet deep. We will have to drive 100 feet to get No. 3 lead. Now if your company can stand
the expense of 100 feet of work at this time it certainly would be wise to do so, for we know at least something of the merits of No. 3. When we get the Main Ore Body located we then are made.

It is there and I hope soon to be able to report having it. The conditions have never looked better than now.

Copies of the "Eagle" can be had on application. The work is being vigorously continued and we hope soon to be able to report having struck the Ore Body. Matters were never better for us than now and if you want a good investment get our shares while there is time.

WHY AMERICANS HATE THE BRITISH?

The Savings of "Old Glory" in The Montreal Star in a Letter Written To That Journal.

The following is a copy of a letter written by some educated American who tries to appear "funny." The only truth contained in his allegations is found in the tenth one which perhaps has something exasperating in its principle to such American citizens as the writer. We cannot think the writer who signs himself "Old Glory" is in earnest. If he is he betrays a very ignorant conception of the facts for a "man of modern views and an educationist" as he pleases to style himself. The very best thing for "Old Glory" to do is to come over and take a course in our public schools where he will learn something, something that will convince him that he simply knows nothing concerning the matters which he tries to discuss. We Canadians take especial pleasure in teaching such men as "Old Glory" some of the rudiments of British freedom and principles of a constitution that is the most glorious judicial system ever framed for the protection of man's life and property. We produce the letter in full as it appears in the Montreal Star.

Sir—I have been asked as an American citizen this question: "What do you think of the British?" As a man of moderate views and an educationist, I know there are millions of excellent Americans who would repudiate it, but I must own up and say with very many the question is appropriate and for them the answer is easily given. Just look at these provocations:

1. You British have a quadrennial election of a ruler in which the opposing parties strive to see which will most violently abuse the United States, for this largely determines the vote. A candidate has a chance who will openly profess friendship for us. Our Republic has to stand this periodical and perpetual outflow of malice solely for your political exigencies. Of course there are thousands of intelligent cultured and Christian Britons who have no sympathy with this, and indeed abhor it, but they amount to very little politically.

2. You systematically teach your school children to hate us, and during our recent war a poor child was sent all the way to Madrid to the Queen of Spain from 25,000 English school children, to tell her how much they sympathized with her struggle for freedom against American tyranny. Again, recently the Department of Education of Ontario in its blind rage prohibited the teaching in any of its schools of American history or what you call "the history of your most bitter enemy." This is in marked contrast with the broad educational policy of the city of Chicago. The same spirit is found in your literature and in the teaching of your pulpits and the families in general among the 400 millions of British subjects. "The American Republic is our only enemy." We are on good terms with Russia and other powers and especially with France, but no peace for us with the United States.

3. The American flag is openly insulted in British territory. It is not very often it is displayed, but occasionally it is unfurled by an amiable citizen with the moral certainty he will be mobbed. How marked this is in contrast with the friendly floating of hundreds of Union Jacks along with the Stars and Stripes so often seen in our large cities and generally throughout the Republic.

4. For political purposes, you have been nestling and fostering secret societies whose aim has been by dynamite and assassination to damage and murder Americans. When did any American citizen so disgrace himself in Manchester or London or Dublin or at the Welland Canal?

5. You show an unwillingness to settle any of the dozen important issues pending between us. They are too servicable for political use to be settled. The proposal for a Court of Arbitration between us was cordially agreed to by your Government a few years ago, but has since been shelved in the House of Lords. In the case of the Alaskan boundary the British took summary possession of disputed territory. We asked for arbitration as to the meaning of the Russian Treaty of 1824, which to us seems so plain, but the British would consent to this only if in advance they title to this disputed territory were recognized.

6. We generously open our vast territories of the world. You British shut up selfishly every inch of the little territory your own against all foreign trade and were it not for American ships and American soldiers even missionaries, according to their own testimony, would be in danger of being killed.

7. We Americans were the only friends the Armenians had in their massacres. But for Germany and Russia we would have forced Europe to intervene for them but just at the moment of our effort, you British with all your power, your money, your fleet at sea, your army on land, flew at us most unjustifiably about some disputed territory in South America. Your fleet was small and ineffective, and the American fleet was six times as strong, but we know it was near your election time and we quietly listened to your humbug and gave in. For the sake of the world civilization and commerce and Christianity we patiently bore your British as we have so often done before.

8. In our war with Spain you showed a mean bitterness against us. Your Ambassador at Madrid was opposed to us, and refused to serve us in any way. You had a British Consul at Santiago, a young poltroon of the name of McCrum, who sympathized openly with our enemies and falsely charged us with tampering with his letters and then, neglecting his post, started home to make a sensation. Similar conduct was shown by the British Consul at Havana, Admiral Dewey, showing a hostile attitude in marked contrast with the friendly attitude of the other nations. You did your best to stir up the great powers against us, and your parliament passed a resolution of sympathy with Spain, an unfriendly act such as could not be conceived of in the American Congress. In your House of Lords any time resolutions are easily passed which are meant to pander to the mob and fan the flame of hatred of the United States. Compare with this the honor and dignity of the American Senate which always finds its own business and works with either conditional allowance or "holding."

9. We defend the judicial system of the British Empire under which no man's life or property is absolutely secure. Lynchings are of weekly occurrence. When did you ever hear of a case of lynching in the United States? It was recently shown by a commission that your judges in the city of London spent from eight to fifteen thousand dollars each to secure their election. How could they possibly be as high-minded or impartial as the judges of New York? 10. Worst of all, whatever we do to provoke you, you do not seem to mind it. That is to us most exasperating. Perhaps you can now understand why many of us Americans have no special liking for the British. I have confined myself above the existing conditions, leaving out George III. as ancient history and Irish Home Rule as something in which I am not posted and as to which I am a little puzzled.

Taking things as they are, I have given you ten sufficient reasons why the British are hated by

Yours truly,

OLD GLORY.

THE DRESSY WOMAN.

There has been an unprecedented demand this season for novel and fashionable black dress fabrics.

Khaki fabrics are among the popular materials for spring wear, and it will be found necessary in every instance to re-leave this ugly sand color with white or colored silk or satin.

Many of the modish spring Etons and other jackets have narrow, medium length stole ends in front, with short, double revers on each side, reaching in length a little below the bust.

Some of the smartest street gowns for spring wear are formed of handsome, smooth finished costume cloth of light weight, with the still fashionable decoration of stitched straps of the same material.

In keeping with the revived fashion of plaiting dress materials, the Norfolk jacket will reappear en-suite, with killed costumes of tweed, cheviot, frieze, sibleline, camel's hair, serge and other utility fabrics.

One of the great French authorities has said that, while many other effects will vie with it, the overskirt will take its place as a factor among other spring styles particularly suited to tall, slender women.

Among new French costumes are those of black satin faced cloth, with a finish of white silk stitching on skirt edge and bolero or jacket, the costume finished either with a bow of black and white or with a bow of black and white chiffon and fringe.

On models for summer gowns appear skirts alternately tucked and frilled in horizontal rows, with perpendicular side plaitings in clusters of five alternating with one rather wide box plait, with a mixture of fancy knit and fan plaitings, the fabric first scalloped at the lower edge or bordered with braid or ribbon.—New York Post.

GLEANINGS.

A common sight in Cape Colony is a herd of ostriches accompanying a railway train as it speeds on its way.

A New Yorker who was in Kimberley recently was cured of homesickness by a familiar sight, nothing else than an old Broadway horse car, still bearing the legend, "Battery to Central Park."

A young man who was struck by lightning in Berlin a few weeks ago remained unconscious a long time, but shouted in his delirium that he was in hell and begged to have the devil taken away.

Thomas H. Gilbert, Jr., of Orono, Me., lately cut in Ottawa a pine tree that contained 3,200 feet and is claimed to be the largest pine or tree of any kind ever cut for lumber on record in the New England States.

A new method of preserving telegraph poles is to surround the portion in the ground with an earthenware pipe like a drainpipe. Into the space between the pole and the pipe is poured a mixture of sand and resin.

There are two well known families in Devonshire, England, the Carews and the Careys, and it is said that the members of the Carew family pronounce the name "Carey," while the Careys call themselves "Carew."

ROYAL NAMES A MOODOO.

One of the strangest superstitions of the English Navy.

One of the very strongest and most inextinguishable of all superstitions in the royal navy, a superstition that is almost as strong today as ever it was, is that vessels bearing the names of royal personages are doomed to ill luck, and, strange as it may seem, there is an undeniable historic basis for this feeling.

Some of the most terrible disasters ever known in connection with our navy have concerned war vessels with royal names. Two vessels called the Royal James came to disastrous ends. One of them exploded, and some 800 officers and seamen perished. The other ship so named was actually carried out of the mouth of the Thames by the Dutch Admiral de Ruyter under circumstances disgraceful to those in charge of the craft.

Then there is the forever memorable disaster to the Royal George, an unlucky ship previously, that turned over and sank in sight of crowds at Spithead, over 1,000 souls, among whom were 800 women, being sacrificed. And second only to this hideous disaster is that which befell the Royal Charlotte, which, after a career of much vicissitude, was consumed by fire off Leghorn, over 800 of the very flower of the navy perishing with her.

When in 1893 the Victoria, a new vessel and the very triumph of modern invention so far as naval architecture went, was rammed and sank at once in sight of the whole fleet and when hundreds of lives were lost, there was not a sailor, however matter of fact he might be, who did not remember the dire fate of the royally named craft. These instances are only the greater ones. A score of smaller ones are readily off by every royal navy man.—Tit-Bits.

No man can succeed in life unless he has ambition, and no man can succeed in life if he has nothing else.—Somerville Journal.

The manufacture of quinine was begun in Philadelphia by John Furr in 1820, the year of its discovery.

Sleeplessness marks the very climax of human suffering. It is only a step removed from insanity. When sleep no longer restores the exhausted nature, the struggle with disease cannot last long. The starting point of the nervous disorders which produce ill-health and sleeplessness, is generally a diseased condition of the womanly organs. Restore these organs to sound health and the appetite comes back, the day's work no longer wears, and sleep is sound and refreshing. Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription cures diseases of the womanly organs. It stops the drains which weaken women; it heals the inflammation and ulceration, and cures female weakness.

There is no alcohol in "Favorite Prescription" and it is entirely free from opium, cocaine and all other narcotics. It is a temperance medicine.

"My health has been poor for many years and I had taken a great deal of medicine, but it did me no good," writes Mrs. Rose Kennedy, of Springfield, Adams Co., Wis. "Last August my health was very poor; I had no appetite and could not sleep. I wrote to Dr. Pierce and he kindly advised me to take his 'Favorite Prescription.' I took five bottles of the 'Prescription' and one bottle of the 'Golden Medical Discovery,' and I feel like a new woman."

Cure sick headache by using Doctor Pierce's Pleasant Pellets.

THE BEEHIVE.

Contract the space in the hive to the size of the colony.

A good and fertile queen keeps the hive full of bees during the season.

Do not offer to feed liquid food to bees in winter; it is almost sure death to a colony.

Bees abhor being molested at night, and no work can then be done with them with any satisfaction.

In every case where comb is to be built furnish the bees with foundation, using full sheets in the frames.

Clipping the wings of the queen prevents losing first swarms by absconding.

Bees seem to seek naturally a span between two combs, and the queen seldom goes to the outside comb of a hive unless she is compelled to for want of room; so that a nucleus of two or three combs is better than one.

Propolis is the gum or varnish that bees collect for varnishing over the inside of their hives, filling cracks and crevices, completing loose pieces of the hive to gether and for making things fast and close generally. It collects in time in old hives and combs.

THE CHEESE BOARD.

First Meeting of the Board of the Present Year.

The opening meeting of the Peterborough Cheese Board for the season was held yesterday morning at the Council chamber. The president, Mr. Drummond, occupied the chair. There was a fair attendance of salesmen.

Buyers present were—Messrs. Rollins, Wrighton, Whittin, Fitzgerald, Kerr, Couston, Moore, Squires, and Watkins.

It was decided to board only the make of the first ten days of May.

A communication was read from the Warsaw Cheese and Butter Co., protesting against paying for the services of an inspector and inspector as they pay by the Hubcock tester. The president stated that it had been decided by the Board that all factories selling on the Board should pay. There were other factories in the same position. The inspector was intended for the benefit of the whole cheese trade.

Mr. Watkins, one of the buyers, spoke a few words. He stated that he believed that all factories, no matter how they pay, should be visited by an inspector and these visits should be more frequent than they are. Every effort should be made to raise the standard of Canadian cheese. The patrons should take better care of their milk at home. Drawing when back in the cans would be a mistake.

Mr. Watkins believed that the Peterborough Cheese Board was run second to none in the country.

The factories boarded as follows—

Keene	.....	60
Warminster	.....	60
Shearer	.....	48
Central Smith	.....	60
North Smith	.....	60
Villiers	.....	60
Warsaw	.....	60
Westwood	.....	70
Oakdale	.....	45
Melrose Abbey	.....	50
Lakefield	.....	50

Maple Leaf	.....	40
Myrtle	.....	15
Ormonde	.....	50

Preservian	.....	50
Indian River	.....	50
North Dummer	.....	40
Trewern	.....	40
Hensford	.....	45
Stonley Lake	.....	15
Cavanville	.....	40
Mount Pleasant	.....	20
Crown	.....	20
Daisy D	.....	15
Pleasantwood	.....	60
Oak Leaf	.....	20
Darlington Union	.....	55

The bidding was slow. Mr. Whittin bid 8-12c to start; Mr. Rollins bid 8-12c; Mr. Whittin 9-11-12c; Mr. Rollins 9-12c. This was the highest bid and Mr. Rollins called Warminster, North Smith, Oakdale, Pine Grove, Maple Leaf, North Dummer, Daisy D, Trewern, Central Smith, all accepting. Mr. Whittin next bid 9-12c and called Melrose Abbey, Ormonde, Indian River, Lang and Pleasantwood, which sold. Westwood, Keene, Villiers and Shearer refused, but Keene sold later to Mr. Whittin at 9-12c, as also did Hensford. Mr. Rollins bid 9-12c, and got Lakefield, Young's Point and Warsaw. Shearer then sold to Mr. Whittin at 9-12c, as also did Cavanville.

A number of factories remained unsold. The Board adjourned for two weeks.

Death of Mrs. Robert H. Green.

The community was shocked yesterday at learning of the sudden death of Ellen Green, the wife of Mr. Robert H. Green. Having lived in the county and town all her years, she was well known, and many are the expressions of regret and sympathy heard on every side. Since her husband was stricken by paralysis some 18 months ago the strain on the devoted wife, whose health was already impaired, has apparently been unduly heavy, and quite unexpectedly she has passed from our midst. Dignified and refined in manners, and with a warm sympathetic heart Mrs. Green was respected by all and beloved by many, and numerous are they who can testify to her cheerful hospitality. The deceased lady was a model housewife and a most faithful helpmate, and her indomitable will and spirit often carried her through troubles and difficulties that would have overcome many possessed of greater physical strength. Her husband, her adopted daughter, and several brothers and sisters survive to mourn her loss. The deceased was 60 years of age. Funeral will leave the family residence, corner Stewart and Simcoe streets, to-morrow, Friday, at 3 p.m.

An Old Buyer

The Times yesterday had a call from Mr. Thos. Watkins of Belleville, who was in town attending the meeting of the cheese board. Mr. Watkins is the oldest cheese buyer in this district, and one of the oldest in Canada. He is an extensive buyer and shipper. Mr. Watkins was accompanied by Mr. James Wrighton, of Wellman's corner, and John Coughlin, of Hastings, the latter of whom renewed his subscription to Peterborough's brightest and best daily newspaper, The Times.

The City Club moving any slower than it is this season.

Snuckers more plentiful at the locks (and at some of the hotels).

So many attending Evangelistic meetings.

The editors of our wicked little contemporary at a chuckle.

The men who handle the ponderous and useless road roller, in a hurry.

The man who does not read the Times.

A Stampede.

While the interment of the remains of Mrs. Scott was taking place yesterday the whistle of a passing train at the cemetery caused the horses belonging to "Doc" Robinson, and which were being driven by Mr. R. R. Phillips, to bolt. The rig collided with another rig and was upset, throwing Mr. Phillips and several horses stamped and things looked decidedly threatening until Aid. Oake managed to secure the runaway horse. Beyond the smashing of the buggy in which Mr. Phillips was sitting, there was no damage done.

A Strange Fish.

A rather peculiar fish has been on exhibition at Phillips' fruit store for a couple of days. It was caught in upper lake waters, and is a species of sturgeon, having three rows of sharp spikes down the body. It has no teeth, the mouth being exactly like the mouth of a bucker, and situated on the under part of the nose. After all the wise men of the town had gazed upon the fish, the editor of this great family journal was called in, and upon looking the matter up, found it to be a salt water fish, many of these having worked their way up the rivers from the ocean. It is known as the Isinglass Sturgeon. These fish have been known to be 35 feet long in the Mediterranean. Mr. Phillips intends presenting the fish to the Victoria Museum.

TWO NEW YORKERS.

One Gives The Other a Mandy Lift

Mr. E. C. Hazard, one of the oldest and best-known wholesale grocers in New York for many years, gives his attention to the preparation of fine food delicacies down on Staten Island, where the famous Strawberry Ketchup, Burnt Onion Sauce, Strawberry Mushrooms and other delicacies are prepared in a most skillful manner.

One evening last autumn while on his way home, Mr. H. met with one of the officials of the N. J. C. railroad, who seemed to be living with one foot in the grave, stomach so badly disordered that nothing would digest. It seemed only a question of a few weeks, at most, when death would come.

"Mr. Hazard insisted upon taking the gentleman to his home and giving him a package of Grape-Nuts breakfast food which is manufactured by the Postum Cereal Co., at the pure food factories at Battle Creek, Mich., a food which Mr. Hazard had been using as his own table for a long time, greatly to his benefit."

"He told the gentleman that he could get well in a few weeks by the use of perfectly prepared food of this sort, and would never forget the day when he first tried Grape-Nuts. The prediction came true; the official is not only alive to-day, but in better health than he has experienced for many years, all of which he attributes to the use of Grape-Nuts and from the advice of Mr. Hazard."

There are two reasons for this; in the first place Grape-Nuts are made from certain selected portions of wheat and barley that contain phosphate of potash and albumen which nature uses in the human system to make up the gray matter in the brain and nerve centers throughout the body.

The nervous system directly controls the digestive machinery and the brain controls the working and money making power. Mr. Hazard knows this, from his knowledge of food and from his own experience with Grape-Nuts. Therefore when he took the railway official in charge he knew exactly what he was doing, and the result proved the correctness of his knowledge.

TWO YEARS IN THE CENTRAL.

Young Allan Found Guilty at the Police Court Yesterday.

At the police court yesterday morning Albert Allen, a lad 18 years of age, was found guilty of stealing a quantity of clothing from Thompson & Co.'s store in Havelock, and was sentenced to two years in the Central Prison.

Young Allan comes of a bad family and he himself has a bad record. His mother is at present serving a term in the Mercer Reformatory and a younger brother is confined in the Mimico Industrial School.

Allan swore positively that he was not in Havelock on the Sunday that the robbery was committed, while four residents of Havelock were positive in their identification of the prisoner, and swore that he was in the village on the Sunday in question, and that he had also been seen trying the door of Thompson's establishment.

It will be remembered that this was the charge of theft on which two tramps were arrested on suspicion some weeks ago.

DISCHARGED TO DIE.

But Mrs. Fitzpatrick Didn't Lose Hope. Dr. Agnew's Cure for the Heart Accomplished What the Physicians Couldn't.

If the thousands of people who rush to so worthy a remedy as a last resort would go to it as a first resort, how much misery and suffering would be spared. Mrs. John Fitzpatrick, of Gananoque, after being treated by eminent physicians for heart disease of five years standing was discharged from the hospital as a hopeless incurable. The lady procured Dr. Agnew's Cure for the heart, she declared as a last resort. One dose relieved in very acute spasms in less than half an hour, and three bottles cured her.

SOCIAL AND PERSONAL.

Mr. Ab. Spellman of Hastings was in town yesterday.

Two merchants were yesterday fined $2 each for scattering bills on the streets.

Mrs. Harry Phelan and Master Nugel left yesterday for Ottawa where they will spend a few weeks visiting friends.

Mr. W. E. Brooks, proprietor of the Carlton House, Young's Point, accompanied by Mr. W. J. Young, was in town yesterday, and dropped in to see the Times.

The Times was favored with a call yesterday from Mr. W. J. Pearson, the well known horse buyer, who was a guest at the White House yesterday. Mr. Pearson went to Port Hope last night.

Canvaser Wanted.

A smart young man or woman wanted at once, for canvassing. Salary from $1.00 up, according to ability. Apply The White House or Byers' Studio.

LITTLE LOCAL LINES.

A number of the apple trees are out in full bloom.

Norwood is to have a big Queen's birthday celebration.

Yesterday's market was very small. Hay was the most conspicuous thing on it.

At the police court yesterday Mrs. Vout was fined $2.00 for having a dog without a tag.

Ashburnham has a new drug store. J. Parker is the proprietor. He comes from Little Britain.

A number of our local dressmakers are working till midnight keeping up with orders for the June weddings.

"Better late than never." It is best, however, to be never late about taking Hood's Sarsaparilla to purify your blood. Take it now.

Laborers were engaged placing stone on George street between Hunter and Brock yesterday. This will improve the road very much.

The fire brigade was called out at 5.30 p.m. yesterday to extinguish a blaze in the roof of the Wm. English Cane Works on Charlotte street. Loss was slight.

Large numbers are attending the afternoon meetings in Murray street Baptist church under Evangelist Gell. Meetings will be held there every afternoon until including Saturday.

A meeting of the Board of Management of the Children's Aid Society will be held to-morrow afternoon at 4 o'clock at the council chamber. Business left over from last meeting will be dealt with.

The town authorities have begun to repair the breakage in the sewer fronting the Stanley Piano Company's premises. They will raise it so as to afford Mr. Stanley the relief he desires.

Mr. Wheeler White, while driving a cow over the Lucie bridge on Monday, the animal took down the tank just below the locks and swam across. George said she was a "dilly, but kind of thought he might be a cow shag."

A Hunter street gentleman went out to feed his horse last night, and on entering the stall, observed his ten year old son sitting on the horse's back writing. "What are you doing there?" exclaimed the father with surprise. "Why teacher told us to write a composition on a horse, and that's what I'm doing."

Don't be a clam; be up-to-date by reading the Morning Times, delivered to your door for the small sum of 25 cents per month. You thus get all the news six hours in advance of the receipt of the Toronto morning papers. The Times is a home industry; employs home help. Give it a month's trial, anyway.

THE OLD UNION JACK NOW FLOATING OVER TRANSVAAL TERRITORY!

Gen. Hunter Has Occupied Christiana in the Transvaal Without Opposition From the Enemy Who Had Previously Retired to Klerkskorp.

Great Britain Waits With Intense and Almost Breathless Interest for News of Relief of Mafeking. The Garrison Apparently Holding Out as Nothing to the Contrary Comes From Boer Sources. Canadian Artillery Contingent Near Mafeking and May Participate in Work of Relieving the Garrison.

London, May 18, 3.30 p.m. England will wait with intense and almost breathless interest for news of the relief of Mafeking. A crowd of men in evening dress, and including many ladies, lingered around the War Office even after midnight, hoping for some announcement. Only reluctantly did the people disperse when the Lobbies of the War Office were finally cleared with the word that nothing had been received. One thing seems clear, the town still holds out. Were it otherwise, the Boer wires laid to the camps of the beleaguers would have flashed the news.

The Canadian Artillery contingent of the Rhodesian force is now reported to have reached Bulawayo May 2. The distance from Bulawayo to Mafeking is 490 miles. As the railway is open all the way to Pitsani, 23 miles from Mafeking, where Col. Plumer is, the Canadians may yet take part in the relief.

General French scouting northward found the Boers in strong force at Rhenoster Spruit, 30 miles from Kroonstad. Gen. Botha, Delany and Oliver with artillery are holding the position. Five hundred rifles have been surrendered at Kroonstad, in excess of the number of Boers who have taken the oath of allegiance.

Mr. Rundle has captured 10,000 bags of corn. He is marching slowly through a district which is described as "literally teeming with cattle, sheep and horses."

Lord Roberts has directed the British commanders to receive all comers in a good spirit and to issue to them passes to go to their farms.

Gen. Buller is pushing straight ahead without opposition. He has only lost five wounded during the movement. Apparently he is aiming at Laing's Nek, which is the direct road to the Transvaal, although he may diverge to Botha's Pass.

General Hunter's movements in the Western Transvaal are rather puzzling. He has returned to Fourteen Streams with one brigade, leaving another, Gen. Barton's, at Christiana. Lord Methuen is said to be advancing along the south bank of the Vaal. Col. Kekewich is with him. The Loop railway line across the Vaal is fast nearing completion. The probability is that Gen. Hunter took a brigade to Fourteen Streams owing to scarcity of transports.

VICTORY FOR BADEN-POWELL.

London, May 17.—A despatch from Lord Roberts dated to-day says that Commandant Eloff (grandson of President Kruger) with a patrol entered Mafeking. Col. Baden-Powell opened fire on the burghers, killing seventeen of them and taking Eloff and 90 of his men prisoners.

London, May 17.—In his hour of weakness and trial Colonel Baden-Powell is showing the ferocious courage with which lions in a cage have time and time again saved a desperate cause. The Boers have set their heart on Mafeking that they are actually venturing into the den of the wounded but still dangerous lion. They themselves admit defeat and heavy loss. It cannot longer be doubted that the garrison have beaten off fierce attack. Fighting men, nourished upon bread and horseflesh soup, have surrounded and captured a force of 90 Boers, including the grandson of Kruger himself, who had evidently been seized with a strong fit of madness that he could not resist the desire to tempt a desperate fate. The almost ruined gamster feverishly schemes the last throw of the dice, so is Baden-Powell watching Mafeking. The God of War holds the balance, and, as He has allowed valor to assert itself in vain, in this case may the historical defence of the town on the African veldt end in dust and ashes for the defenders. With the column forty miles away, perhaps three days at the outside may see the dispersal of the attacking force and of the proudest moments told in the story of the British Empire. On the other hand the third day may dawn upon the wearing of sackcloth from Vancouver to Sydney, from New Zealand to Otago, for it may mark the greatest triumph the Boers have won in the

BOERS ADMIT A DEFEAT.

Victoria Despatches Confirm the Story of a Repulse.

London, May 18.—An official bulletin announces that the Federal troops stormed and occupied the forts around Mafeking on Sunday morning. The same night the Federals were surrounded, losing, as far as known, seven killed, seventeen wounded and a number taken prisoners. The British casualties are said to have been killed and wounded.

It is reported that the advance guard of the force proceeding to the relief of Mafeking from the south was repulsed yesterday.

SUSPENSE IN ENGLAND.

Britain are Prouder Than Ever of Col. Baden-Powell.

London, May 17.—The closing days of the drama at Mafeking have been marked by intensity of dramatic interest, as unexpected as it is out of proportion to the forces engaged. The news that the British-famed garrison was not able to repulse an attack, but to inflict such heavy loss in killed, and prisoners, as reported in the despatch from Cape Town announcing the capture of Commandant Eloff, the grandson of President Kruger, and ninety of his men, makes Great Britain more than ever proud of Colonel Baden-Powell's little band, and increases to a fever pitch the national desire for their relief.

Lord Roberts and his large army at Kroonstad and Gen. Buller's thousands forging over the Biggarsberg are almost entirely forgotten. Everyone is thinking of talking of Mafeking, and the latest exploits of its defender. Rumors continue that the relief of the place has been accomplished, but all official confirmation of the reports was lacking at 1 o'clock this afternoon. There was considerable speculation as to what Col. Baden-Powell would do with his ninety prisoners and whether the victory has not so depleted his force as to render him open to annihilation in the event of another attack by the superior Boer numbers. But Lorenzo Marquez already hears rumors that these have been cut off by the relieving column. According to general opinion news of the termination of the desperate struggle between the beleaguered and besiegers must reach England before to-morrow.

RELIEF NEAR MAFEKING.

Fighting Has Taken Place at Krailanp, Forty Miles Away.

London, May 17, 6 a.m.—There is news to-day of the progress of the Mafeking relief column. According to a telegram from Malopo, a British force arrived on Tuesday at Krailanp, about 40 miles south of the beleaguered town, and was hotly engaged on that day, and at the same time it is announced from Pretoria that the relief column has been defeated with great loss. On the continent it is apparently taken for granted that the town has already fallen, while, on the other hand, a rumor has reached Lorenzo Marquez to the effect that the relief has been effected, and that Eloff, a grandson of Kruger, is among the prisoners captured by the British.

STORY OF THE FIGHTING.

Times' Correspondent Tells of the Boer Attack on Mafeking.

London, May 17.—The Times has the following special from Lorenzo Marquez, dated May 15—

There was heavy fighting at Mafeking on Friday and Saturday. A strong force of foreigners under Commandant Vondewick carried by storm the native township, driving the defending force back to the police barracks and burning the huts. There was heavy musketry fire on both sides throughout the day. The assailants found the rocks of the township an ideal cover. According to telegrams from Pretoria on Saturday night fighting was still going on. To-day it is reported that the British lost fifty men killed, while the customary two or three only are announced to have been killed on the Boer side. Information has, however, been received in Portuguese circles to the effect that the Boers suffered a crushing defeat, and that the relieving force succeeded in cutting off the storming column. While the accuracy of the latter statement may be questioned, it is evident from the tardiness shown by the Boers in disclosing the final result that the movement failed to accomplish its object. Persons acquainted with Colonel Baden-Powell's scheme of defence for the town assure me that the occupation of the Kaffir stand would not endanger the garrison unless relief was unduly postponed.

INVADERS THE TRANSVAAL.

General Hunter Hosts the British Flag at Christiana.

London, May 17.—The Express publishes intelligence of the advance of Gen. Hunter along the north bank of the Vaal River. This general has been the first to invade the Transvaal, and he seems to have taken with him nearly his whole division. When he reached Wedgraal, after a twelve miles' march from Fourteen Streams up the course of the Vaal River, he found that the Boers were retreating on Christiana, which is situated on the river about 20 miles north-west of Fourteen Streams, and he accordingly ingly determined to push on. Outside of Christiana it was seen that the Boers were on the run, and Gen. Hunter then resolved to make a State entry into the town and hoist the British flag. A detachment of Fusiliers, under Gen. Barton, was selected for the duty, and it was carried out amid great cheering. This is the first time since the breaking out of this war that a British force of any dimensions has invaded the Transvaal.

SIR J. KITSON'S ANNOUNCEMENT.

He States in the House of Commons that Mafeking is Relieved.

London, May 17.—In the committee room of the House of Commons this morning Sir James Kitson, Liberal, announced that Mafeking had been relieved. The War Office, however, was unable to confirm the announcement.

RUNDLE SWEEPS FORWARD.

The Boers Dissolve Before Him Like Mist Before the Sun.

London, May 17, 4 a.m.—Gen. Rundle is sweeping through the northeastern section of the Free State. The Boers are dissolving before him, and some are surrendering. The main force is assembled between Ficksburg and Winburg, but it is without close organization.

OCCUPATION OF CHRISTIANA.

London, May 17.—3.33 p.m.—The War Office has received the following despatch from Lord Roberts:—

"Kroonstad, May 17.—Hunter has occupied Christiana without opposition, the enemy having retired to Klerkskorp under the impression that the latter was threatened by a portion of this force from Parys. "Rundle's force is close to Glocolan (southwest of Ficksburg), yesterday evening. The country was cleared of the enemy. "The resident commander in Basutoland reports that a number of Boers living in the Ficksburg and Beibelehem districts have applied to him for advice and as to the conditions of surrender. This is very satisfactory."

PEACE ENVOYS' MISSION TO UNCLE SAM.

A German Opinion That United States Will Interfere and Will be Supported.

Special to the Times

Berlin, May 17.—The Kreuz Zeitung, in an inspired article, discussed the Boer mission to America, saying it considers American intervention probable, and advises England to accept it and finish the war if England wishes to retain American friendship.

Lieutenant General Becher, in the Lokal Anzeiger, reviews recent movements in South Africa and concludes that the Boers will continue to avoid decisive battles, but "inflict great damage upon moving British columns."

The "Turco-American" imbroglio is unfavorably criticised here, the German press holding that the object is too insignificant, and also that the United States is ungrateful because it was due to the Sultan's counsel that the Moros of the Sulu Archipelago did not join the insurgent Filipinos.

The health of the insane Bavarian King Otto is slightly improved. The latest bulletin issued states that the King passed his days seated in the garden around Fuerstentried, silently brooding.

At the national meeting of the association for the benefit of German immigrants, in session at Hannover, Dr. Scharlach, of Hamburg, spoke on "Migration, and the Colonies," recommending steps leading to larger emigration hither. Herr Dillthey, of Aix-la-Chapelle, spoke comprehensively about Germans in South Brazil, the La Plata countries and South Africa. There was also a general debate about emigrants and the preservation of German nationality in foreign countries and colonies.

A GLOOMY VIEW OF THE FUTURE.

Britain's Councillor of the Exchequer Alarmed at the Country's Expenditure

London, May 17.—The Chancellor of the Exchequer, Sir Michael Hicks-Beach, speaking at Bristol this evening, congratulated the audience on the fact that the cloud of war was fairly lifting, and that there were streaks of light portending a glorious dawn. Continuing, he said: "We are contending with a foe whose courage and skilled tenacity we have learned to respect, but we are entitled to hope that the beginning of the end is coming."

He added that the thanks of the nation would be due to Lord Roberts and those under him. If the Government, he declared, was not entitled to credit for the successes, it was not blamable for the reverses. It had shrunk at nothing to supply men and means.

The Chancellor denied that he was personally responsible for any delay in forwarding troops to South Africa, and announced that it might be necessary to still further increase the navy. He disagreed with the suggestion that a large permanent increase of the army might be necessary, but said that the country must look to the volunteers and the militia andland reports that a number of Boers living in the Ficksburg and Beibelehem districts have applied to him for advice and as to the conditions of surrender. This is very satisfactory."

London, May 17.—While Lord Roberts remains stationary at Kroonstad the right and left wings of his great army are jostling briskly forward, concentrating, in fact, upon Pretoria. In Natal General Buller is taking advantage of the position in which Roberts has placed the enemy by pushing rapidly to the northward, driving the burghers before him. From Glen-Eden he has advanced to Dannhauser, ten or fifteen miles to the north, and the advanced patrols of the second division, commanded by Sir Francis Clery, are already at Newcastle, the nearest town in Natal to Laing's Nek, the scene of operations during the war of 1881 and the scene of the signature of the peace treaty. Twenty miles away in Mafuba Hill and the Nek, and it may be that before many days are over the British will occupy without serious opposition formidable positions which have always been the military bugbears of South Africa, never, it is to be trusted, to again evacuate them. The operations of Buller are the corollary of those successfully conducted by Roberts, and their object is to place the Natal field force in line with that in the Free State preparatory to a movement on the Vaal. To the north of Kimberley Methuen and Hunter are engaged in precisely the same task, marching in a north-easterly direction, the former north of the Vaal and the latter north of that river in Transvaal territory. The simultaneous movement is, of course, necessary in order to guard the flank of the main force under Roberts, and render it less easy for the enemy to insert itself between the advancing columns. The occupation of Christiana by Hunter is confirmed and the first town in the Boer country to fly the British flag has fallen. This, however, is not the first invasion of the Transvaal during the war, for a portion of General Buller's force entered that land from Zululand about the time of the invasion of the Free State by General French, Brabant and Rundle are making excellent progress and have seized Mequattings Nek, 20 miles northeast of Mafanahu, a strong position which the Boers held for a considerable time during their raid upon the Bloemfontein district, and Modder Port, a few miles north of Ladybrand, among the mountains. The disorganization of the Free State is apparently complete. Nowhere is there any attempt to check the three-fold British advance. The Transvaalers are fleeing back over the Vaal to defend their country against the imminent invasion; their confederates of seven months' standing are surrendering arms and returning to the agricultural pursuits they no ill-advisedly quitted. The beginning of the end has come. The war, however, will not be over by to-morrow. It is well to remember that when Bloemfontein was occupied on March 13, anguine persons raised a cry that was not to be fulfilled. The Boers came of a dogged stock and will fight hard after the Vaal has been crossed. Of this one may feel assured.

FRENCH'S CAVALRY IN ACTION.

Mixed Squadron Were Ambushed by the Boers and Defeated.

London, May 17.—The Kroonstad war permits the passage of long despatches dealing with incidents prior to the occupation. It seems that General French's cavalry had one lively fight after crossing the Zand river. A mixed squadron, composed of the Scots Greys, the Inniskillings, Carriacoo and Australian Horse, took a kopje and dismounted. The Boers suddenly fired from a concealed position, killing many horses and wounding the rest. The Boers then advanced in overwhelming numbers and drove back the squadron, capturing some of the saddles. Finally a brigade of cavalry drove them off. Farther north the Hussars charged the Boers, killing and wounding many stragglers with sabres and pistols.

Lord Roberts' infantry marched 120 miles in seven days. General French marched 30 miles in one day. The Boers, when retreating, dragged 32 guns through Kroonstad.

REMAINED TO DRINK RUM.

Characteristic Story of the Irish Brigade With the Boers.

London, May 17.—A despatch from Vrededorfweg, without date, via Lorenzo Marquez, May 16, says: "Some American scouts before leaving Kroonstad Sunday morning set fire to the goods sheds after having had a struggle with the British residents. "Hazel's" American scouts have suffered more heavily than any other corps during the war. In the past six weeks out of a force 100 strong, they have lost 37 in killed, wounded or captured. Their storming of the British position at Tobago was grand. They captured Captain Cheyne and six men. "Hazel's" cavalry added to their laurels last week, but lost heavily in proportion to the burghers.

"It is believed that Blake's Irish corps, captured at Kroonstad, were ordered to retreat, but remained drinking the rum left by the commissariat."

REFUSAL POLITE AND FIRM.

The Times Says This Will be the Reply to the Delegates.

London, May 17.—The Times says: The principal New York newspapers cannot be accused of injudiciously fostering the expectations of Mr. Wessels and his colleagues. The Sun, which warmed them with its sympathy as long as they were at a distance, feels constrained to uncover the hard truth by assuring them that the United States cannot help them, and that intervention is a dream. The Tribune unkindly reminds them that if they wanted arbitration, as they declare they do, they ought to have said so before, and not after they had chosen the arbitration of war. Our New York correspondent adds that when Mr. Fisher, who mysteriously observes that he and his colleagues have very large powers, speaks Washington to-morrow and they will meet a more serious disappointment than the candid comments of the newspapers have caused them. The answer of the State Department, he declares, is quite ready for them whenever they choose to ask. It is a polite, but incoherent refusal. The rumors of the pro-Boer sympathies of President McKinley are believed to be utterly baseless. He is convinced that the country does not wish him to interfere and also that interference is inexpedient and impossible. Mr. Wessels fancies he can rouse the country against the Government. Unless the Americans are in a very unusual frame of mind, they will hardly relish attempts to override the action of their elected rulers and their own judgment by appeals which might find echo in the sentiments of the military nations of the European continent.

BULLER REACHES DANNHAUSER.

London, May 17.—2.15 p.m.—The War Office has received the following despatch from Gen. Buller:—

"Dannhauser, May 17.—The second division has reached Dannhauser and I hope that my advance patrols are at Newcastle. "The fifth division is echeloned from Elandsdang to Glencoe repairing the railroad. The fourth division is at Sunday River Drift, on the old Newcastle road.

"Several Natal farmers are handing over their arms. "All reports agree that about 7,000 of the enemy passed north very hurriedly May 14 and 15."

"Methuen has reached a point 12 miles on the Hoopstad road without seeing the enemy."

LAKEFIELD'S BIG INDUSTRY.

A Public Meeting Last Night Discusses the Cement Works By-Law.

The ratepayers of Lakefield met last night in the Town Hall and discussed the proposal to establish cement works in that village. There was a fair attendance of ratepayers. Reeve Hull occupied the chair.

Mr. John Kilborne, the principal promoter of the scheme, stated to the Times, that he and those associated with him, had decided to build the works, which would be erected at Buckley's Lake, about three miles south-east of the village, or in the village itself. It was proposed to grant the company a cash bonus of $10,000 and exemption from taxation if the works were located in the village. The main building would be about 75 x 300 feet, costing, together with the plant, from $150,000 to $200,000. A report of the meeting will appear to-morrow.

The Company will be known as "The Lakefield Portland Cement Company, Limited," and will have a capital of probably $250,000. The main deposit at Buckley's Lake is said to be very extensive, and pure.

The Company will employ about 75 men on the start, which will be increased later on.

The gentlemen associated with Mr. Kilborne are Mr. W. H. E. Brabender, cement manufacturer, New York, and Mr. R. P. Butchart, manager of the Owen Sound Cement Company. Both these gentlemen have spent several days in Lakefield, looking over the ground.

Mr. D. W. Dumble went yesterday afternoon with a draft of the proposed by-law, which will be submitted to the Council at once.

The Times will enter fully into the merits of the proposed contract later on, when the ratepayers will have ample opportunity of judging whether or not it will be a good thing to grant this aid asked for.

A SUMMARY OF THE BRITISH-BOER CAMPAIGN*RECONQUEST OF NATAL.

Buller Has Recovered all Britain's Territory Held by Boers.

London, May 16.—General Buller is rapidly making the reconquest of Natal. Already he has recovered all the territory which the British forces held at the beginning of the war. After occupying Dundee, he pushed forward to the west along the branch line connecting the colonies with Glencoe Junction, on the main line from Ladysmith into the Transvaal, and yesterday took possession of Glencoe. Thus the British again hold the advanced line for the defence of Natal, which the late General Symonds considered, so ill-advisedly, could be defended against the Boer invasion, but which had to be abandoned. It is interesting to note that the fifth division, commanded by Sir Charles Warren during the operations on the Tugela, has been in the forefront of the fighting which led to recent successes and is awarded a large share of praise by General Buller for its perseverance and courage. The Transvaal Boers have left their strongest position in Natal, south of the rocky ground, near Laing's Nek. Hlatikulu, the most formidable eminence of the Biggarsberg, and commanding the railway, was abandoned on Sunday and Monday last, the Boers, as usual, being able to take away their guns and baggage. Moreover, the northward march of Buller has had the effect of depleting the Free State forces defending the Drakensberg, who are in danger of being outflanked by both Buller and Roberts. It is likely that a few commandos from the Free State still hold that portion of the Biggarsberg which joins the Drakensberg, though their tenure will scarcely be long, as they are subjected to the same risk as their friends on the border mountains. It now seems apparent that the movement of General Buller is paving the way for a junction of the two forces through Van Rensselaer's Pass via Harrismith, which cannot be long delayed, as the Boers defending that pass will shortly have three forces threatening them—that of Roberts at Kroonstad; that of Brabant, advancing from Ladysmith, and that of Buller moving from Ladysmith. The abandonment of the pass is therefore only an affair of a few weeks at the farthest. The new concentration of the Boers at Hlatikulu Road Station is not seriously taken. Properly it should be termed a halt in order to rest after the incessant pursuit of the past few weeks. In all likelihood it will be followed by a further retreat as soon as Roberts begins to move again. The news that General De Wet is preparing a force at Klerksdorp, which is in the Transvaal, almost north of Kroonstad, indicates that General Hunter, who was last heard of north of Klerksdorp, is progressing more rapidly than was thought, and that the Boers anticipate an invasion of their country from the western border.

GLENCOE IN BRITISH HANDS.

London, May 16.—The War Office has posted the following despatch from Gen. Buller dated Dundee, May 16—
"We occupied Glencoe yesterday. The Transvaalers have now evacuated Biggarsberg. The Free Staters on the Drakensberg are much reduced in numbers. The Carolina Lydenburgers and a few commandos trekked north from Hlatikulu on 13th and 14th May. Eleven guns were entrained at Glencoe. The last largely been produced by the action of the fifth division, which, during the past few days, has done a great deal of very hard work—marching, mountain climbing and road making.
"Trains are now running to Wessels Nek Station."

THE BOERS ONLY CHANCE.

Prominent Burgers Advise the Destruction of the Mines.
London, May 16.—The Times has a special from Lorenzo Marquez which says—Prominent burglers at Pretoria feel that their only chance is to make the most of the threats to destroy the mines of Johannesburg, in the hope of securing intervention. The American consul is interesting himself in the detention by the Portuguese of a consignment of tinned beef from Delagoa Bay, but the report that he has protected is not true. He is awaiting the receipt of a promised protest from interested parties before taking action. For some time past he has openly boasted that he would show what he could do.

are in touch with British reconnoitering parties twenty miles north of Kroonstad.

The Boers have held a council of war at Disgrace, and the British spies have learned that the Boers decided to hold Harrismith as long as possible. Lord Roberts' infantry are still at Kroonstad. The railway laborers are hard at work, and the engineers hope to have the line repaired within three days.

The Free Staters are surrendering in larger numbers than after the occupation of Glencoe. It is estimated the Transvaalers can still muster 30,000 men on the fighting line.

DARING FEAT NEAR KROONSTAD.

London, May 16.—The Times has a special from Kroonstad dated May 15, as follows—

The cavalry were probably responsible for the demoralized retirement of General Botha's force from Kroonstad. On the evening of the 9th General French took two brigades, General Hutton's Mounted Infantry, including the Canadian mounted contingents, two batteries and six one-pounder Maxim's, crossed the Zand River and bivouacked at Duppree laager, with the object of turning the Boers' right and cutting communications with Ventersburg station. The circle they made was not quite big enough, since General French found 500 Boers, with five guns, covering the flank in anticipation of the movement. The Boer force included the Afrikaander Horse, a new corps, each man provided with two horses. The Boers' precautions precluded a strategic outflanking, but by skillful dispositions the enemy were tactically turned before nightfall.

The Boers showed a white front, and at one time faced the cavalry in the open when racing for possession of a rise. The unkillings forestalled the movement, but suffered from rifle fire. By working the brigades in semi-circles to the left General French was able to turn the Boer positions. General Porter's brigade retired magnificently at a walk under a shell fire, and General Debon's brigade was able to charge a party of 400 Boers, slaying twelve and taking some prisoners. The move was five minutes too late to be absolutely effective, but the enemy turned and fled back. The whole cavalry force thereupon advanced to Gras Pass.

General French then determined to make a second circle, the object being to cut the railway north of Kroonstad, securing the drift over the Valach River. As General French arrived in the difficult country near the drift he had the satisfaction of finding the enemy in force advancing in anticipation of the move. One shell was sufficient to show them that they were forestalled. The enemy deployed as they stood, and General French, still pursuing his object, reached a farm at Boshof. It was impossible to move further that night. The forces had marched forty miles that day, and had been two days without supplies.

Major Hunter Weston and Scout Burnham, with eight mounted sappers and one squadron, started to destroy the railway. The squadron was left behind, being too cumbersome and the rest of the party pushed north-west, in irregular order, and without arms. They came in contact with patrols of the enemy, and found that the Boers had a systematic line of pickets. Turning towards America siding they found the Boer army retreating, and some of them bivouacking along the line. Hunter, Weston and Burnham were forced to proceed alone. They surprised a redoubt of two men and took them prisoners. They were repeatedly challenged by passing Boers, but effected a ruse by lying down; their horses in the dark being then mistaken for loose animals. Hunter, Weston and Burnham again caught forward and lay down by the side of the road, wagons, guns and troops of the retreating enemy passing almost over them. Under cover of the noise of the wagons they succeeded in arriving at a railroad point where they had the shelter of an embankment. The charge having been made and the lights, they crept back and joined their party. A loud explosion followed, causing a buzz of excitement and alarm among the Boers. As the party dashed clear in loose formation they encountered a strong patrol, whom they captured. They broke their rifles and brought away seven prisoners, running the gauntlet under a heavy fire. They suffered only one slight casualty. (Unfortunately the last train had already passed before the line was destroyed.)

MAKING IN SORE STRAITS.

Boers say that Baden-Powell has Surrendered the Town.

London, May 16.—The correspondents make it clear that the besieged British are suffering from perpetual hunger, food is being eked out in quantities only sufficient to preserve life. One of them says: "We have now come to eating anything that can be eaten, and are thankful to have it. Horse, locust and mule are familiar articles of diet to everybody, and horsehide brains is extensively made. It is not bad, though it is somewhat gluey. The whole garrison have relinquished their daily allowance of an ounce of sugar to enable the younger women and children's amount to be increased." "There's an aching void here. Pass the loaf," writes another, with grim humor.

Lady Sarah Wilson on May 3 telegraphed to her sister in London that her breakfast on that day consisted of horse manure and her lunch of minced mule and carried locusts.

Nevertheless, all the messages have a certain degree of cheerfulness. Since they were despatched, however, the garrison have been put to a severe test. It is evident that the Boer assault on May 12 was resolute, and entailed desperate fighting, the result of which is not fully known. There are no reports from the British side, and nothing official from the Boers' side, but some unofficial accounts have reached London by way of Lorenzo Marquez.

One account says that after severe fighting in the streets, Col. Baden-Powell ordered for an armistice. Baden-day and surrendered Sunday morning. Unofficial Boer bulletins, however, have so often proved untrue that this is not believed.

PROVISIONS RUNNING LOW.

Mafeking Cannot Endure Much Beyond the Present Month.

London, May 16.—A special from Bulwer to the Times says—
Messages from Mafeking show that the provisions are very low, and it is doubtful whether the garrison can hold out much beyond the end of the month. Col. Plumer has contrived to cover the escape of 1,000 native non-combatants from the town, though his attempts to get cattle in have been unsuccessful.

MORE TROOPS REACH BEIRA.

Over 4,000 of Carrington's force have Been Landed.

London, May 16.—About 1,100 more troops, 4,000 in all, have arrived at Beira, Portuguese East Africa. Among them is Lord Dunsarven, who accompanied the Durban sharpshooters as a supernumerary captain on the battalion staff.

The Governor of Beira, Senhor Noyelles, during a speech at a dinner of the Yeomanry, said:

"Friends as we have always been of England, we never could have realized the magnificent unity of the Anglo-Saxon race without such an object lesson. Realizing this, Portugal not only congratulates her ancient ally, but rejoices with it, as the strengthening of a friend is the strengthening of ourselves."

Apparently Lord Roberts is still waiting at Kroonstad preparatory to making a swift movement on the Vaal River.

adjoins the above; the Copper Queen of Sedalia, a very promising property, only a few steps from the depot in Sedalia. This claim occupies an imposing position on a mountain just west

Short Story of the Day

UNDER ORCHARD BOUGHS

BY IDA KENNISTON.

For three days Ford Ashcroft, editor of the popular Now-a-Days Magazine, has been kept at home by a wretched cold. To-day he felt almost himself again, but a whistling, driving snowstorm, a fierce blizzard, such as sometimes strikes New York in the latter part of February, was raging, and forbade him to venture out. Tired with the unwonted inaction of the past two days, the editor's thoughts turned to his work, and he began to consider the make-up of the number now in preparation.

"I'm not quite satisfied with the May number," he murmured. "It's a little heavy for May; there ought to be more of the light and life and blossoming of May in it. Now, those 'Pas-tellors'—we haven't any really good spring story in them."

The "Pastellors," a new department of the magazine, were short sketches, with hardly plot enough to be called stories; sometimes a light character study—a delicate word painting of some aspect of nature.

Mr. Ashcroft took an art calendar from the wall by his side and turned the leaves until he came to the May page. The picture was an excellent copy of a water color painting. It represented an orchard of apple trees covered with their pink and white bloom. A young girl stood under one of the trees, leaning gracefully against the gnarled trunk, her hands clasped loosely before her. The whole was delicately tinted, and seemed almost to carry with it a faint fragrance of the blossomed May.

His thought went back to the village of Raynor, where he had spent a few months ago. Some college prank had brought him into trouble with the faculty, and he had been suspended for four months. His father had sent him to the little Connecticut village to spend the time with an old college classmate.

One of the village girls, shy little Faith Thorne, had for the first held captive his boyish fancy. As he came to know her better her influence increased, and he said to himself that he had found the pearl among women.
Brought up in a Quaker household, for Faith was an orphan and lived with her grandparents, a certain quaintness, a childlike simplicity and direct-ness, made her seem unlike the other merry, chattering country lasses.

Little by little he had Faith came to be more and more to each other; the wild rose flush in her cheeks deepened when he was by, a sweet shyness made the blue eyes droop before his.

She would not let him blind himself by any promise, they were both so young, she had said. He must go away now, finish his college course, with honor, and then, when he had taken the place waiting for him in his father's office, he might come again to Raynor, and he would find her waiting for him.

So, on this afternoon with the February storm raging without Ford Ashcroft's thoughts went back and lingered on the springtime idyl of those long ago years. Could it be 12 years—Faith would be 29 now, but somehow he could not think of her as looking much older than the young girl he had left in the orchard. Surely she had not lost that pure childlike face—a little older, but happy little smile, but still with those innocent wistful eyes. And he—well—he was 34; he had lived in the midst of the rush and whirl of the city life.

"It would make a good 'Pastelle,'" he finally remarked, and turning to his desk, took up his pen and began to write. Slowly at first, then, as the past seemed to come nearer his pen moved more rapidly over the page. He told of the college youth in the little village, of the shy maiden who won his boyish heart, the deserted old orchard, with its glory of apple blossoms. He seemed almost to inhale their delicate fragrance as he wrote.

The whole
pretty idyl was told in simple words, but with such exquisite art that one who read might almost see the pretty picture of the girlish Faith, with her pure trustful eyes and the boyish lover who bent to kiss her cheek beneath the orchard boughs. Then the story of the young lover who went away, who grew older and sterner, who struggled and won—and forgot.

After awhile he took the pen and wrote again.

A month later the editor was startled to find among his personal mail at the office an envelope bearing the postmark of Raynor.

"My Dear Ford—I have read the story, 'Under Orchard Boughs,' in the Now-a-Days, and though you have changed the names of the people and of the place, I know, at once that it was our story. But, dear, you should not have ended it as you did. When Fred Reynolds falls asleep in the little railway station, where he is waiting for the train, and the young girl comes in with her armful of apple blossoms whose fragrance, stealing into his dreams, makes him fancy himself once more in the old orchard; when he wakes to find it but a dream, and knows at last the one thing his life has lacked in the midst of its seeming prosperity, when, seized with a sudden heartick longing for a sight of the Faith he had known, he rushes to the ticket office and asks for a ticket to the little village; ah, Ford why did you not let him carry out his first impulse, why did you make him hesitate and turn his back on the hope he might have made his own?"

"I cannot say more than this—If you care to come to Raynor you will find me waiting in the orchard, and you will find me still FAITH THORNE."

Ford Ashcroft crushed the letter in his hand with a muffled imprecation.
"Coward!" he said to himself fiercely.
"Couldn't I have found enough literary material without dragging poor little Faith into print. It was a dastardly thing to do, but who would have thought she would have seen the thing. And now—"

He hastily put the letter in his pocket as the sound of voices was heard in the hall. The next moment the door was thrown open and two children rushed in, the older one exclaiming breathlessly, "Papa, papa the carriage has come and mamma is ready, and you said you'd go to ride with us to-day, because it's my birthday, and I'm 8 years old."

Ashcroft picked up the child and gave her half a dozen kisses in honor of the day. Then he went for a drive with his wife and little ones, the pathetic letter from Faith Thorne still in his pocket.

Laborers were engaged placing stone on George street between Hunter and Brook yesterday. This will improve the road very much.

WANTED--A SMELTER

The Lardeau wanted a Smelter.
Eastern Capitalists wanted a good Investment.
They knew the Lardeau to be a good field
And sent an agent to report.
The agent arrived in due course.

The local mine owners and operators wanted that Smelter,
And undertook to show WHY there was a good opportunity for investment
By showing the immense bodies of Ore available for treatment,
And took the Smelter man over the district
To the various good properties.

The third one visited was the ROB ROY MINES! Is that not sufficient evidence of the value of this property? Do Smelter Owners want scenery or rock for the works? If they want ORE why did the local men select the Rob Roy as one of the big reasons why these men should build?

The Smelter is to be built, and the Rob Roy is to supply a lot of Ore for it.

Until we get returns we must still sell shares to complete the work our engineer wants done, and a special issue has been made to meet the requirements. Do you want any shares? $150.00 buys $1000.00 worth of stock. 15 cents per share.

NORWEGIAN ANNIVERSARY.

Christiana, Norway, May 17.—The eight-sixth anniversary of the Norwegian independence is being appropriately celebrated throughout the empire today. Norwegians date their national freedom from May 17, 1841 when, at Eidsvold, Norway, a constitution, later sealed with blood of the forefathers, was adopted. By the treaty of Kiel, at the close of the wars of Napoleon, the allied powers of Europe decided to cede Norway and her people to Sweden as a punishment for the action of Denmark and Norway, her dependency, in siding with the great Corsican. The Norwegians although Norway had for 400 years been governed by Denmark, virtually as a province, revolted when the announcement of the treaty of Kiel was made and denied the right of the powers to cede them and their territory without their consent.

Marshall Bernadotte crown prince of Sweden, and formerly a marshal France, with his veterans of the campaign just closed, resolved to make the session effective by invading Norway.
In the meanwhile Frederick crown prince of Denmark, was made regent of Norway. He called a constitutional convention which met at Eidsvold.
There on May 17, 1814, a constitution modeled after that of the young United States of America, was adopted.

With the union a new era dawned for Norway and from that time forward rapid strides were made in education, industries and art. For which reason the patriotic Norwegians have for many years celebrated the anniversary as a national holiday.

A number of our local dressmakers are working till midnight keeping up with orders for the June weddings.

A Big Sale of Republic Stocks

THE FAIRFAX CO. OF REPUBLIC, J. J. Brown, Pres., Willis Merriam authorized me to place a small amount of this stock at $1.00. Remember the Fairfax

WORLD'S GREATEST CLUB

THE ANNIVERSARY OF THE FOUNDING OF THE Y. M. C. A.

Celebrated in London During the Week —Wonderful Growth of the Organization—
—It's Generous Parent.

On Thursday there was celebrated in England the anniversary of the biggest club in the world, the Y. M. C. A., which has a branch in every city and hamlet in the United States, in every part of Europe and in such contracted places as Dawson City and Nazareth, Johannesburg and Jerusalem. This great organization, which has some 7,000 branches and a membership of over 500,000, sprang from the humble plan of a poor London clerk, and began in a dingy upstairs room in a dry goods store.

Now the poor clerk is rich, and one result of that meeting over the dry goods store has been to make him a knight. His years number nearly 80 and he has lived to make his name a familiar one, to see the club that he began with 11 comrades spread all over the world, to see its membership growing by hundreds of thousands a year, to fill the buildings that shelter it in the United States and England alone valued at over $15,000,000, and to see among its standard bearers men whose names are synonyms for greatness and power.

RISE OF A DRY GOODS CLERK.

The story of Sir George Williams is that of a man who once forgot self and never remembered it again—who has made a success of life. A little English village first knew him as the son of a poor farmer. In another back-number town, Bridgewater, he was apprenticed to a draper—a dry goods dealer, as we said in America—at an early age. While still a young man he entered the employ of Hithcock & Rodgers, London drapers.

Like almost everyone destined to make his way in business, there was evidently such an amount of organizing ability stored up in his youth of 20 that it had to find an outlet somehow. So he conceived the idea that reading, recreation and religion might be combined in a way that would be of use to some of the thousands of lonely young men who had left their country homes and were earning a living in London and trying to keep themselves out of the devil's clutches. He found 11 other young men who had fallen in with the scheme, obtaining a permission from his employer to hold a meeting in the now historic spare room over the store, and after two sessions started a society which they decided to call the Young Men's Christian Association.

INFLUENCED HIS EMPLOYER.

After much deliberation over ways and means—for money was scarce—they raised between them a fund of 50 pence a week, rented a room in a hotel used to stand near Blackfriars Bridge, and began to meet there regularly. One day young Williams' employer, Mr. Hithcock, heard of the peculiar doings of the club, and decided that he would go and see what it was all about. He doubtless made the decision lightly enough, but it proved to be of vast consequence to him and to the young men, for he was so deeply touched by the simplicity and earnestness of their meeting that he announced himself as a "convert" then and there. He did more than profess however; he went out among the men of wealth and prominence that he knew and told them of the little club, and what its members aimed to do, and got money from them. A lot of money enough to make the young Men's Christian Association a thing to be reckoned with. Large rooms were taken in Fleet street, and the organization began to grow fast and throw out branches, gradually extending all over England. The first branch on this side of the Atlantic was in Montreal, but soon there was another one in Boston. New York followed suit, and America had adopted the plan of the London clerk. Then the world did.

A GENEROUS GIVER.

While interested in the affairs of the new organization Williams did not forget that he had his way to make in the world and he applied himself to his business with such energy that he was taken into partnership in the firm.

He was created a knight by the Queen in 1894. That was the jubilee year of the Young Men's Christian Association—founded in 1844—and a great convention was held in London to celebrate it, in which the venerable founder was the cent figure. To that convention from all over the world went 2,000 delegates, speaking 27 different languages.

Sir George Williams is one of the most charitable men in the world and never grows tired giving to good purposes. He would be immensely wealthier were his charities not so great. When he was earning $750 a year he gave $250 of his own money to the support of the Y. M. C. A. and this generous spirit has been his since.

A Bit of London Humor.

Near the corner of Dundas and Richmond street yesterday afternoon a very upsetting interview between a pug and a bicycle was witnessed. Now the dog was a pug dog and had just blind; moreover he had no intention of interfering with the bicycle when he set out for his afternoon ramble. He was not, however, a very good rambler. He was rather a nervous creature. It is doubtful if he knew the number or make of the wheel in question, and would be doubtful if he knew that his rider was a scoundrel. Had this latter fact been daily impressed on my mind by some kindly warning voice, a trifle more activity might have saved him the necessity of becoming a temporary cinder path. However that may be, they met, the bicycle, and the scoundrel did not. What he did do was a compulsory and forcibly reminded the spectators of a circus trapeze act. If that pug had been a child, which it certainly was not, by its yelps, it would never have been able to pick itself up altogether again, and the incident would not have been so gratifying to the spectators. Inquiry failed to reveal the name of the dog.

Bridge—"I can't stand the misanthropist." Von Blumer (sarcastically)—"It's a pity, Bridge, that I couldn't have married a wife to suit you." Bridge—"Sure, but we all make mistakes."

HUMAN BRAIN CELLS.

THEY REFUSE TO WORK UNDER TOO HIGH A PRESSURE.

Put on Too Much Steam and These Minute Organisms Go on Strike. Why Men Go Crazy or Become Absentminded.

Keeping pace with scientific thought and progress certain problems which in the past have been shelved for want of light being thrown upon them have been taken up again one by one to undergo further examination by the aid of improved science.

The newest revelation in this direction tends to the science of the mind and includes the following problems:

Why does a man act queerly when he is intoxicated?

Why is a man absentminded on occasions?

Why does a man sometimes become violently insane, often a dangerous, raving lunatic?

Such questions as these have puzzled our immediate fathers, who have hardly ever satisfactorily explained them away or indeed thrown much reliable light upon them. The human brain is composed of cells, and each cell is a simple bit of nerve substance, from one end of which, like an octopus, spring a number of tentacles, while from another part arises an arm different from them and of great length. The long arm is intended for transmitting impressions from one portion of the brain system to another, it being made to touch the tentacles or short arms of the next one to it, the latter in its turn effecting contact with a third cell, and so on.

Thus a message is conveyed and the mind gets its news. The entire brain is made up of these cells, whose number is legion and whose full strength is grouped in systems, these systems in turn being arranged in constellations, the communities in clusters, and finally the clusters in constellations, by which divisions they are known to physiologists.

So long as the mind is in a healthy condition each little cell, or brain octopus, attends to its business faithfully and gives no trouble, but as a man generally is an animal usually refuses to live the life willed out by nature and adopts instead the life laid down by the modern artificial process of living, instituted forthwith by civilization, mental disturbances frequently arise through the brain becoming abused in various ways, from overwork and alcohol principally.

Your octopoidal brain cell is a tiny little thing, and it can endure a great deal of abuse from you, but if you should go a little too far it rebels and refuses to work any longer by breaking contact with its companion cells, which it can do by withdrawing its long arm and getting itself out of circuit. But this rebellion is conducted by whole groups of cells acting together in full harmony.

Now, the object of this "strike" is simply to avoid overwork, for each cell has stored within its minute space only a certain amount of energy, but if you put on the high pressure this is easily consumed by the operation of the brain, and the organism breaks down from exhaustion. Now, take the first of the problems just stated. When a person takes too much to drink, the cells in those patches of the brain that are responsible for the conduct of muscular movement become affected and the man staggers.

When the dose is very large, the cells, which, although stupefied, have tried to keep their master on his legs, now cease working and the man sleeps like one dead. Finally, if more than enough of alcoholic drink be taken, the effect on the cells is to paralyze them, and the unfortunate man dies.

There is some relation between extraordinary activity of the mind and insanity. Geniuses are apt to exhibit symptoms of mental alienation, and, singular to relate, their children are usually inferior to those of average men.

For instance, not to go out of England for example, Cromwell was a hypochondriac and had visions, Demosthenes inherited insanity and was himself a little mad, Shelley was called by his friends "Mad Shelley," Charles Lamb went crazy, Johnson was another hypochondriac, Coleridge was a morbid maniac, Milton was of a morbid turn of mind, nearly approaching insanity (modern ideas of madness are largely formed on the description evolved by his diseased imagination), and Byron said he was visited by ghosts.

This mental alienation occurring in the foregoing cases shows that certain specific groups of brain cells have come under the baneful influence of the guiding spirit called talent or genius, which has used up all the energy stored in each cell and each group of cells, to the detriment of the whole, with the result that their ceasing work has brought about various types of insanity as depicted or, to phrase it more softly, indeed disturbance of the mental equilibrium.

The remaining problem is absentmindedness. This is produced by a temporary disjunction of certain groups of cells. A man becomes so absorbed in his study of some particular subject and lends his whole mind to thought that the hard thinking disorganizes the groups of cells employed in the process of reflection, their tentacles being turned all one way, to the detriment of mental action generally, and so the man with the tentacles of his brain cells turned in the one direction passes along the streets lost to all conversation or mental reception and does all manner of queer things because he is not conscious of what he is doing.

A Perfect Balance

Of mind and body was the Roman idea of perfect health. They defined this balance as "a sound mind in a sound body." A weak or sickly body tends to drag down the mind to its own level. Keep the body in health and the mind will take care of itself. The health of the body depends mainly on two things: A sound stomach and pure blood. Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery preserves the balance of health, because it makes the stomach strong and the blood pure. People who have not had a well day in years, nervous of body, depressed of mind, have been perfectly cured by the use of "Golden Medical Discovery."

"During the summer and fall of 1895 I became ill run down," writes Charles H. Sergeant, Esq., of Plain City, Madison Co., Ohio, "nerves went out of order and stomach was out of order. I wrote to Doctor Pierce for advice. He said I had general debility, and advised Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. I used six bottles, and since I stopped taking it, I do not feel that burning in the stomach after eating, and my blood and nerves are in good shape."

Dr. Pierce's Medical Adviser, paper covers, is sent free on receipt of 31 one-cent stamps to pay express of customs and mailing only. Address Dr. R. V. Pierce, Buffalo, N.Y.

MAFEKING RELIEVED AT LAST AND POWELL'S GARRISON IS RESCUED!

Scenes of Unparalleled Rejoicing and Loyalty in London When the Glad Tidings Were Announced by the Lord Mayor to the Anxious Crowds.

Two Generals and Forty Men Taken Prisoners by General Methuen at Hoopstad. General Hutton's Mounted Infantry Surprise Commandant Botha and Twenty-three Boers Near Kroonstad. President Steyn Now at Pretoria in Close Conference With Members of the Transvaal Government. Despatch From Buller.

London, May 18, 9.40 a.m.
The despatch to the Associated Press announcing the relief of Mafeking, was posted out the Mansion House, and the news rapidly spread. A huge crowd collected, and at this hour, all the streets in the neighborhood are already resounding with cheers.
The War Office at 9 o'clock announced that no news had been received, and at 9.08 p.m., the Lord Mayor, Mr. A. J. Newton, in his official robes announced the joyful news to the crowd outside. The masses of people outside the Mansion House soon grew to such dimensions that the police were compelled to divert all the traffic, omnibuses etc. through the side streets. The cheering is now incessant.

London, May 18.—(Later.)
The special editions of the newspapers and the tickers announced the news in all the public resorts. In the west end, leading thoroughfares were eventually impeded by a constant stream of the populace cheering themselves hoarse, and singing "God Save the Queen" and "Soldiers of the Queen." The enthusiasm as this despatch is sent, promises to outlive the scenes attending the relief of Ladysmith. A reporter of the Associated Press inquired at the War Office and the resident clerks said nothing had yet been received in confirmation of the news from Pretoria of the relief of Mafeking. The despatch of the Associated Press regarding the relief of Mafeking was sent to the Parliament House, where it created a great deal of excitement in the press gallery and lobbies, and soon began to be considered among the members of the House.

Mr. Thos. Cheddwick, advanced Liberal member for the Wick district, amid considerable excitement said he understood news of the relief of Mafeking had been received. Was that so? No member made any reply and the debate was continued. But the House no longer took any interest in it and the members went to the lobbies to discuss the great event.

London, May 18.
The Lord Mayor was accompanied by the Lady Mayoress to the front of the Mansion House, where an immense crowd of Col. Baden-Powell was displayed, bearing the inscription "Mafeking relieved." While the attendants were waving the Union Jack the Lord Mayor briefly addressed the assemblage:—"I wish your cheers could reach Mafeking." Here the speech was interrupted by redoubled cheering and the singing of Rule Britannia, after which the Lord Mayor remarked:—"We never doubted what the end would be or that British pluck and courage would conquer at last." The Lord Mayor then led the crowd in singing "God Save the Queen, and Soldiers of the Queen, and with renewed cheering and the waving of flags by the assembled millions the singing of "For He's a Jolly Good Fellow," the Mayor and his party retired.

London, May 18, 4 a.m.
London's millions spent half the night in the streets and even at 1 o'clock this morning troops of young men are marching and singing and crowds in front of the Mansion House, the Marlborough House, the Clubs on Pall Mall and the War Office and in Parliament Square waving flags.

THE CANAL OUTRAGE A FENIAN PLOT.

And Was Inspired by a Hatred of Anything That is British.

Toronto, May 18.—Mr. John Murray, Chief Inspector of the Provincial Criminal Investigation Bureau, returned to the city last night after spending ten days in the United States on the Welland Canal dynamite case.

The result of his investigation places it beyond all doubt that the attempt to destroy the canal was a Fenian plot, and incited solely by hatred of Great Britain. The three men, Walsh, Nolin and Dullman, are all prominent Fenian members of the Napper Tandy Club, of New York, a branch of the Clan-na-Gael Society.

Tracing Their Movements.
Inspector Murray traced the men twice across the ocean and through several United States cities. Nolin, with John Rowan and John Merna, came to New York from Dublin in 1894, and for a while lodged with John M. Kerr, of 45 slip, N. New York. Nolin secured work in Philadelphia, but in 1898 he returned to Dublin. In November, 1899, the three, with John Walsh, returned to New York and again lodged at Kerr's.

While at Kerr's, Nolin and Walsh joined and joining in the national airs. Colonel Baden-Powell's brother in London has received a cable from a Dutch friend in Pretoria saying that Mafeking has been relieved.

Pretoria, May 17.
President Steyn arrived here last night and is now in close conference with the Transvaal government.

London, May 18.
General Buller in a despatch to the War Office, dated Newcastle, May 18, says:—"Newcastle was occupied last night and to-day. The whole Second Division and the Third Cavalry Brigade will be concentrated there. I have sent the mounted force through N'Quatu to expel a small force of the enemy and to reassure the natives.

The enemy have burnt the chapel, broken much glass, plundered many houses and taken cash from the banks, but otherwise they have not done much harm. The railway is badly damaged, the Ingagani bridge is destroyed, as are many culverts and the pumping stations and water works. Of the 7,000 men flying before us, about 1,000 have gone to Nukerstrom and some by Miller's Pass to the Free State. The remainder, who are described as "disorganized rabble" have gone north and say they intend to make a stand at Laing's Nek.

TEXT OF ROBERTS' DESPATCH.

Latest Story of the Operations as Told by the Chief.

London, May 18.—Following is the text of Lord Roberts' despatch to the War Office:—

"Kroonstad, May 18.—Methuen entered Hoopstad yesterday unopposed. Generals Durney and Daniels and forty men have surrendered.

"Broadwood occupied Lindley yesterday after slight opposition. Only two of our men were wounded. Steyn was not there, and his Government officials had left Sunday.

"Hutton's mounted infantry yesterday surprised and captured about thirty miles northwest of this place, Commandant Botha, Field Cornet Gassen, five John-nesburg policemen and seventeen Boers. There were no casualties on our side."

Buller reports that several Natal farmers are handing in arms.

HOW BULLER DID IT.

Story of the Skillfully Concealed Operations in Natal.

London, May 18.—The Times has a special from Ladysmith describing the driving of the Boers from the Biggarsberg. It says:—

"The plan was admirably conceived and carried out. While our left remained at Rensburg the right by means of a flying column was flung at the extreme eastern part of the range, effected a lodgement there, and thus opened an easy line of advance to Dundee, threatening the flank of the whole Boer main position. The march took five days, and began on the 8th inst. The 2nd Division and the 3rd cavalry brigade marching from the camp midway between Ladysmith and Rensburg, concentrated on the Ladysmith-Helpmakaar road at Sunday's River, together with a large number of field and long-range guns and a large convoy.

The march throughout was over an extremely hilly and difficult country, the roads being bad, mostly deep sand. The eleventh column bivouacked on the Waasbank river, immediately in front of which lies the almost unbroken line of the Biggarsberg. The 12th cavalry brigade, who scouted all the time ahead of the column, came in touch with the enemy below the Biggarsberg. That night the force bivouacked two miles from the foot of the hills and eight miles from the Waasbank River. The next morning the Boers fired into the camp. The whole column marched along the road leading to Pomeroy, to a point where it crosses a deep valley running east, and three miles west of Helpmakaar. The mounted infantry supported by the 2nd brigade rapidly seized the hills on both sides. Colonel Botham, with a considerable force of mounted infantry, co-operating from Pomeroy.

The Boers were completely outmanoeuvred and forced to evacuate a carefully prepared position, commanding our advance upon the valley, and fell back to a small kopje immediately north of Helpmakaar, where they had long-range guns

PETERBOROUGH'S LOYAL DEMONSTRATION.

The Joyful Tidings Received With the Ringing of Bells, Blowing of Whistles and Firing of Bombs.

Shortly after five o'clock yesterday evening a despatch was received at the Times from the War Office, announcing the joyful intelligence that Mafeking had been relieved. A bulletin was at once posted up in front of the office, and soon after the fun began. The town bell was rung, after which the steam whistles of the town joined in the glad chorus, one by one, until every one living in the neighborhood of Peterborough was made aware that some event of unusual importance had taken place. People rushed from their homes and offices and in a short time the streets in the centre of the town were filled. The stores having bombs and firecrackers for sale did a rushing business. Many prominent citizens joined in the sport, and bought fireworks freely. Mr. J. Alex. Culverwell was seen disappearing in a store and returning with an armful of bombs. Ex-alderman Davidson caught the inspiration, and bought half the stock of an up-town dealer, giving them to the boys, who soon had the air blue with smoke. A bomb was placed on the letter box in front of Salisbury's bookstore, and after it exploded there was no letter box there.

A bomb struck Mr. R. B. McKee in the arm, tearing his coat and lacerating the forearm.

A lad named Jobe was struck on the thigh with one of these explosives and so badly injured that he had to be carried into Lynch's drug store, where the wound was dressed.

Commencing about seven o'clock and lasting until eleven the bands of the 57th regiment and Sons of England paraded the principal streets playing patriotic airs. The thoroughfares being thronged with vast crowds of cheering people and the town was ablaze with fireworks of every description, and the noise of firecrackers, etc., was deafening. Kruger was burned in effigy at the corner of Simcoe and George streets and an immense bonfire illuminated the scene. Some boys rang the fire bell and added to the excitement. Last night's spontaneous demonstration of joy and loyalty will not soon be forgotten by our townsmen.

and Vickers-Maxims. Battery A engaged them. Later our Vickers-Maxims, which were in action for the first time, silenced till sunset. In the evening our heavy guns were brought up and the troops bivouacked two miles from the Boer position. Our loss was one horse. The enemy retired during the night, and at dawn we occupied Helpmakaar. Hence the road runs along the top of the Biggarsberg, through open and comparatively flat country to Dundee. Lord Dundonald's cavalry immediately pursued, but the Boers set fire to the grass behind them and made it difficult to come to close quarters. They fought a rear guard action at Spion Kop, where they were shelled out of their position, and again at Bloubaek Laagie, where the pursuit was slightly checked. This position was turned, and the pursuit resumed. Lord Dundonald bivouacked ten miles from Dundee, and the infantry and supply column at Smith. Two prisoners and many horses were taken. Our casualties were extremely slight. Our success was the signal for a general advance, and General Hildyard is now advancing along the railway.

BULLERS ENTERS DANNHAUSER.

Boers are Now Falling Back Upon Amajuba Hill.

Dannhauser, Thursday, May 17.—Gen. Buller entered Dannhauser at 10 o'clock this morning. The houses in the town were found to be not much damaged, owing to the sympathies of the Boer inhabitants. A house at Hatting Spruit, however, was destroyed. A number of rebels were found at their homes and arrested. The railway is little damaged, but several large culverts have been destroyed.

The Boer north of Newcastle are falling back on Amajuba.

General Buller has received a message from the Queen, congratulating him upon the taking of Dundee, and expressing appreciation of the work of the troops, to which he has replied.

The Boers left two doctors and an ambulance here.

BLOWN UP THE BRIDGE.

Boers Prepare to Resist the Advance of Roberts.

London, May 18.—From Kroonstad comes a story attributed to excellent authority to the effect that a peace party is being formed at Pretoria, while reports from Pretoria itself indicate discouragement at the Boer reverses and the possibility of an early suing for peace.

On the line of Lord Roberts' advance the only important news is that the Boers have blown up a bridge over the Rhenoster River, 37 miles north of Kroonstad.

POWELL OUTWITTED THEM.

He Allowed the Boers to Take a Position, and Then Took Them.

London, May 18.—Skeleton messages from Lord Roberts based upon information that leaked out at the Pretoria War Office show that the Boer stormers on Saturday fell into a trap. Colonel Baden-Powell permitted them to seize one fort and he then surprised and overbore them before the large force near at hand perceived the stratagem. It was thus that Sarel Elloff, President Kruger's grandson and part of his command were taken, and fifty Boers killed.

It seems that a final assault was ordered in consequence of the approach of the relief column, which started from above Kimberley about April 19, reached Taunges toward the end of the month, and was within thirty-five miles of Mafeking several days ago. This force is supposed to consist chiefly of the Kimberley Light Horse, Roberts' Horse, Marshall's Horse and Imperial Volunteers. Its start and progress were masked by the movement of General Carrington's force from Beira and General Hunter's advance upon Fourteen Streams. But while the column escaped observation in its first detour towards Taunges, its approach through Vryburg has been no secret to the Boers.

REFUGEES ARE OPTIMISTIC.

They say that Mafeking has Been Relieved.

London, May 18.—A special despatch from Lord Roberts dated yesterday says the last five hundred refugees who arrived there, agree in stating that Mafeking had been relieved.

The end of the war is anticipated by the Queen's birthday, May 24. It is stated at the War Office that no news as to the relief of Mafeking had been received up to eight o'clock this morning.

MAEKING RELIEF FORCE.

It is Believed to Have Already Reached its Destination.

London, May 18.—The latest report is to the effect that the Mafeking relief force left Bloemfontein at the beginning of May, and marched across the country towards the goal, passing to the rear of the Boer forces at Fourteen Streams. It is added that satisfactory news of the progress of this force was received May 11, leading to confident anticipation in high quarters that it has by now achieved its mission.

GOING TO WASHINGTON.

Boer Delegates Continue Their Fruitless Perambulations.

New York, May 18.—The Boer delegates will leave for Washington this afternoon at half-past three o'clock. The committee appointed by the citizens of Washington to escort the visitors to the National Capitol, arrived in New York early to-day and drove to the Hotel Manhattan, where they were received by the envoys.

Mr. Sulzer formally invited them to Washington, and Mr. Fischer made a brief response.

Mr. Vanderboel then invited the envoys to visit Baltimore.

Delegate Wessels, speaking with reference to the published report that the envoys are in this country under the auspices of the Boer National Relief Association, said to-day:—"The envoys are not here under anybody's auspices. They come with credit from the Transvaal and Orange Free State."

What is the Cause of it?

Rev. Dr. Tovell, pastor of Trinity Methodist Church, Toronto, and formerly of Peterborough has sent to his congregation by mail this question: "It is said that Sabbath evening congregations generally with few exceptions, are declining. Believing this to be true, can you give the cause and remedy?" The answers received will be read out Sunday evening. Peterborough pastors might well ask the same question.

WANT UNCLE SAM TO SAY THE WORD.

Boers Think This is All That's Necessary to Stop the War.

New York, May 18.—Messrs. Wessels, Wolmarans and Fischer, the Boer delegation, commissioned to appeal to the American people, to induce them to induce them to intervene in the present war, were received yesterday by the municipal Reception Committee, headed by Mayor Van Wyck.

As the carriages containing the Boers drove up to the City Hall crowds pressed around them, and cheered. The delegates in acknowledgement, raised their hats.

Mayor Van Wyck received them, saying:—"I am delighted to welcome you to the City of New York, and assure you that in America you will receive a cordial welcome from the people of this country. I desire to inform you that the representatives of the City of New York have asked me to extend you a welcome, and I welcome you on behalf of the people of the city."

Their Big Brother.

Delegate Fischer, who is the spokesman of the party replied:—

"This reception is an honor which we will remember. The small liberty-loving people will think the better of their big brother. We think we will come well out of the struggle. We have been told that 90 per cent. of the people of America sympathize with us. We want to convert the other 10 per cent. by simply telling the truth. We hope that a free people will not have appealed to a free people in vain."

If America Said the Word?

Delegate Wessels spoke in the same tenor:—"We have come to tell the free people of America that we mean to win, and to retain our freedom; if not to-day, to-morrow; if not to-morrow, we will keep on fighting for it the next 100 years. We don't ask you to fight for us, but we ask you to say to England—'Stop!' and we think if America said the word the war would be stopped. If we are beaten, America will probably be ashamed in future years if the question should be asked—'What has happened to your little sister?'"

As the delegates left the City Hall they were shaken by the hands by persons on all sides.

Short Story of the Day

TRIUMPH OF A WINGED GODDESS.

In the great walled garden across the square, where all the sculptors had come together to do their separate and secret work upon the heroic figures, was Caspar Lamonte—among the pottering about in search of his allotted materials and the tools which he had sent over that morning from his studio.

The figures were to be finished in less than a fortnight and were intended to mark the triumphal route of a republican conqueror who would wear a laurel wreath on his uniform and carry a jewelled sword. The sculptor might have thought of this as he picked out the simple instruments of his craft, for he studied each with an absent smile and whistled the dust out of the sleeve of his working coat with the last. One of the workmen who had helped to rig up scaffolds for the sculptors of the garden stopped carefully among the barrel heads and piles of clay to where Mr. Lamonte stood.

"A lady at the door for you, sir," he said, "and she is arguing with the door-keeper about coming in."

"See that she is allowed to enter," said Lamonte, "if you expect her."

In another minute his model was standing before him. She was a tall blonde type with a noble forehead. And when she put one hand over her mouth and leaned back ward in mock effort to yawn at the earliness of the hour, she suggested the pose of a goddess about to utter an acclaim in advance of the procession.

"I am so sleepy," she said. "You may believe me I had a hard time getting up this morning. But little Royall was ever so anxious to see you."

The sculptor had not noticed the little boy in the way, but the announcement sprang from his mother's skirts, laughing and circling about Lamonte—a ring around an inconspicuous "roy."

"Why did you bring him here, Alice," said the sculptor impatiently. "He'll only be in the way. Send him home."

"He is in the way, then his mother will be in the way too," she replied with time unconscious for herself.

"Oh he don't worry me, and I like to see him at the studio always; but here—he's apt to get hurt."

Alice Linton took the child up in her arms and sat him upon the head of an up-turned empty barrel. Then she prepared herself for the still task that was before her. She was a widow of an artist, who in his career had achieved greater fame than riches, and this was now her occupation and the support of her four-year-old son. She was considered a model of rare beauty among the artists and sculptors; and she was a particular favorite with Lamonte, who found her indispensable to certain representations of Columbia as a winged goddess, which the committee had commissioned him to execute.

During the tedious hours of that first day little Royall sat quietly on top of the barrel watching the sculptor swiftly daubing and molding fragments of clay, while the child's mother maintained the studied attitude in which he had been placed. It looked very tiresome to this very small boy, for he asked slowly, if it would take long. He was used to these sittings, but he seemed to understand that he was the making of a masterpiece.

Royal had been taught never to meddle, so he made no effort to slide from his barrel. He was being brought up in an atmosphere of art and the few children he had known were the kind that appear in water colors and oils, whom he might regard only at a distance where the light would properly fall on the canvas. Occasionally under the high arched roof of the garden a model paused to pinch his grave young face, or a member of the committee stared at him and passed on. Royal was the only child admitted to the place.

Day after day the little connoisseur watched the development of a winged goddess out of the personality of the mother he loved and under the skill of the famous sculptor he had learned to respect. At times his curly head would nod drowsily and he would rock from side to side. Then Lamonte would stop work for a moment and taking the child in his arms, lay him gently upon a pile of excelsior with a piece of bagging for a pillow.

Sculptor and model worked incessantly until at last the goddess of clay layed only her wings to be ready for casting. Lamonte almost broke down under the strain.

One afternoon he quit suddenly.

"I must rest," he said, "here or no here for the nation."

The woman led him to the outer air, leaving a workman as wanderer over the sleeping child. They walked slowly along the outskirts of the square. Alice half supporting the sculptor, who would never have been recognized in his garb and soft felt hat crushed down on his forehead.

"I have wondered, Alice," he said thoughtfully, "if I could risk making love to you without losing you altogether—as model and also as wife."

"Don't try it, she said seriously. That is against your ethics. And I may as well tell you that if you forget I should never come back to you."

The clatter of hammers and saws on the great arch in the square brought them back to the business of genius, and they made their way again to the garden. Not many days afterward the winged goddess of liberty, with the wreath held aloft in her shapely arms, was complete and cast in several repetitions. There was no further need of the model but Lamonte's work would not be finished until the statues were erected in the shadow of the triumphal arch. His presence was required constantly in the avenue until this was done, and then he left the artisans to clear away the debris.

In the late afternoon light some struggling carriages were rolling along under the arch, in the opposite direction from whence the historical parade had come, on the way to uptown palaces, where military guards and naval guests of honor were to be entertained as was due their station. Detachments of tired soldiers filed by towards the various armories where they were quartered. And citizens still observing the heroes of the war passed up and down the magnificent avenue.

Some one saw a small child standing unattended close to the winged goddess and watching the box-shaped kites and kite-floats floating above the square, scarcely discernible in the fading twilight. So motionless was the little observer that an old gentleman stopped and spoke to him. The child instantly turned and ran the gauntlet of victorias, cabs and motor carriages to another winged goddess directly across the avenue. Then came a police sergeant.

The wail shook his head when asked what was his name and where was his nurse. Persistent questioning worried him and he refused to be beguiled away from the statue, constantly patting its base with his tiny hands. At length he said gravely and with perfect accent: "You must not annoy Mr. Lamonte."

"Is that your name little man?" urged the police sergeant. The child nodded.

"Singular!" said the old gentleman, who had listened to the persuasion employed. "That is also the name of the sculptor who executed this very figure."

"Perhaps," added a marine in the gathering crowd, "that this may be the sculptor's son."

It was suggested that the police sergeant take the supposed Lamonte infant to his father's studio, which was at no great distance. The old gentleman who "knew the name" and the marine went along to see how the infant turned out. Mr. Lamonte's studio servant stated that the sculptor had not been there in two weeks and might probably be found resting at the garden. Thither went the little group, the child manifesting delight as they approached an obscure entrance. Once inside he led them to a dim circle of deserted work-shops by the light of the watchman's lantern, picking his way unaided over the debris of clay and wooden frames and fragments of broken plaster casts.

When the child stopped in a spot that seemed familiar to him, the old gentleman was the first to speak.

"There is clearly no one here besides ourselves," he said. But something stirred in a dark corner and a man sat up, full of sleep, in a bed of straw and excelsior.

"What's waked?" he asked.

"We are looking for Mr. Lamonte, the sculptor," the police sergeant stated.

"I'm your man."

"Well, sir," the marine put in, "this little fellow is lost and he says he is your son."

"All right," laughed Lamonte, recognizing the child; "thank you for bringing him back. And where on earth have you been, Royall? Just sit him upon the barrel where he belongs."

Once more the model's child posed penitently in his accustomed seat now within the tiny arch of the watchman's lantern. The visitors went away leaving him thus. Scarcely half an hour had elapsed when the woman after whom the winged goddess was fashioned hurried through the gloomy immensity of the garden toward the single patch of light in the stall of Lamonte.

The watchman came stumbling, his conviction close behind him.

Alice Linton clasped in her arms the beautiful child who had strayed from her side during the parade and kissed him passionately.

"And who do you imagine the young rascal represented himself to be?" asked Lamonte. "He told them he was my son."

Alice was too happy to reply. "Royall Royall!" she sobbed. But the artist's account of himself as the son of Lamonte eventually proved to be nearly correct. He got to be a step-son, which was the greatest triumph of the winged goddess.—Copyright, 1900, by Daily Story Publishing Company.

THE HEIGHT OF POLITENESS.

As Exemplified by an Officer on a British Man-of-war.

This is a story of the height of politeness. It is told by Angus Evan Abbott, the author, and it is, I believe, absolutely true. Mr. Abbott is a Canadian by birth and education, and on first coming to England he was, as most Americans and Canadians are, eager to catch a glimpse of the queen. But as her majesty did not live in his suburbs, Mr. Abbott's wish remained ungratified for some time. However, one day he found himself in Portsmouth and learned that the royal yacht, with the queen and Princess Beatrice aboard, was to cross from the Isle of Wight to Portsmouth.

Hastening down to the landing place, he discovered that there was not the ghost of a chance of catching sight of her majesty on land, so he went to the water-side, hired a small boat and rowed out into the great harbor. Pushing out from the inner port, wherein rode a mighty fleet of battleships and cruisers all shrouded in hunting in honor of the queen, the writer found himself on the broad outer bay, alone except for a dotted line of men-of-war's boats indicating the route to be taken by the queen's yacht.

Pulling in his oars and allowing the boat to float at will, Mr. Abbott got his glasses focused ready for the queen's yacht and put in his time reading a book. All at once he heard a voice sounding as though it came from the clouds. It was gentle, aristocratic of accent and apologetic in diction. It said, "I beg your pardon, but would you mind letting us pass?"

Glancing quickly up, Mr. Abbott beheld the bow of the mighty battleship Minotaur towering over his little rowboat like a precipice, and peering over the brow of the cliff of iron was the calm face of a naval officer. The ship was swinging slowly into harbor and was but a few yards away, coming directly toward the tiny rowboat.

In the words of the novel, "To seize the oars and pull for his life was the work of an instant." When Mr. Abbott was clear of the battleship, the naval officer, not a ghost of a smile on his face, said, "Thank you very much," and the ship crept past. Mr. Abbott claims that naval officer to be the politest man living—London Cor. Saturday Evening Post.

LATEST MARKET REPORTS

PETERBOROUGH.

MR. ENGLISH'S REPORT.

Mr. W. J. English, Market Clerk, reports the local markets as follows:

There has been a fair amount of produce moving during the past week. The spring work being about over the farmers have started to move in their surplus grain, hay and straw, and as a result prices have declined appreciably, particularly in hay. There has been a good demand for potatoes at steady prices, and outside buyers are expected to be on the market next week.

Wheat—About fifty loads were offered and sold readily at last week's quotations, namely 65 cents.

Klats—Asked upon the suggestion throughout by the market clerk, about 40 loads of oats were offered, and were picked up readily at 30 and 31c. The market can stand several loads as yet.

Barley—Very few, if any loads were sold, and the prices remain the same as last week.

Pears—There was a fairly active movement in pears and those of good quality sold readily at 25 to 30c, while Canadian Beauties sold at 15 to 20c.

Rye—None offered, but prices remain the same.

Hay—There was a very large quantity of hay marketed this week, and as a result prices declined to 37 to 37.50 from last week's quotations.

Straw—Quite a few loads were sold at 32.50 to 33. There is a ready market for straw of good quality.

Potatoes—There was only a fair offering of potatoes this week, with prices steady. It is expected that two outside buyers will be on the market next week for the purpose of buying potatoes in bulk. It is thought that prices will be about 35 to 40c per bag.

Butter and Eggs.—There was good supply of both on the market on Saturday. Butter sold at 15 to 18c, while eggs brought 8 to 10c per doz.

Live Stock.—The live stock market has been active owing to extensive movements in hogs and hogs. There seems to be a strong demand for yearling calves at the quotations, given last week, namely, 33.25 and 34.40 for good colored steer calves and 32.25 to 33.50 for better calves and off-color steers.

The local market declined this week, the quotations being 35.75 for select hogs, 160 to 200 lbs., while light and heavy fats sold at 36.00 to 35.12 1-2. The Toronto quotations this week show that there prices are only down 12 1-2c, making it rather hard to account for a drop of a quarter on the local market.

Mr. Robert Stewart, it is currently reported, has engaged with the Matthews Co., and will buy for them in future. It is to be hoped in the interests of the farmers that this is so, as Mr. Stewart, while dealing directly himself with the farmers, has gained a deserved reputation for fair and square dealing, and the farmers were always sure of getting the top price for hogs from him.

Mr. W. A. Stabler bought about 80 hogs on the market to-day at prices ranging from 33.75 to 35.25. He says that he will be a regular shipper to the Toronto market, if he cannot make satisfactory terms for local delivery.

Messrs. W. Stabler, W. Morris, and R. Howden are busy buying yearling calves for Mr. McPartland, the American buyer. They expect to ship regularly every Saturday during the next few months.

Any farmer having any kind of stock for sale would do well as was intimated last week to leave their names with the Market Clerk at the first opportunity, as he would assist the drovers in getting, as well as the farmers in disposing of their stock.

UNCONSCIOUSNESS.

The Causes That Induce This Condition and Its Various Phases.

It is often difficult when a person is found unconscious to determine the cause of the condition. Yet this determination is of the greatest importance, since upon it must depend the treatment and perhaps the life of the sufferer.

Of course this is a task for the physician, and it is often one that taxes his acumen to the utmost. But there are certain signs which every one may learn to know and so be prepared to prevent maltreatment before the physician arrives.

The chief causes of a sudden loss of consciousness are apoplexy, Bright's disease, diabetes, drunkenness, opium poisoning, injury to the head, epilepsy and fainting.

A person found unconscious should be placed on his back, the clothes, especially those about the neck, should be loosened, and he should have plenty of air, curious spectators being kept at a distance.

If the breath smells of alcohol, the first thought is that the man is drunk, but it is most unsafe to assume this to be the case without corroborative evidence. The man may have taken a drink just before the accident befell him, or he may have been slightly drunk, and in that condition he may have had a stroke of apoplexy or have fallen or been struck a blow on the head, or some bystander may have poured whisky down his throat with the mistaken idea of helping him.

The head should first be examined to see if the skull is broken, if there is a wound of the scalp or if blood is coming from one of the ears, which is a sign of a fracture of the base of the skull.

Note should be taken of the breathing. If it is very slow, six or eight times or less a minute, the probability is that the case is one of opium poisoning. If the respiration is rather slow and snoring, with blowing out of the lips and of one cheek, apoplexy or concussion of the brain may be suspected.

In unconsciousness resulting from Bright's disease the breathing is usually more rapid and not noisy, and in that resulting from diabetes the inspiration is slow and prolonged, while expiration is short and quick.

A drunken man can usually be aroused temporarily if spoken to in a loud voice or pricked with a pin, and the same is true of one suffering from Bright's disease, but in apoplexy and opium poisoning the unconsciousness is usually complete.

Unconsciousness may be hysterical in its nature and may simulate any of the types mentioned above. A dash of cold water in the face will often restore consciousness with great rapidity in such a case.—Youth's Companion.

QUEER MARRIAGE CUSTOMS.

Young Bulgarian Peasants Arrange Nuptials by Proxy.

There are few places within the limits of semicivilization that boast of more interesting marriage customs than Bulgaria. Every young peasant wishes to marry as early as possible, as he is of little importance in the community until he has a wife. But he is not in danger of forming an alliance in opposition to his parents' wishes, as his earnings belong to them until he is wedded, and his wife must be bought and paid for according to their station in life. The parents usually give him the necessary sum as soon as they can afford it, so that the restriction is less galling than it seems.

A "wife purchase" varies from $200 to $1,500, in proportion to the wealth of the contracting families, for the marriage is strictly a family affair. In addition to this sum a smaller amount is given to the bride's mother for her personal use. After the pecuniary arrangements have been made by the proxies the betrothal takes place on either a Wednesday or Thursday. It consists of the exchange of written pledges regarding the sum to be paid by the bridegroom on the one hand and the household furnishings to be supplied by the bride on the other.

Kings then are blessed by the priest and exchanged by the couple, the fiancée kisses the hands of the guests assembled and retires with her young friends to a feast prepared in another room. The young people then dance outside the house and sing.

The fiancé's presents are then produced and their value estimated by the father of the bride. These consist of shoes, headress and necklace of coins, silver belt, bracelets and other jewelry. The father usually regards their value as insufficient, probably to enhance his daughter's worth in her suitor's eyes, and the lover adds coin by coin until an agreement is reached. The marriage does not take place until six months after the betrothal.

During the week preceding the day set for the wedding the house for the young couple is furnished by the bride's parents. Then her home is cleaned and whitewashed and every hidden store brought out for decoration. Cakes are made and sent around as invitation cards, requesting the recipients to come to the wedding on Sunday, the invariable wedding day. The articles composing the trousseau are hung up for inspection on cords stretched across the principal room on Friday of the following day. Two of the bride's friends come to help her dress her hair, plaiting it in minute braids, not to be undone until after the ceremony. Then the village maids come with gifts of sweets and flowers, and all sit down on the floor to a dinner of vegetables.

On Sunday the bride is seated in state in all her gorgeous apparel, and with a spangled red veil over her face, to be seen of all the village folk. She wears all the ornaments given by her fiancé and as many more as she possesses. The religious ceremony is that of the Greek church and may take place in the church or in the home of the bridegroom's father. After its performance the party returns to the home of the bride's parents, where the wedding feast is held. Singing and dancing follow until time to escort the bride to her new home.—New York Tribune.

He Was Very Humble.

The Detroit Free Press tells of a disappointed office seeker who at last obtained a gift through a late won humility. When he arrived at Washington, it was with the idea that he was a distinguished and prominent citizen; but after hanging about and swallowing disappointments, he began to suspect that he was not so very important after all.

Then he thought of home and the means of getting there and sought out Colonel Blank, the passenger agent of a certain railroad.

"I am, colonel," he remarked persuasively, "I want to go home."

"Why don't you go?"

"No money. Can't you give me a pass?"

The colonel stiffened.

"We give passes to nobody," said he.

The countenance of the disappointed candidate brightened with a smile of humility.

"Well, colonel," he pleaded, "then give me one. I'm nobody."

The colonel admitted the force of the argument and gave the pass.

A Roofed Lake.

A roofed lake is certainly a novelty. We read much of them in fiction. Lakes are made to exist in caverns and subterranean passages, but rarely do we hear of such in fact. However, such a thing is a roofed lake does exist, and this is not subterranean. There is a lake at Obdorsk, in Siberia, nine miles wide and 17 miles long. Time was when the rapid evaporation of the water left great salt crystals floating on the surface which gradually came together and formed into one gigantic cake. The water of the lake still further evaporated, but the cake of salt kept its own level, thus forming a roof to the lake. Another lake on the Mangliak peninsula, in the Caspian sea, is similarly roofed with salt crystals which are of such consistency as to permit of man and beast crossing over them with safety.

The Point of the Sword.

In the use of the sword in cavalry fighting the point is considered more deadly, the cut more disabling. The cavalry fight at Lieverne, in Estremadura, April 11, 1812, is an example. The fight lasted but a few minutes, for the British, charging, broke the French formation. The latter had 12 men killed and lost 128 prisoners, all suffering from sword cuts, while the English had nine men killed and 47 wounded. All the killed were slain by the "point" and the wounded practically in every case had received their injuries by the "cut." Napoleon was a great believer in the point. At the battle of Wagram he shouted to his cuirassiers as they passed him at the trot, "No sabering; give point! give point!" and kept plunging his sword into the air to emphasize his orders.

Considerate.

"Considerate!" said the patient, "you have pulled a sound tooth and left the one that ached."

"Never mind, madam," said the dentist, "there will be no extra charge under the circumstances, although a sound tooth is harder to pull."—Boston Transcript.

In the Category of Poetry.

"Being I am associated with the moon," said the office cat, as it tumbled into the editor's wastebasket, "I thought I would drop into poetry."—Philadelphia

IN THE WAKE OF AN ARMY.

Graphic Description Written by a Famous Correspondent

Julian Ralph, the well-known newspaper correspondent, in the course of an article in the London Daily Mail, thus describes part of his trip to Bloemfontein in the wake of Lord Robert's victorious army:

"Presently I saw ahead of me a swarm of vultures soaring in as thick clouds as if they had been moths. As I drew nearer I noticed that the bulk of each one's body was very great. On the ground—where there were two or three waddling about—they seemed even larger. They marked the outer edge of the great and horrid field of carnage. Many dead horses lay on the veldt, and these birds were eating some and perching on the backs of others.

"Foul, nauseous, ugly beastly birds are these. They were to be my constant companions for three days. I was to see hundreds upon hundreds of them, and never once, by day, fail to see them. Yet there were not enough of them to make away with all the food that war had given them. Toward the end of the ride the ghastly birds thinned out, but the dead horses and oxen multiplied.

"Of all the pitiful, heartrending sights I have never seen, none has compared to this view of hundreds upon hundreds of dead and dying horses on this 100 miles of war's promenade. The poor beasts had done no man any harm—in fact, each one had been a man's reliance—and to see them tattered by shell and then ripped open by vultures, before they were dead, was enough to snap the tenderest chords in one's breast. They had not deserved, and could not understand, their horrible ill-luck. For some reason, hundreds had dragged themselves to the main road, and then died either in the track of the wagons or by its side.

"My companion used to turn and look back at these dying horses, to find that they were still straining their heads and eyes after the cart. Then he would say, 'He is looking at us yet. Oh! it makes me ill. Look! he is staring at us like a guilty conscience. What can we do? I wish we did not see such things.'"

"For my part, I would not look behind Heaven knows, it was bad ahead, but the horses stumbled and fell from weakness while the horrible army swept in circles over them, eager to rend their living flesh. Oxen, too, were lying everywhere, with straight, stiff legs silhouetted against the veldt. They looked like the toy animals that children make out of round potatoes with matches for legs.

"Paardeburg battleground is won."

Secrets.

Women can keep secrets. They often keep secret for a long time the fact that they are suffering from drains, inflammation, ulceration, or female weakness. But they can't keep the secret very long, because the hollow eyes, cheeks that have lost their freshness, and the irritability which comes from sorely tried nerves, all conspire to publish the story of suffering. The usual motive for such secrecy, dread of indecent questions and offensive examinations, is removed by Dr. Pierce's methods. Diseases of the womanly organs are perfectly cured by the use of Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. Sick women can consult Dr. R. V. Pierce, Buffalo, N. Y., by letter free.

"Your wonderful medicine, 'Favorite Prescription,' writes Mrs. C. N. Anderson, of Rockbridge Baths, Rockbridge Co., Va. 'I am a God-send to weak and sickly women, restoring good health without subjecting their weak nerves to the shock of an examination. I was all run down in health; could not work but a short time without resting. Was very nervous and had a very poor appetite. I decided to write to Dr. Pierce and state my case, and am thankful that I did, for I received a favorable reply. I took six bottles of 'Favorite Prescription,' one of 'Golden Medical Discovery,' and one vial of 'Pellets,' and I can now work as well as I could before I had taken such. I think Dr. Pierce's medicine is the best in the world for sick and nervous women.'"

SERVICE BUILDING AT THE PAN-AMERICAN EXPOSITION.

Copyright, 1900, by the Pan-American Exposition Co.

The large Service building at the Pan-American Exposition, to be held in Buffalo from May 1 to Nov. 1, 1901, was completed in 32 working days and was the first building erected on the grounds. It is the present home of a large corps of officers and employees having immediate charge of the constructive work of the Exposition. This handsome building is 95 by 145 feet, two stories high. In it are the offices of the director of works, the landscape architect, superintendent of building construction, purchasing agent, chief engineer, mechanical and electrical engineer, with their numerous assistants.

derful to see. It suggests a pandemonium—the wreck of nature by delirium tremens. The earth is all tilted with trenches and the trenches are cluttered with trunks, clothing, shoes, tin, cartridge clips, cartridge wrappings, broken rifles, shelter cloths, physic and spirit bottles, old letters written in Dutch, shells, bullets, wasted food, bags and sacks, harness, tools goodness knows what not. Behind the first trenches stand the ruins of scores of vehicles. Of some that were burned by shells only the ironwork remains. There are buck wagons, ambulances, spiders, Cape carts, gun carriages and covered farm wagons, all broken, torn, dismembered, and often singed by fire.

GERMAN EXPERT PRAISES LORD ROBERTS.

Says That the British Advances on Kroonstad Was a Splendid One.

Berlin, May 18.—The occupation of Kroonstad by Lord Roberts without resistance has caused the great surprise here. The military expert of the Lokal Anzeiger finds an explanation in the fact that many of the Boers have deserted. He says: "Lord Roberts' advance was splendidly executed. It is worthy to be placed beside the Kandahar expedition. The situation is now changed so greatly in favor of the British that the fate of the Transvaal Boers is settled."

President Kruger's movements eastward is interpreted as confirming the rumors of backslings between the Transvaalers and the Free Staters.

At The Central School.

Theriault, St. Francis, Automatic gate for streets crossing railways; H. Toland and R. A. Dunham, Jerseyville, Animal trap; B. D. Wright, Napinka, Fabric winding machine (2); A. A. Williamson, Nelson, Fuse water-proof detonator;

It Was Safe To Cross.

An anxious, nervous-looking woman, followed by a bewhiskered farmer, stepped up to the station-master Bramford, as he was standing on the C. P. R. platform yesterday, and asked: "Has the 7.10 'gone yet?'" "Yes, about ten minutes ago," he replied. "When will the 11.27 be along, then?" "Not for a quite a time yet." "Are there any express before then?" "No." "Any specials?" "No." "Any freight trains?" "No." "Nothing at all?" "No." "Are you quite sure?" "Yes." "Then, Amen, let us cross the track."

To Keep Open.

Dissatisfaction is expressed because some of our leading merchants propose to keep their stores open on the Queen's Birthday, but it may be pointed out that the merchants of Kingston and Belleville are going to do the same thing, and it is a well-known fact that our country visitors like to combine business with pleasure. It would be a good plan to let the country people know that the principal stores will be kept open.

VICTORY FOR BADEN-POWELL.

London, May 17.—A despatch from Lorenzo Marquez dated to-day says that Commandant Kloff (grandson of President Kruger) with a patrol entered Mafeking, Col. Baden-Powell opened fire on the burghers, killing seventeen of them and taking Kloff and 90 of his men prisoners.

London, May 17.—In his hour of weakness and trial Colonel Baden-Powell is showing the ferocious courage with which Britons in a corner have time and time again saved a desperate cause. The Boers have set their heart on Mafeking that they are actually venturing into the den of the wounded but still dangerous lion. As they themselves admit defeat and heavy loss, it cannot longer be doubted that the garrison have beaten off a fierce attack. Fighting men, nourished upon bread and horseflesh soup, have strenuously defended and captured a force of 90 Boers, including the grandson of Kruger himself, who had evidently been seized with so strong a fit of madness that he could not resist the desire to tempt a desperate fate. As the almost ruined garrison feverishly watches the last throw of the dice, so is the Empire watching Mafeking. The God of war holds the balance, and, as He has often allowed valor to assert itself in vain, so in this case may the historical defence of the town on the African veldt end in dust and ashes for the defenders. With relief, "column forty" miles away, perhaps less, three days at the outside, may see the dispersal of the attacking force and one of the proudest moments told of in the story of the British Empire. On the other hand the third day may dawn upon the wearing of sackcloth from Vancouver to Sydney, from New Zealand to the Orkneys, for it may mark the greatest triumph the Boers have won in the

BOERS ADMIT A DEFEAT.

Pretoria Despatches Confirm the Story of a Repulse.

Pretoria, May 18.—An official bulletin announces that the Federal troops stormed and occupied the forts around Mafeking on Saturday morning. The same night the Federals were surrounded, losing, as far as known, seven killed, seventeen wounded and a number taken prisoners. The British casualties are said to have been killed and wounded.

SUSPENSE IN ENGLAND.

Britons are Proud Than Ever of Col. Baden-Powell.

London, May 17.—The closing days of the drama at Mafeking have been marked by intensity of dramatic interest as unexpected as it is out of proportion to the forces engaged. The news that the half-famished garrison was not able to repulse an attack, but to inflict such heavy loss in killed and prisoners, as reported in the despatch from Cape Town announcing the capture of Commandant Kloff, the President's grandson, is almost entirely forgotten. Everyone is thinking of talking of Mafeking, and the latest exploits of its defenders. Rumors continue that the relief of the place has been accomplished, but all official confirmation of the reports was lacking at 1 o'clock this afternoon. There was considerable speculation as to what Col. Baden-Powell would do with his ninety prisoners and whether the victory has not so depleted his force as to render him open to annihilation in the event of another attack by the superior Boer numbers. Lord Roberts' already hears rumors that these have been cut off by the relieving column. According to general opinion news of the termination of the desperate struggle between the besieged and besiegers must reach England before to-morrow.

RELIEF NEAR MAFKING.

Fighting Has Taken Place at Krailanp, Forty Miles Away.

London, May 17, 6 a.m.—There is news to-day of the progress of the relieving column. According to a telegram from Malopo, a British force arrived on Tuesday at Kralanp, about 40 miles south of the besieged town, and was hotly engaged on that day, and at the same time it is announced from Pretoria that the relieving column has been defeated with great loss. On the continent it is apparently taken for granted that the town has already fallen, while, on the other hand, a rumor has reached Lorenzo Marquez to the effect that the relief has been effected, and that Kloff, a grandson of Kruger, is among the prisoners captured by the British.

RUNDLE SWEEPS FORWARD.

The Boers Dissolve Before Him Like Mist Before the Sun.

London, May 17, 4 a.m.—Gen. Rundle is sweeping through the northeastern section of the Free State. The Boers are dissolving before him, and some are surrendering. The main force is assembled between Mafeking and Windberg, but it is without close organization.

STORY OF THE FIGHTING.

Times' Correspondent Tells of the Boer Attack on Mafeking.

London, May 17.—The Times has the following special from Lorenzo Marquez, dated May 15—

There was heavy fighting at Mafeking on Friday and Saturday. A strong force of foreigners under Commandant Vondewick carried by storm the nation township driving the defending force back to the police barracks and burning the huts. There was heavy musketry fire on both sides throughout the day. The assailants found the rocks of the township an ideal cover. According to telegrams from Pretoria on Saturday night fighting was still going on. To-day it is reported that the British lost fifty men killed, while the customary two or three only are announced to have been killed on the Boer side. Information has, however, been received in Portuguese circles to the effect that the Boers suffered a crushing defeat, and

INVADED THE TRANSVAAL.

General Hunter Hosts the British Flag at Christiansia.

London, May 17.—The Express publishes intelligence of the advance of Gen. Hunter along the north bank of the Vaal River. This general has been the first to invade the Transvaal, and he seems to have taken with him nearly his whole division. When he reached Wedgraal, after a twelve miles' march from Fourteen Streams up the course of the Vaal River, he found that the Boers were retreating on Christiansia, which is situated on the river about 25 miles north-east of Fourteen Streams, and he accordingly determined to push on. Outside of Christiansia it was seen that the Boers were on the run, and Gen. Hunter then resolved to make a dash entry into the town and hoist the British flag. A detachment of Fusiliers, under Gen. Barton, was selected for the duty, and it was carried out amid great cheering. This is the first time since the breaking out of the war that a British force of any dimensions has invaded the Transvaal.

SIR J. KITSON'S ANNOUNCEMENT.

He States in the House of Commons that Mafeking is Relieved.

London, May 17.—In the committee room of the House of Commons this morning Sir James Kitson, Liberal, announced that Mafeking had been relieved. The War Office, however, was unable to confirm the announcement.

OCCUPATION OF CHRISTIANA.

London, May 17.—3.33 p.m.—The War Office has received the following despatch from Lord Roberts:—

Kroonstad, May 17.—Hunter has occupied Christiansia without opposition, the enemy having retired to Klerksdorp under the impression that the latter was threatened by a portion of this force from Parys.

Rundle's force was close to Glocos (southwest of Ficksburg), yesterday evening. The country was cleared of the enemy.

The resident commander in Basutoland reports that a number of Boers living in the Ficksburg and Bethlehem districts have applied to him for advice and as to the conditions of surrender. This is very satisfactory.

FRENCH'S CAVALRY IN ACTION.

Mixed Squadron Were Ambushed by the Boers and Defeated.

London, May 17.—The Kroonstad press permits the passage of long despatches dealing with incidents prior to the occupation. It seems that General French's cavalry had one lively fight after crossing the Zand river. A mixed squadron, composed of the Scots Greys, the Inniskillings, Carabiniers and Imperial Horse, took a kopje and dismounted. The Boers suddenly fired from a concealed position, killing many horses and wounding the rest. The Boers then advanced in overwhelming numbers and drove back the squadron, capturing some. The Boers robbed the dead and looted the saddles. Finally a brigade of cavalry drove them off. Further south the Hussars charged the Boers, killing and wounding many stragglers with sabres and pistols.

Lord Roberts' infantry marched 120 miles in seven days. General French marched 30 miles in one day. The Boers were retiring, dragged 32 guns through Kroonstad.

REMAINED TO DRINK RUM.

Characteristic story of the Irish Brigade With the Boers.

London, May 17.—A despatch from Vrededorp, without date, via Lorenzo Marquez, May 16, says:—

"Some American scouts before leaving Kroonstad Sunday morning set fire to the goods sheds after having had the walls with the British residents."

"Hamilton's American scouts have suffered more heavily than any other corps during the war. In the past six weeks but of a force 100 strong, they have lost 37 in killed, wounded or captured. Their storming of the British position at Tobatsberg was grand. They captured Captain Chyrens and six men."

"Mala's cavalry added to their laurels last week, but lost heavily in proportion to the burghers."

"It is believed that Blake's Irish corps, captured at Kroonstad, were ordered to retreat, but remained drinking the rum left by the commissariat."

REFUSAL POLITE AND FIRM.

The Times Says This will be the Reply to the Delegates.

London, May 17.—The Times says: The principal newspapers cannot be accused of injudiciously fostering the expectations of Mr. Wessels and his colleagues. The Sun, which warmed them with its sympathy as long as they were at a distance, feels constrained to uncover the hard truth by assuring them that the United States cannot help them, and that intervention is a dream. The Tribune unkindly reminds them that if they wanted arbitration, as they declare they do, they ought to have said so before, and not after they had chosen the arbitrament of war. Our New York correspondent adds that when Mr. Fisher, who mysteriously observes that he and his colleagues have very large powers, suggests Washington tomorrow and they will meet a more serious disappointment than the candid comments of the newspapers have caused them. The answer of the State department, he declares, is quite ready for them whenever they choose to ask. It is a polite, but incontestable refusal. The rumors of the pro-Boer sympathies of President McKinley are believed to be utterly baseless. He is convinced that the country does not wish him to interfere and also that interference is imprudent and impossible. Mr. Wes-ells fancies he can rouse the country against the Government. Unless the Americans are in a very unusual frame of mind, they will hardly relish attempts to override the action of their elected rulers and their own judgment by appeals which might find echo in the sentiments of the military nations of the European continent.

BULLER REACHES DANNHAUSER.

London, May 17.—2.15 p.m.—The War Office has received the following despatch from Gen. Buller:—

"Dannhauser, May 17.—The second division has reached Dannhauser and I hope that my advance patrols are at Newcastle."

"The fifth division is re-embarked from Elandslaagte to Glenora repairing the railroad. The fourth division is at Sunday River Drift, on the old Newcastle road."

"Several Natal farmers are handing over their arms."

"All reports agree that about 7,000 of the enemy passed north very hurriedly May 14 and 15."

"Methuen has reached a point 12 miles on the Hooper road without seeing the enemy."

A Distinguished Visitor.

At the meeting of King Baldwin Preceptory last night, Right Eminent Sir Knight, A.M.A. Smith of Peterborough, Provincial Prior was present, as were visiting brethren from Port Hope, Picton and Peterborough. After the business of the Chapter and conferring of degrees had been accomplished the brethren sat down to a well prepared spread. Sir Knight W. Webster and S. S. Lazier were chairmen, and acceptably filled their positions. An enjoyable time was spent in social intercourse. Addresses were delivered by a number of the visiting and local brethren, which were interspersed with suitable vocal selections.

60 SPECIALISTS ON THE CASE.

In the ordinary run of medical practice a greater number than this have treated cases of chronic dyspepsia and have failed to cure—but Dr. Von Stan's Pineapple Tablets, 60 in a box at 35 cents each—have made the cure and put to rest the mistaken notion that proprietary remedies are trash, and may help but never heal. These little "specialists" have proven their real merit.

THE WARSAW ANTI-CHICKEN STEALING LEAGUE

Warsaw, the howling, hustling metropolis of East Peterborough, was in an unusual state of excitement last night, the occasion being the regular meeting of the Anti-Chicken Stealing League. A persistent rumor had been circulated on the streets that business of more than ordinary importance was to be transacted, but it was not till the evening papers appeared that the whole truth was known.
Lemon Sour Lowry, the well known magnate and monopolist was to be present and deliver a lecture on "How I became a Millionaire." The synagogue was packed to the doors long before the President, Molasses in January Hicks, appeared, the full insignia of his high office and a two weeks' growth of whiskers adorning his handsome person. There is no truth in the report that he wore a dickerie shirt front.

He stepped up to the front and after carefully dusting the throne with Dago Snider's new white Fedora, introduced the speaker of the evening.

Lemon Sour arose, and when he had cautiously packed a quarter of a pound of peppermint lozengers into his mouth, commenced his address. His voice was in excellent condition, and even when speaking in modulated tones could be heard a bove the huge red and blue necktie which Bro. Whalibone Anderson was wearing.
He commenced by tracing his early struggles, when he was forced to arise before 11 o'clock every morning and work when the cold not very well avoid it, how he and Truthful Kidd, in their ardent thirst for knowledge, would slip away from all boyish games to study Algebra in the attic; how he and Mother Goose Parcels, instead of going off to play Authors, like Bros. Baneyard Dixon, and Whalibone
Anderson, had retired to read Homer
"Who would have thought," he added who, even in his wildest dreams such as Automobile McCracken is now enjoying could have imagined that Mother Goose would ever occupy his present proud position." (Wild cheer by museum. Freak James who happened to have a lucid interval just then.)

The speaker went on reviewing how he had climbed the ladder of success rung by rung till he had met Bro. Petrified Payne, who taught him how to match coppera.
Together with an unsuccessful venture in Warsaw Street Railway stock was the cause of his losing about $500,000. But with undaunted energy he again entered his old business, measuring plank for the corporation.

Bro. Sawdust Calder was by this time so visibly impressed that he commenced moving about uneasily. The speaker noticing this, in a ringing voice called the attention of the club to it by exclaiming "I see that the effect of my words has reached even Bro. Sawdust Calder. Doubtless he is even now deliberating on the golden opportunities, the neglected chances".

(Here Sawdust meekly arose and remarked in a plaintive voice that the speaker had probably never tried to wear a 3 inch celluloid collar with a bolt on the back of his neck.)

"Bolls," said the speaker in freezing tones, "there was Julius Caesar, there was Miserable Gallagher and there was St.
Anastasia the Patron Saint of this League—All these men had bolls, but they knew enough to go home and get their wives to apply a flaxseed poultice to
them."

Having delivered this withering sarcasm he continued his address and when he had finished Douro Mixed Crowe was heard to remark "that it was the happiest moment of his life." Hundreds were moved to tears. Whalibone Anderson's Waterbury, stopped ticking and even Long Suffering Wilson swallowed the Tamarack gum he was chewing.

Bro. Douro Mixed Crowe, who had been eating cloves with great energy during the last half hour arose and announced that with great difficulty and expense he had procured the following priceless relics for the League's Museum.

A medal which had been presented to the President when only 4 years of age (given with his first suit of ready-made clothes).

The pens with which Mother Goose
Parcels and Rudyard Kiplings wrote
"The Absent Minded Beggar."

The first and only cake of soap which Paul Kruger ever owned (damaged very little, probable value 7 cents).

The Original manuscript copy of Bro.
S. Sety-valve Tully's treatise on "How to draw four-aces on your own deal"—a work invaluable to clam-leaders, seacons and used in nearly every first-class Sunday school "to teach the young idea how
"to shoot."

A locket containing Whalibone Anderson's first Moustache.

When he had sat down, Bro. Eccentric Madill who had come from Hall's Glen to sing the closing strictly, began in a beautiful falsetto voice from Webster's Unabridged Dictionary, which he has set to music as far as the letter L. Bro.
Miserable Gallagher, the League Pianist acted as accompanist.

MARRIED MAN SUE
FOR BREACH OF PROMISE.

Pretty Ammanensis Declares That She Was Jilted by M. W. Barrett of Boston

Boston, Mass., May 19.—Harry W.
Barrett, one of the junior members of the firm of Braman, How & Co., the leading hardware manufacturing concern in New England, has just served with papers in a breach of promise suit for $15,000. As Mr. Barrett has been a married man for three years it will be seen that there are complications. The young woman who is bringing the action is Miss Adelaide
M. White, of Beverly.

"I have not seen and have hardly heard of Miss White for three and a half or four years," said Mr. Barrett to-day. "Since I have known her I have married, and in truth I had almost forgotten the fact of her existence when this affair came up today. Of course, I can go into no particulars until I see the bill of specifications, which probably will not come to me for a few days yet."

Miss White, who is a professional amuseur and a very pretty woman,

WANTED--A SMELTER

The Lardeau wanted a Smelter.
Eastern Capitalists wanted a good investment.
They knew the Lardeau to be a good field
And sent an agent to report.
The agent arrived in due course.

The local mine owners and operators wanted that Smelter,
And undertook to show WHY there was a good opportunity for investment
By showing the immense bodies of Ore available for treatment,
And took the Smelter man over the district
To the various good properties.

The third one visited was the ROB ROY MINES! Is that not sufficient evidence of the value of this property? Do Smelter Owners want scenery or rock for the works? If they want ORE why did the local men select the Rob Roy as one of the big reasons why these men should build?

The Smelter is to be built, and the Rob Roy is to supply a lot of Ore for it.

Until we get returns we must still sell shares to complete the work our engineer wants done, and a special issue has been made to meet the requirements. Do you want any shares? $150.00
buys $1000.00 worth of stock. 15 cents per share.

Brutal Row Results in a Probably Fatal
Cutting Affray

Philadelphia, Pa., May 17.—Thomas McConnell, aged 40, of 2032 South Mildred street, is lying in a serious condition in St. Angers' Hospital, as the result of injuries received in a free fight with his son and nephew at his home early yesterday morning.
The two lads, Thomas McConnell, Jr., and Michael Hannigan, were held without bail by Magistrate Eisenbrow yesterday, to await the result of their victim's injuries.

Neither of the trio will tell anything about the origin of the fracas. The police regard it as the sequel of a Saturday night debauch, as they have learned that the men were drunk that night.

McConnell, Sr., struck his son on the head with a poker, and the latter retaliated by attacking him savagely with a razor, inflicting a dozen cuts in his face and neck. McConnell managed to escape from the house and Street Sergeant Myers placed his assailants under arrest.

Pretty Hot Stuff.

Colonel Bob Simmons manages to keep his eyes open by consuming a plentiful
supply of birdseye peppers, which a superintendent of one of his numerous Louisiana plantations sends him weekly. Did you ever eat birdseye? It is a quarter inch in diameter, shaped like a double convex lens, with a black pupil and dark brown iris. The hottest sauce known to man is made of it.

The colonel delights in offering one
to an acquaintance and watching furtively to see the tears come. He tried three on me. I bolted them and smiled,
for there was no present heat. In an hour, after they had scorched the walls
of my stomach and their fierce fire had crept up my esophagus to the roof of my mouth, I was crying as a baby. Quantities of milk but increased the torrification. The throat was a crematory. Water cold as ice scalded. My sufferings lasted a night, and I prayed that the
colonel might never go to as hot a place
as I was.—New York Times.

PETERBOROUGH, MAY 17, 1900

THE EXILE OF SIBERIA.
A very interesting mark of the modern development within the Russian Empire is the recent order of Council looking to the abolishment of that Russian custom most familiar by name to foreigners, penal exile to Siberia. Nothing connected with Russian life has furnished more material for romance than this, and its horrors have been dwelt upon with more or less exaggeration through many generations.

Transportation was maintained in the penal code of many European countries, England included, until within comparatively recent period; and in some cases it was accompanied with servitude relatively as cruel as that of the Russian system. Only the outlying Russian territory to which criminals were transported was particularly cold and dismal and Russian manners and customs retained their typical crueltylander than those of Western Europe.

It is known that there has been in recent years a great amelioration in the treatment of Russian convicts, but the abolition of exile to Siberia now decreed has been brought about not only by considerations of humanity but by economic considerations, and especially by the opening of Siberia to ordinary settlement. The great railway across the continent has been the civilizing agency. Instead of a wilderness, Siberia has become an agricultural country. Farmers are taking up lands and bringing them under cultivation; work in the forests and the mines is undertaken on commercial lines, and the exiles are in the way. The government has therefore determined to confine condemned culprits in prisons to be erected in various districts, instead of sending them away to Siberia.

This is simply following the line taken by other countries long ago and it marks one more step in that natural development that is gradually bringing Russia into fuller accord with the rest of the world. Her vast eastern empire must embrace many phases of civilization foreign to European ideas, but as modern influences increasingly prevail many peculiarities of administration will gradually disappear. There is no more potent civilizer than the locomotive.

The climate of Siberia along the line of the railway is no more rigorous than that of Canada. The road can be kept open throughout the winter quite as easily as the Canadian Pacific. The Imperial Government hopes to see large cities develop out of the wretched, struggling towns that were formerly connected with the rest of the world by tarantasses in summer and sledges in winter. Time will assimilate the old convict population, from the descendants of the political prisoners will rise a new and worthy race. In the veins of many such exiles runs the best blood of Russia.

This act by the young Czar is on a par with the abolition of serfdom by his grandfather.

SALARIES OF ONTARIO SCHOOL TEACHERS.

According to the report of the Minister of Education, the salaries of public school teachers in that enlightened province are decreasing. The average salary of Ontario school teachers last year was only $321 as compared with $324 the year before. This reduction of salaries is set down to neither poverty nor meanness, but is said to be due to the more general employment of women as teachers. Last year there were 5,800 women teaching school in Ontario, an increase of 123, while 2,654 of the teachers were men, a decrease of 36. If a woman can do the work as well as a man she ought to be as well paid. If she cannot do it so well, paid, if she cannot do it so well, it is poor economy for school trustees to engage inferior teachers for the sake of saving a little money on salaries. However, in this, as in other occupations, the law of supply and demand operates. Many women are in some respects better qualified to teach children, especially little children, than men. They are more in sympathy with child nature. But men have generally been found more successful in teaching classes of large boys or in positions of authority at the head of schools, where a number of teachers are employed, although there are exceptions to this rule.

Both men and women usually look at school teaching as merely a temporary occupation. The men commonly regard it as a stepping stone to other professions, while the women look forward to marriage as a release from it. Yet many teachers love their work, and if the remuneration were greater would be glad to devote their lives to it. In the cities and towns some of the teachers are well paid, but in the rural districts the salaries are very low. In some of the poorer districts it is difficult for farmers to pay the taxes required to secure first-class schools, but even in the prosperous sections where the farmers can well afford to pay for the education of their children the salaries are often too low to secure efficient teachers.

Cause of Cancer
Editor Morning Times
Sir,—I have lately read several articles from the English press written by eminent English physicians, relating to the cause of cancer. Two of these articles were written by Cameron and Banks. Both of these men claim that the great increase of this disease in Great Britain is caused by the eating of too much meat. Also I noticed in some of the newspapers of the U. S. A. claimed that cancer in the last decade had doubled from former decades, but have no cause of said increase. Here in Canada we find an increase in this dread disease. Now, how can we reconcile the difference between Canadian large meat eaters and their British cousins? Then again, I have read largely of the European specialists, conferences, who meet annually in Germany to compare notes, and as yet they have given no real cause which produces cancer, but they have given their experiments in the treatment.

Now, Mr. Editor, as I have your permission to write a short article on the cause and why the human race are so afflicted with this terrible malady, and upwards of 60,000 die annually in the U. S. A. and Great Britain.—First cause, predisposition; second cause, coming in contact with that which causes cancer. In the first cause one-twelfth of the human family are predisposed to said disease. This is proved by astronomy and physiology combined; thereby one-twelfth of the race are liable to take cancer, as afore-said. Not all of these do suffer, as they do not come in contact with the second cause, viz., breaking or a tearing of tissue and severing of one or more of the secreting glands causing a leakage thus preventing the carrying out of the functions designed by nature. Always bearing in mind when these injuries occur the out skin are not broken, and in many cases the tissues are not rent, but broken secretions from strains, bruises, jams, and much irritation, as the smoking pipe upon the lip. Some of our very wise men may pooh, pooh, and demur at the causes herein written, and ask for further light, as no doubt many of our doctors have known of cases of children born with cancer. This is quite true as I personally know of three cases of such, and are all now living and were cured in after years; the first was a poor boy born in Ireland by the name of Reilly; the other two were girls, Misses Black Gillies. This proves my practical knowledge of over thirty years of the most careful study of this malady that I am correct, and I further state cancer is not hereditary. Neither the eating of meat nor any other diet causes cancer, as I find more afflicted with cancer of the middle and poorer classes than of the wealthier classes, who often eat and drink richer than the former; as the former class are the bone and sinew of our race, and come in contact with the second cause of that which causes cancer. I believe it behooves every McAllister and scientific physician to use his best endeavors to understand the ultimate cause of cancer, its true nature and radical cure. Humanity demands that every effort and sacrifice should be made to arrest and destroy this tremendous tide of human suffering and death. I would have written more largely upon astronomy and physiology, but the short space allowed in your very popular paper to correspondents is limited. Kindly thank you for this privilege of writing this short account of cancer yours truly,
HENRY EDWARDS.

Interesting News From the Frozen North—The Laws Governing the Salmon Fisheries in Which Canada Is Interested.

Special Despatch to the Times.
Washington May 18.—There is no denial that the Cuban postal scandal is bitter. The United States has been the victim of a plot involving at least half a dozen of the most prominent of them, who had obtained over $100,000 of the island's money. The scandal is so bitter that the United States has been the victim of a plot involving at least half a dozen of the most prominent of them, who had obtained over $100,000 of the island's money. The scandal is so bitter that the United States has been the victim of a plot involving at least half a dozen of the most prominent of them, who had obtained over $100,000 of the island's money.

The Treasury Department has also been considering Alaska and has promulgated a series of regulations governing the salmon fisheries. The regulations are declared to be obstructions which "impede the ascent of salmon to their spawning grounds," and their use is forbidden after January next. It is forbidden to lay any net within one hundred yards of the mouth of either side, or immediately abreast of the mouth, of any river or stream whereby the mouth of the river may be closed when the net is set or hauled. All persons engaged in salmon packing in Alaska, must make detailed annual reports to the Treasury covering such facts as may be required. During the period of inspection of the fisheries by the agent, the person in charge of each fishery visited shall furnish the agent with such information regarding the run of fish, the pack secured, the probable results of the season's work, and such other facts as may be required to afford him a basis for an intelligent preliminary report of the year's business and the state of the fisheries. Each person taking salmon in Alaskan waters must conduct, at or near the fisheries operated by him, a suitable artificial propagating plant produce yearly and place in the natural spawning waters red salmon fry in numbers equal to at least four times the number of the mature fish taken during the preceding fishing season.

A MAD RIDE FOR LIFE

THE STORY OF AN INTREPID HOOSIER
HERO OF 1812.

This Brave Young Teamster Saved a Company of Soldiers by a Fortiora Hope Journey That None of the Regulars Would Attempt.

It was early in the autumn of 1812 that the main body of the army engaged against the British and Indians in the northwest was encamped on the Maumee river not far from the present city of Fort Wayne. The whole country was infested with hostile tribes of the Delaware, Pottawatomie and Miami Indians. They would lie in wait and massacre small detachments of soldiers or a company of emigrants passing through the country.

It was at this time that a small detachment of the army was encamped 25 or 30 miles north of Greenville, O. There were less than 100 officers and men here surrounded by a large force of these hostile tribes acting under orders of the British officers. This detachment of United States soldiers found itself cut off from the main army—in fact, surrounded by Indians. The men knew their capture would result in torture and massacre and that they must either break up into small bodies and so far as possible escape through the lines of the enemy or get a dispatch to the main army, fully 30 miles away.

The officer in command drew up the little force in line and explained the dangerous situation. He then called for a volunteer to attempt the hazardous task of carrying a dispatch to the headquarters of the army. "If I have a man in my command that is willing to take the risk," he said, "let him step forward." As he stood waiting the silence of death seemed to pervade the camp, but not a soldier responded. The officer saw standing within a few steps of him a young teamster not more than 20 years old, small and delicate. He was clad in the usual homespun and had his wagon whip under his arm. The young man removed his hat, bowed respectfully and said, "Captain, give me a good horse, and I will make the attempt."

It was William Crist who spoke. There was the glimmer of steel in his cold, gray eyes as he stood facing the little band of soldiers. The captain extended his hand to the boy and said, "God bless you, my brave fellow." He at once took young Crist to his tent and carefully talked over the dangerous task he was about to undertake. The young man did not falter. He was the embodiment of courage, bravery, heroism, and on the following morning, "at the new day," as he said, he was ready for the journey.

The captain had a spirited young horse, active and accustomed to traveling through brush and swamps, over logs and creeks, and he placed this horse in charge of the boy. The teamster declined the use of a saddle, but asked for a belt, a brace of pistols, a knife and musket. When he mounted the horse and took leave of the officer, the soldiers stood watching him. They considered that the intrepid young hero was simply riding into the jaws of death.

There was no passable road, no mark of civilization on the line that he must travel. The country was a strange one to him. With a cloudless sky above him and unbroken forest in front, he fearlessly took the risk. The Indian trails were guarded and the forests beyond those trails impenetrable. There was, possibly, one chance in a dozen for him to reach the main body of troops, and he took that chance.

He moved off in the gray dawn of early morning, hoping to pass the lines of his dangerous foe unobserved. This he accomplished in doing and took the trail for the Maumee country. The day's journey was uneventful until he came within five miles of the outposts of the army.

It was about 2 o'clock in the afternoon when, riding rapidly along the trail, his eye caught sight of a small band of braves immediately in front of him and effectually blocking his way. They were painted red and yellow, indicating that they were on the warpath. They were all mounted and armed with muskets and, as the young messenger well knew, had in their belts the scalping knife and in their hearts relentless, cruel murder. He knew that to continue along the beaten trail was to court capture, torture and death. Accordingly he guided his horse to the thick woods and as rapidly as possible made his way out from the trail.

The savages soon reached the point where he had turned aside and there discovered the fresh tracks of the young man's horse. An unearthly warwhoop greeted the boy's ears, and he knew that would be the course pursued by the Indians. They would track his horse and follow him. He urged the faithful animal on, but it was not long before he heard his savage foes behind him. He then turned to make his way back, if possible, to the trail, believing that his horse could by its better speed and better power of endurance enable him to escape, but his keen sighted foes had anticipated this movement and had guarded the trail against it. Shots began to sing about him, and he now determined to make his way through the forest. He knew that his horse would jump logs and streams that the ponies would not attempt. He lay first on the horse's back and urged him to his greatest speed. He made him jump great logs that lay in his way, but the foe still kept in sight and from time to time fired on him. In the meantime the savage yell was kept up, and the race became one of life or death.

It was late in the afternoon that the pickets on the outposts of the army saw approaching the utterly exhausted horse and rider. The Indians here abandoned the chase, and young Crist, when he found himself safely within the lines of the United States forces, fell fainting from his horse. Overcome by the loss of blood and exhausted by his long ride, he lay unconscious for hours. This was followed by weeks of suffering from three dreadful wounds he had received in the last half hour of the chase. But he had accomplished his task. In two hours after his arrival 300 brave men started on the trail the young hero had followed and rescued the detachment that so anxiously awaited success. William Crist, the brave and intrepid teamster, had never of steel, the heart of a lion and a god-like soul. For many years he was a familiar figure on the streets of Indianapolis, and many of the older citizens remember him. If the middle west would honor a real hero let it erect a white shaft and inscribe thereon the name of William Crist.

DEATH NOT PAINFUL.

Mortality Rendered Painless by the Workings of Nature.

Death is nearly always painless. Man dies generally from the cessation of the heart's function whatever the cause may have been. The nerve cells may have ceased to act, the muscles may have been worn out, or the heart may have been directly attacked by acute or chronic disease. But in any case want of oxygen is the determining factor, except in the case of poisoning with prussic acid, in which case the whole body is dead before the heart ceases to beat. In every other case the cessation of the heart's action comes first, the general death of the body afterward. Therefore the heart ceases to function consciousness ceases. Even the most awful death known, death by burning, mortality is rendered painless at an early age by suffocation. It is the first moment of experience of the heat that is so terrible. Nature appears to set very real limits to physical torture. Thus, Livingstone, when seized by a lion, tells us that he felt little pain of apprehension, while Dr. Alfred Russel Wallace asserts that the seeming tragedies of animal nature, such as the killing of birds by beasts such as the killing of birds by beasts appear in our imagination.

We see what painful vividness the outward fact, but we do not see the merciful anodyne furnished by nature. So it is at a death bed. The observers see the clammy brow, the grasping for breath, the rigor mortis, sometimes the contorted features—all painful to behold. But, with perhaps the exception of the difficult respiration, the dying man knows nothing of this, and before he had actually expired nature has given him a relief which the dearest friend or most skillful physician could not have imparted. There are also forms of death in which, long before death arrives, the will to live has ceased, the patient resigns himself, and life gradually sinks to a vanishing point. Thus death is physically and psychologically painless.

The Court of the Machinery and Transportation Building of the Pan-American Exposition, which will be held at Buffalo, N. Y., on the Niagara Frontier, during the summer months of the year 1901, presents an interesting treatment of cloister work. The Machinery and Transportation Building itself forms a hollow square, with this Court in its center. It is 200 feet long and 100 feet wide, the east and west ends opening respectively to the great entrances from the Grand Canal and the Court of the Fountains, while the great exhibiting rooms of the Mall side of the building, and the two exhibition rooms and great entrance court from the Court of the Fountains side of the building, lie on either side. Along each side of this Court, and extending the entire length, are roof-covered arcades under which the visitor may find rest on the comfortable benches.

The pool itself is 175 feet long and 27 feet wide. It is placed in the center of the Court. The bank is sodded and planted on all sides, forming a pleasing frame or border effect; the water is low so as to receive the reflection of the growth around the pool. The fountain is an important feature, placed in the center of the pool, and giving life to the scene and freshness to the atmosphere. Throughout the Court are pleasant walks and paths, bordered with low-growing shrubbery and plants, and at intervals at axle-points with the arcades, rare plants are placed in great vases, making a truly architectural landscape effect. The entire scheme gives the effect of an admirable enclosure of a mission cloister, and is planned as one of the many little oases for the refreshment of the weary sightseer. This Building and Court have been designed by Green & Wicks of Buffalo

Old Materials Profitably Used.

DIAMOND DYES

Are The Favorites of All Mat and Rug Makers.

Mrs. P. L. Stanhope, of Victoria, B. C., writes this: "I recently discovered that I had sufficient old materials such as flannel, cloth, yarns and discarded underware stored away from which I could make a couple of fair sized rugs for the floor. I sent to Wells & Richardson Co., Montreal, for two of their handsome rug designs. After they were received, I washed my old materials and colored them with Diamond Dyes to match the shades on the rug patterns. I hooked the two rugs, and they are so handsome that all my friends admire them. The Diamond Dyes are, I think, the best and most reliable for home dyeing. I certainly recommend them to all who make mats and rugs."

QUIT WHITE BREAD.

Could Not Get Strength From It

An Episcopalian minister of Ellenville, N. Y., who is interested not only in the spiritual welfare of his congregation, but in their physical well-being also, says, "I can now do an immense amount of work and feel no fatigue, for the reason that I am using Grape-Nuts breakfast food and have quit coffee entirely and am using Postum Food-Coffee."

"Myself and family are all greatly improved in health. We have largely abandoned the use of white bread. Upwards of twenty-five persons have changed their diet, on my recommendation. It is gladly given, because I know, from personal experience, whereof I speak."

It is a well-known fact that white bread is almost entirely composed of starch and this is difficult of digestion by many people, particularly those who have weak intestinal digestion. The result of the use of much white bread is a lack of brain and nervous power to do mental work and it also creates intestinal "troubles," because the excess of starch ferments in the intestines and makes the conditions right for the growth and microbes; whereas Grape-Nuts breakfast food contains the needed starch, but in a predigested form. That is, it is transformed into grape sugar in the process of manufacture, and delivered in the packages, ready cooked, and in such shape that it is immediately assimilated without hard work of the digestive organs.

The food also contains the delicate particles of phosphate of potash which, combined with albumen, is used by nature to make the gray matter that must be in the cells of the brain and the nerve centers throughout the body, in order to give strength and ability to stand long and continuous work. Both the Postum Food-Coffee and Grape-Nuts are sold by all first-class grocers.

"A Good Paymaster Starts Not At Assurances."

There is one good paymaster who is around on time, gives full value, and never fails in his duty. It is your privilege to select him, and his name is pure, wholesome blood. This paymaster makes the rounds of the body, visits brain, stomach, kidneys, liver, heart and head alike. Hood's Sarsaparilla acts as guarantor that this paymaster will do his duty.

If the blood is impure, it cannot do its duty, and you are the sufferer,—but you need not be. Hood's Sarsaparilla purifies, vitalizes and enriches the blood. It never disappoints.

Scrofula.—"An abscess on my hip was lanced and never healed. Another broke out on the other hip and the next year three more appeared. I took Hood's Sarsaparilla and it helped me. Since taking six bottles of the medicine I have not been troubled, and previous to this treatment one of the eruptions had discharged for seven years." Mrs. FRANKLIN H. TEND, Freeport, N. S.

After the Grip.—"Suffered from weakness after the grip. Began taking Hood's Sarsaparilla and found it as recommended. It relieved my son of rheumatism." Mrs. R. M. J. ZEPHER, Ont.

Blood Poison.—"Was troubled with blood poison and pain in my heart. Hood's Sarsaparilla by advice of a friend and it gave me relief." Mrs. LUCY J. COOK, Windsor, N. S.

Rheumatism.—"Pains in my limbs, finally settled in my back. I was obliged to stop work. My blood was poor and I did not have any appetite. I could not sleep nights. I tried Hood's Sarsaparilla and Hood's Pills and these medicines made me a well man. Others of my family have taken Hood's Sarsaparilla after the grip with good results." G. B. KARR, South Waterville, N. S.

Our Reports Reliable

The report of the fall of Maelkling, which were placarded up street Thursday, were like most of the reports which come from the United States, utterly untrue. The Times was kept busy answering enquiries regarding it. When Maelkling was in London, so it was known at the Times office as quickly as it reached Toronto and Montreal, and was promptly bulletined. The Times does not deal in sensational reports, and confirms its announcements regarding the war, almost exclusively to matter issued by the war office in London. So that if you see it in the Times it is so.

BEHOLD THE MAN!

Evangelist Gell's Bible Reading in Baptist Church Yesterday Afternoon.

Notwithstanding the threatening weather there was a large attendance at the afternoon meeting in the Murray street Baptist church yesterday afternoon. After a brief session of spiritual song, Mr. Gell gave a very forcible Bible reading on "Behold the Man," John 19. 5. No matter where the emphasis was put, in either of the three words, the same truth was told. Just as the serpent in the wilderness, said he, healed all who looked, without any knowledge of the cure, so it did not require a theological training to look to Jesus and be saved.

The great thing was to look for yourself. Just as the thing on the cross looked for himself, so every sinner should look and be saved. In looking, it was well to remember that Christ was absolutely true to look to. He was superior to the Bible and gave it its value. Here was where Christ differed from Mahomet, Buddha and other teachers. He lived the truth and they taught it. They taught and failed to live up to their own teaching.

Beloved the man himself. He was greater than Solomon, and all the other wise men; greater than Abraham and all the patriarchs, than Moses and all the prophets, yes than angels or archangels. We need to stand with the disciples on the Mount of Transfiguration and allow Moses and Elias fade away and see Jesus only. Christ was absolutely perfect, and only as we beheld the Christ, who came to call sinners to repentance, to give strength and grace to the weak, to sympathize with the sorrowing, and encourage the weary will our doubts give place to faith and trust in the personal Christ, and the better we know Him, the more we will love him. Behold Him as He calls the young girl and boy young He calls the young girl to life behold Him as He raises the son to the poor woman of Naim. Behold Him on the cross; yes anywhere, and He was always good.

Behold Him as He dies and is buried. As He rises and ascends to the Father's right hand, where He liveth to make intercession for us.

THE EVENING SERVICE.

"Prepare to Meet Thy God." Amos 4. 12, was the text Evangelist Gell addressed the large audience at St. Paul's Presbyterian Church from last evening. His theme was the resurrection, and in commencing the address he called attention to the fact that some miracles prepared by Christ were "partnership" miracles, requiring the co-operation of the one healed, such as the blind man whose eyes He anointed with clay and sent to wash in the Pool of Siloam. Again as in the case of the resurrection of Lazarus, Christ Himself performed the miracle, and the man cannot help but obey. It was no such thing, Christ was now speaking in "the still small voice," but in the resurrection He would speak with a loud voice, and all that were in the graves would hear the voice of the Son of God to come forth. They would have to obey. Men might dodge the javelin of the enemy as David did. They might escape the fire of Judgment from Heaven as Lot, when Sodom was destroyed. They might successfully evade the common danger as when a lion chased a man, he climbs a tree, but they cannot escape the commanding voice of the Son of God.

Where we cannot escape a thing, and know it to be on this way, we generally prepare for it. Now no one can escape it. All that are in the graves shall come forth. No one shall be missed. Some cannot hear God's voice to-day because they have been so long among the devil's noise that their ears have become dull. Where shall you be buried? The voice of God in the beginning called the world into existence. The same irresistible voice shall call the dead forth. The voice shall call the dead forth. The tomb, will call the sinner, no matter where or how deeply buried. They shall come forth; they that have done good to the resurrection of life, but they that have done evil to the resurrection of damnation. What a scene it will be! Adam, Noah and Abraham, the patriarchs, the prophets, the tiny children, the ages—all that are in the graves shall come forth. Judas, the rich young ruler, the drunkard and liar, the abominable, shall come forth to damnation.

The resurrection would make some wonderful revolutions. Just as a landfall of seeds look alike until they are planted and grown, and the trees are revealed, so it would be in the resurrection. Here men look much alike, the line of difference is scarcely perceptible. But in the resurrection the difference would become important, the wheat and the tare would be separated and the tares burned with an unquenchable fire. He closed his eloquent address with an earnest appeal to all present to prepare for that great meeting at the resurrection by turning to Christ, and trusting in Him as a Saviour.

Mr. Gell will give an address this afternoon at 8 o'clock in the Murray street Baptist church on "The Holy Spirit," and in the evening will address a mass meeting in St. Paul's Presbyterian church at 8 o'clock.

THE BOER FORCE AROUND MAFeking WITH GUNS CAPTURED BY BRITISH!

Foreign Office Said to be in Receipt of Message
From Kruger Couched in Humble Strain Proposing Terms of Peace.

DEWET OFFERS TO SURRENDER CONDITIONALLY.

Roberts Has Not Yet Received Official Intimation of the Relief of Mafeking Although Native Runners State Relief Has Been Effected—Gen. Methuen Captures Quantities of Ammunition.

London, May 21. A despatch to the Daily Mail from Lorenzo Marques dated Sunday says:—
"On Thursday the entire Boer force around Mafeking including the guns were captured by the British."

London, May 20, 11.55 p.m. The War Office has announced that Lord Roberts has not yet received official information of the relief of Mafeking.

London, May 21. A special despatch from Koonstad says that General Dewet has sent word that he is prepared to surrender conditionally with his entire command.

London, May 21, 3.10 p.m. The following is the lead of Lord Roberts' despatch:—Koonstad, May 20 (3 p.m.)—No official information has yet been received, but runners state that the relief of Mafeking has been effected.

"Runners reports having occupied Dr. Roberts' Flat, Trommel and Choolan, the enemy falling back on Senokal and Ficksburg."

"Fifty rifles and 30,000 rounds were surrendered by the Free Staters to a Battalion of Yeomanry working along the telegraph line, from Doshof to Bloemfontein."

"A field cornet and eighty-six burghers surrendered at Doshof yesterday. While at Koonstad, Methuen secured 250 rifles and between 400,000 and 500,000 rounds."

London, May 21. It now appears that the Dewet, who offered to surrender with 1,000 men, was not the well known General Dewet, but Commandant Dewet. He stated that his men should be allowed to return to their farms.

Lord Roberts replied that the surrender must be unconditional.

London, May 21, 3.10 p.m. Displayed in the most conspicuous style in the Daily Express is the dominant war news of the morning:—"We have the best reason for saying that in the last twenty-four hours a telegram has been received at the Foreign Office, addressed personally to the Prime Minister from President Kruger proposing terms of peace."

"The exact terms of the message cannot be stated, but we believe it is couched in an exceedingly humble strain."

"It is inconceivable of course that Lord Salisbury can have sent any reply except the one that stands ready on the lip of every Briton—"unconditional surrender."

The boisterous rejoicing over the news from Mafeking have become quiet in parts of London, Aberdeen and elsewhere in the United Kingdom. In the Finchy districts of suburban London, a mob stoned a station master's house and smashed the windows of a draper's shop, setting the building on fire also. Whether by accident or design is not yet known. The police are investigating. The house of a Boer sympathizer at Haslemere was attacked by a large crowd and the windows were shattered. The police chased the mob, and were greeted with a shower of decayed eggs. Numerous arrests were made and the police reserve were called out.

Rioting took place from 7 to 10 o'clock Saturday evening around a hall where a "Stop the War" meeting was being addressed by Mr. Cronwright-Schreiber, husband of Olive Schreier. A crowd of students and others tried to storm the hall and to break down the doors. The foot police were unable to cope with the disturbers and sent for the mounted police, who made some head-way with the crowd, but free fights occurred between the supporters of the meeting and the crowd and the Royal Infantry nearby was kept busy dressing the wounds of combatants caused by stones, bricks, and clubs. A number of arrests were made, and later the chief magistrate ordered the chief constable to call out the militia. The Gordon Highlanders from the castle barracks, then cleared the streets.

DATE OF THE RELIEF.
Lorenzo Marques, May 19.—Mafeking was relieved on Wednesday, May 16th.

courtesy of the press, professing to give official news from Lorenzo Marques to the effect that Mafeking has been relieved. We have no official news at the War Office, nor could we receive it as soon as it could arrive through other channels. Therefore, the fact that we have not got it neither proves nor disproves the truth of the information. I think we have good reason to believe that it may be true."

George Wyndham, Parliamentary Under-Secretary for War, replying to several members of the House who had privately interrogated him, said:—
"Although the Government has nothing, I am disposed to believe the Boer bulletins. It may be to-morrow, and perhaps Monday, before the Government would get despatches from our military commanders, even if the siege were raised some days ago, as the news would need to be conveyed over a very long distance by passenger on horseback, whereas the enemy would probably be able to avail themselves of telegraphic communication."

The London papers, as might be expected, are practically devoted to Mafeking, retelling the tale of the seven months' siege, and anecdotes of Colonel Baden-Powell, whose portrait appears everywhere. Though there is absolutely no official confirmation of the news of the relief of the town, it is implicitly believed in all quarters not excepting official circles.

PRINCE RECEIVES THE NEWS.

Wonderful Scenes at Convent Garden Theatre Last Night.

London, Saturday, May 19.—There was a wonderful scene at the opera at Convent Garden theatre when the relief of Mafeking was made known. After the second act of "Lohengrin," the Prince and Princess of Wales, the Duke of York, the Duchess of Fife, the King of Sweden and Norway, and Princess Victoria were present. The news apparently emanated from the Prince of Wales, but the house was quiet until the information reached the gallery. The audience then broke into a roar of applause, and the Prince and Princess rose to their feet, and the King and Queen joined them. The scene terminated with roars and cheers of jubilation.

THREE COMMANDANTS TAKEN.

Another Version of the Story Told Yesterday by Roberts.

Koonstad, May 19.—General Hutton, with his mounted infantry, today made a dash upon Bothaville and captured three commandants, and nineteen other prisoners, mostly Zaps.

The Colt machine gun section, commanded by Attorney, has arrived here. Owing to the derailing of two trains at the Vet River, progress toward the completion of the railway will be delayed for some days.

The above is probably another version of the capture reported by Lord Roberts yesterday.

TO EXTEND VOLUNTEER ACT.

Citizens Soldiers in England May Have to Serve in Any Emergency.

London, May 19.—The Marquis of Londondown has introduced a bill to extend the powers of the Volunteer Act, by providing that Volunteers may be mobilized in any great emergency, instead of only to repel actual invasion.

ENTHUSIASM INCREASES.

London is still in Delirium of Joy About Mafeking.

London, May 19.—There had been no interruption up till noon today of London's celebrations of the British success in South Africa; in fact the enthusiasm increases as the day proceeds. The omnibuses are crowded with men and women waving flags, and every cab, cart and carriage and nearly every house is decorated. Everyone from the new boys in the street to the most dignified business man is wearing a rosette of the British colors. Traffic is practically suspended, and great crowds surround the Mansion House and all the public buildings, shouting and cheering.

Lady Georgiana Curzon this morning telegraphed her congratulations to Col. Baden-Powell and to her sister, Lady Sarah Wilson. She informed Colonel Baden-Powell that the fund for Mafeking, for which she had made an urgent appeal on May 13, already amounted to £7,000.

AN APPEAL FOR PEACE.

International Peace Bureau Interferes in the War.

Berne, Switzerland, May 19.—The committee of the International Peace Bureau has decided to make a final appeal to the twenty-five powers who are signers of the convention adopted by the League of Nations in favor of the restoration of peace in South Africa. The committee calls attention to the clause of the convention for the peaceful settlement of international conflicts, by the terms of which the signatory powers agreed to use all efforts for the settlement. The committee declares an offer of mediation cannot be considered by Great Britain as an unfriendly act.

TORONTO SOLDIER KILLED.

Patrick O'Reilly Loses His Life in South Africa.

Hamilton, Ont., May 19.—Major J. E. O'Reilly, Master in Chancery, received a private telegram to-day from South Africa, concurring with him on the death of his son, Patrick O'Reilly, who was killed. This was the first intimation received here of the death of Mr. O'Reilly, who was a member of "E" Battery, and was living in Toronto at the time he enlisted. The deceased soldier, who was about 23 years of age, was one of Hamilton's most popular young men, and when living here took an active part in cricket and other sports.

LORD MAYOR'S TELEGRAM.

He Cables Baden-Powell Offering Money for the Garrison.

London, May 18.—The Lord Mayor has cabled congratulations to Col. Baden-Powell. In his despatch he says:—"Cable me what money is wanted for the needs of the garrison and I will contribute after long privations."

IRISH AMERICAN CUT UP.

They were Deservedly Decimated at Mafeking and Koonstad.

Cape Town, May 18.—The Argus says that eighty of Kioff's patrol were killed and that the Irish-American brigade was greatly cut up at Mafeking and Koonstad. The Boers are turning against the French and Germans.

EIGHTY GERMANS KILLED.

They Perished in the Recent Assault on Mafeking.

London, Saturday, May 18.—A despatch from the Daily News from Lorenzo Marques, dated Friday, says that the reports of the defeat of the Boers at Mafeking have been confirmed. Eighty of the German corps were killed.

The despatch adds that passengers report that the Irish-American ambulance corps is now fighting with the Boers. The members were cut up at Koonstad, only a few escaping. The Boers are preparing to retire to Lydenburg.

RAILWAY PATH IS BARRED.

Laing's Nek Tunnel Totally Destroyed with Dynamite.

Volskrust, on the Transvaal Border, May 17, via Lorenzo Marques, May 18, 8 p.m.—The large tunnel at Laing's Nek, which was 2,213 feet long, and which afforded the only means of railway communication between Natal and the Transvaal has just been completely destroyed by the Boers, who blew it up with dynamite.

A very large quantity of the explosive was used, and its effect was terrific. The shock was felt for a great distance from the tunnel, which is now completely choked up from end to end with huge masses of earth and rock, which will require months and engineering skill to remove.

All the commandos are occupying fine strategic position, and feel confident that they can easily repel any attempt by Gen. Buller to enter the Transvaal by way of Laing's Nek.

DESTRUCTION IS IMMINENT.

Johannesburg Mines will be Destroyed by the Boers.

London, Saturday, May 19.—Winston Churchill, the correspondent of the Morning Post at Koonstad, dated his despatch May 17, says that the principal mines at Johannesburg have been prepared for destruction. The blowing of them up has been deferred until the British cross the Vaal river.

MEMORIAL SEIGE OF HISTORY.

Mafeking Comes Third in Length Among Those Mentioned.

It will be interesting to recall the length of the historical sieges of comparatively recent times. Khartoum was besieged for 311 days, Sebastopol for 327 days, Paris for 197 days, Kimberley 123 days, Ladysmith 119 days, Pleven 94 days, Lucknow 86 days, Saragossa 82 days, Cavendish and Badajoz 21 days and finally Mafeking 213 days. Mafeking comes, therefore in this list third in length of duration of investment.

BRITAIN WILL BE READY.

In Case of an Entanglement Over Affairs in the Far East.

New York, May 19.—The Post's London correspondent cables to-day:—
"Even though the British Government takes no active offence at Russia's defiance of the treaties in Korea, they are alive to the gravity of England's foreign relations generally in the Far East, Mexico, and West Africa. Naval manœuvres this year are to be on a particularly impressive scale, and will synchronize, whether designed or not, with French naval manœuvres and so demonstrate Africa's mastery of seas."

A Sheffield correspondent says that the great gunmaking house of Vickers has been commissioned to turn out as many guns as possible, and as fast as possible, the half-finished ordnance for Japanese and other Governments being put on one side.

The gravity of the situation, on the Gold Coast is evinced by the enormous quantities of war material being sent out by every steamer. It is stated orders have been placed during the last few days for more than two million cartridges, besides other warlike stores. It is, moreover, hinted that the Lords of the Admiralty visited the smokeless coal mines of South Wales this other day, preparatory to their departure, so that Russia and France may be debarrued from buying further supplies there. England in a word, is preparing for whatever may happen.

REV. MR. GEIL'S FAREWELL.

He Concludes His Series of Meetings Last Night in St. Paul's Church.

Last night Rev. Mr. Geil completed his series of meetings extending over a period of ten days, in Peterborough. St. Paul's church was crowded to the doors, many having been unable to get seats.

The meeting was briefly addressed by Rev. Mr. Bastow, of the Murray street Baptist church, who explained the nature of Mr. Geil's work, and what the thank offering, which was to be taken up, was for. Mr. Geil gave his services free, any funds that are raised going into the hands of Mr. Frank Matthews, the local treasurer of the fund, who will forward it to the general treasurer at New York, where it will be taken care of, and will be used in defraying Mr. Geil's expenses on an extended evangelization tour to foreign countries.

Mr. Geil gave an eloquent and impassioned address on the subject of "Gloom in Heaven." He spoke of this work, and how it had been blessed by God in Peterborough. Scores had been brought to Christ, and many more were anxious to be saved. He spoke eloquently of a mother's love and influence for good over her children, and attributed his success altogether to the prayers of a saintly mother. He pleaded with his hearers to take a seat at the Lord's table, which reached from earth to heaven, and at which "there is room."

Hundreds remained to the after meeting. That Mr. Geil's work in Peterborough has been more than usually fruitful will deny.

JAPAN WILL NOT QUARREL.

The National Enquirer is in an Attenuated Condition.

New York, May 19.—A despatch to the Herald from Yokohama says:—
"The best informed people are of the opinion that, although Japan and Russia may squabble over points of strategic advantage, these differences will not for a long time lead to war, and that Korea will be the buffer State between the two powers for years, and that the only chance of Japan being pushed into war is the possible approaching financial crisis."

It is reported that there is an enormous deficit in the budget this year, which, it is reported, will be $40,000,000. Just where the money is coming from to meet current expenses for the army and navy is the question of the day.

HATCHED IN NEW YORK.

The Fenian Plot to Destroy the Welland Canal Leaked.

New York, May 18.—With reference to the statement of Inspector John W. Murray, of the Canadian Secret Service, that the plot to blow up the Welland canal had been hatched in New York, Captain McCuskey, of the Detective Bureau, said to-day that he had done so; and as a result believed the conclusions of Inspector Murray correct. He asserted, however, that he had been able to get the Fenians out of the city, and that Na-Guel had been a party to the attempt. Just what his detectives ascertained as to the movements here of (Walsh) and Nolin, two of the men now under arrest at Thorold, Ontario he would not say; that was "police business." It is known that Canadian detectives have been in this city working with the local men in the case, and that the investigation, which is not yet finished, has taken a wide scope, extending a considerable distance from New York.

LAKEFIELD CEMENT WORKS.

Public Meeting in Lakefield Endorses the Scheme—Speakers Made.

A second public meeting was held in the Town Hall on Thursday evening, 17th inst., for the further discussion of the proposals of the promoters of the Cement Works Co.

The Reeve again occupied the chair and there was a large attendance of ratepayers.

It was stated that a full discussion of the agreement and by-law had taken place during the afternoon between the promoters and the village council who were assisted in their deliberations by the village solicitor Mr. Dumble. Considerable changes had been made in the original draft agreement and Mr. Dumble had the documents in hand to prepare them for publication.

The first speaker was Mr. Braverman of Syracuse N. Y., an expert Cement Manufacturer who has authorized for a large block of stock in the new company.

He stated that he was personally in favor of locating the works as near as possible to the source of power and the supply of marl but that he had consented to the application being made to the village for aid to locate within the limits of the superior social advantages to be gained by the employees. The difference in the haul of the marl would be 1-1/4 miles and extra cost would be incurred for transmission of power.

The consumption of Portland Cement was increasing very rapidly, the output in the U. S., having increased from 4,000,000 bbls. in 1884 to 12,000,000 bbls in 1894.

Mr. Smith, President of the Owen Sound Chair factory employing some 600 hands, had been induced to visit Lakefield by the enthusiastic account received from Mr. Kiburn of its advantages and while not disposed to make any statement as to the meeting that the establishment of a large industry employing only adult male labor had a tendency to attract to the same locality other industries which relied more upon women and younger people for their help.

Mr. Butcher's manager of the Shallow Lake Cement Works was also present, but excused himself from addressing the meeting on the ground that making cement and not speeches was his forte.

Councillor Fraser in supporting the scheme advocated the sending of a deputation representing all classes of the community to view the works at Owen Sound and report to the voters on their return. The suggestion met with much approval and a cordial invitation to such a deputation was given by Messrs. Kiburn & Esch, Mr. & Messrs. Lillier, Harper, Galvin and spoke favoring the acquisition of the industry.

Mr. Bell was not satisfied with the information before the meeting as to the cost to the ratepayers and the guarantees offered.

The Reeve explained that the fullest information would shortly be before the citizens in print and that it would be found that the council had taken the greatest care to safeguard the interests of the village.

Some question having been raised as to the permanent of the industry Mr. Kiburn pointed out that the gentlemen present associated with himself had subscribed $100,000 of the capital of the company was fully organized, their power and materials and freight rates were arranged for and terms for machinery advertised for, which were an indication that the promoters at least were satisfied that the prospects were good for permanency and profit and that the one thing that was still in doubt was the location of the works, and that was in the hands of the people of Lakefield to decide.

A CLOSE SHAVE.

Nearly a Fatality at the Grand Trunk Yesterday.

Yesterday afternoon while Mrs. Thomas Hooper or north Monaghan, mother of the Thos. Hooper, confecturer, town, was driving in apheon into town. She had the closest possible shave of being killed or severely injured that any one could have. She was in the act of crossing the Grand Trunk track on Charlotte street, when a heavy freight, train, drawn by two engines came along. Two men nearly happened to see the danger, for the lady seemed dazed and tried to pass in front of the train. These men jumped and instantly threw the horse back, averting what would certainly have been a serious accident.

It is time steps were taken by the town to replace the gates at this place, similar to railway crossings in the city.

Mr. Thomas Cahill Suddenly Stricken With Serious Illness.

We very much regret to learn that Mr. Thomas Cahill, one of our most prominent and esteemed citizens, was taken suddenly ill on Saturday night with pneumonia. Physicians were soon at his bedside, and everything possible was done for him. He was slightly easier last evening, but his condition is considered very serious.

Mr. Cahill has been in rather poor health for some months, but lately appeared to be brighter and better. We join his many friends in the hope that he will soon recover.

Those Britons in South Africa can get over a great deal of ground in a day—with the Boers leading.

It is about time Oom Paul was picked out his future residence in St. Helena.

These labor troubles in Toronto and elsewhere at a time when the country is so prosperous are certainly in the nature of a striking contrast.

Their mobility has always been a strong point with the Boers, and it is well for them. They need it now.

BRIDE-ELECT ENDS HER LIFE.

Driven to Desperation by a Cruel Letter From an Unknown Source.

Special Despatch to the Times.
Plainfield, May 19.—Martha Smith, aged 25, a domestic in the employ of Mrs. Aaron M. Powell, was found dead in the woods in the Watchdog Mountains this forenoon, with an empty carbolic acid bottle beside her and every indication of her having committed suicide. She had been missing from home since yesterday afternoon. She was to have been married to-morrow to Thomas Washington, of this city, and the two had spent Sunday evening talking over their plans for the wedding, which included a trip to Virginia, to their former home. In her pocket was a telegram from her sister in New York, stating that she would be here to attend the wedding. There was also a letter which read: "Mr. Washington: Your special letter came to-day. It is all right, but you ought to have told me before."

The girl had received a letter purporting to have come from Washington, stating that he was already married. Washington denies having sent it and says he is not married. He says the girl was inclined to be jealous and that a rival of his had been making trouble for him.

WOMAN SOLD BY AUCTION.

Slavery Revived in the Very Heart of a Texas City.

Galveston, May 19.—A woman known as Margaret Connette was sold at auction within a block of the federal building here for $40. The police and federal authorities are searching for the persons involved. The woman is said to have been imported from Belgium together with a lot of other Belgians and French women, and was under contract to the man who sold her.

United States Immigrant Inspector Levy is working on the case.

1,000 Feet in the Air Clinging to a Rope.

The extraordinary spectacle of a boy soaring in the air 1,000 feet above the earth and kept from a fall to certain death simply by his grasp on a small rope was witnessed by a large crowd which gathered to see a balloon ascension and parachute act at Potteryville, Pa., the other day. The airship was made ready and the balloonist had the anchor ropes cut. The balloon darted upward and with it carried three boys entangled in a rope. Two of the boys got out and dropped to earth safely, but the other clung to a rope. When up 1,000 feet the hot air in the balloon became exhausted and it began to sink. The aeronaut was directly beneath the swooping boy and he, by encouragement, and threats induced the lad to cling to the rope until the airship dropped safely into a ploughed field. Both were much exhausted, but unharmed.

A Pen Picture.

A thief broke into a large mansion early the other morning and found himself in a music-room. Hearing footsteps approaching he hid behind a screen. From 7 to 8 o'clock the eldest daughter had a lesson on the piano. From 8 to 9 the second daughter took a singing lesson. From 9 to 10 the eldest son had a violin lesson. From 10 to 11 o'clock the other son had a lesson on the flute. At 11 all the brothers and sisters assembled and studied an ear-splitting piece for piano violin flute and voice. The thief staggered out from behind the screen at 11.30, and falling at their feet, cried: "For mercy's sake have me locked up, or give me a rest!"

A coroner's jury has acquitted the Toronto boy who shot and killed his father, on the ground that the boy merely intended to frighten his father. Without referring particularly to this Toronto case we might mention that people who undertake to frighten others with loaded guns are dangerous fools to be at large.

Short Story of the Day

"IN THE NICK OF TIME."

"But I may count on you!" Tom asked. "You know you promised." "Yes," I replied, I promised, and I'll keep my promise. I'll be your best man. Not that I wouldn't like to get out of it," I went on; "but you insist, and I suppose that—"

"Oh, come now," said Tom, "don't go in for cynicism; that's cheap. Of course, I'm willing to admit from your point of view, perhaps, Dorothy Melton may have treated you badly enough, but I wouldn't crush the whole sex, and rail at matrimony, and all that. You'll get over it in time, you know."

Tom is an old friend, and allows himself liberties. I kept my head, and replied calmly.

"I am not cynical, and I'm not 'railing' at matrimony. Moreover that little affair with the young woman you mentioned, which I have quite forgotten—"

Tom smiled in a peculiar trying manner.

"Which I have entirely forgotten—"

I repeated.

"And will forget anew every day you live," said Tom.

"Has had nothing whatever to do with my determination to devote myself entirely to my profession. I have already frittered away entirely too much of my life on what we are pleased to call 'society.' But of course I'll keep my promise to you."

"Now, look here, old man," Tom began, but he saw, I suppose, something in my face which warned him. At any rate, he laughed, and shrugged his shoulders, and then said:

"Well, I'll count on you for best man. June 7 is the day, and I hope you won't find it such an awful bore as you seem to expect."

The marriage was to come off at Riverton, and I congratulated myself that the guests, with one or two exceptions, would be Riverton folk whom I did not know.

I could do my duty by Tom, take a last farewell of Riverton society, and then settle down for good upon the career which I fondly hoped would end upon the supreme bench. I would work hard work hard. Dorothy Melton, with whom I quarrelled six months ago, should never think that my life, or anything of that sort, for she didn't. She had simply revealed to me the fickleness of her sex, and brought me to a realization that a career, after all, is the only thing that can really satisfy a man worth anything.

As the time of Tom's wedding approached I wrote him that I would run down to Riverton 24 hours in advance in order to attend to all the thousand and one duties which devolve upon the best man, but at the last moment my one really good client, a man rich and cranky, succeeded in getting so hopelessly involved in an injurious suit that nothing but immediate and earnest personal attention could keep him from going to jail for contempt of court. I saved him from that ignominy, but only after spending the entire morning of the wedding day in court, and barely caught the last train by which I could reach Riverton in time for the ceremony. Tom and his friends would have to look after the details of the wedding, which I was compelled to neglect.

I had forgotten that Uncle William Clarkson lived in Riverton or I might have been prepared for him, but before the train had fairly stopped, Riverton Uncle William was by my side, grasping my hand and reaching for my bag. "Here you are at last," he was saying. "I've been at every train that came in to-day. You've got to go up to the house with me and get a little snack of something to eat before the wedding."

"But, Tom—" I interposed.

"Oh, that's all right," said Uncle William. "I've arranged it all with your friend Tom, and I'll have you at Christ Church in plenty of time for the wedding. So come on; your aunt's waiting for you."

Really, what could I do? I looked about helplessly, hoping that Tom or some of his friends would appear and lay claim to me, but Uncle William had evidently impressed upon them that he was going to have his own way with me and they came not.

Of course, I should of been very glad to dine with Uncle William and Aunt Margaret, but when a fellow is going to be best man at his best friend's wedding and has only two hours and a half before the ceremony, he is not exactly in the mood for visiting even his nearest and dearest relatives. I tried to say something of the kind to Uncle William, but he retorted:

"Oh, phaw, now! There ain't a thing to do, and what's the use of you going to the hotel or to one of Tom's friends' houses, where they are already running over with company? No use at all. Your Aunt Margaret will give you a nice little dinner right away; you can get on your wedding togs and get to the church in plenty of time without any of the fuming and fussing the others will go through. There's a phone in the house; you can let Tom know you're here and that's all that's necessary."

I remembered that I did not especially care to meet more people than was necessary, but still it was with some misgiving that I followed my chipper, and I am afraid somewhat officious, uncle to his new town house. At 5 o'clock I found myself in Aunt Margaret's front parlor.

Uncle William called up Tom by telephone, and after a few minutes' chat with him I felt somewhat reassured. Dinner was announced very early, and was soon over. As the clock chimed 6 I went upstairs to make a hurried toilet. But where was my bag? I hurried downstairs again and put the question to Uncle William.

"By jove!" he explained. "We must have left it at the station."

He hurried down town to fetch the bag, promising to return "before you know I'm gone" but the minutes slipped away, and the carriage drove up to the gate before he got back. He finally came, however.

"Here you are," he said, as he handed me the bag. "Now, you wait to hurry, young man, or you'll be late."

I fairly jumped into my clothes, trusting to luck for appearance. As I ried my cravat, Uncle William tapped on the door.

"It's five minutes to 7," he exclaimed.

I couldn't say exactly what I wanted to say, so contented myself with giving the cravat a vicious twist. Three minutes later I dashed down the hall, three a good-by at Aunt Margaret and hurried into the yard.

The coachman was driving away.

"Hi, there!" shouted Uncle William from the front steps. "Hold on there, driver! Stop that hack!"

Wilson was evidently Uncle William's next door neighbor. He was leisurely proceeding from his front gate to his own domicile. He turned around slowly and looked at the carriage and then at Uncle William.

"What for?" he asked. "What's the matter with it?"

"Hi, there, driver!" shouted Uncle William again, as I tore down the path.

The coachman drew in his horses with an air of impatient expectancy.

"What in the world do you mean?" cried Uncle William, puffing in anger, behind me.

"Yes, what do you mean?" I echoed, "driving off without me?"

"Why, sir," said the evidently greatly puzzled coachman, with a nod of his head toward Mr. Wilson, "he said for—"

"Well, well, well!" cried Mr. Wilson, joining us on the sidewalk. "What does all this mean, anyway? What are you holding this carriage here for?"

Uncle William began saying something under his breath, but was checked by a feminine voice from the carriage.

"Driver," it asked, "what's the matter?"

"Oh!" exclaimed Uncle William, a light breaking upon him, "you've made a mistake here, Wilson. This is a carriage I ordered to take my nephew to the wedding."

"Oh, I guess not," said Mr. Wilson, bristling up more than ever. "This is a carriage I ordered to take my niece to the commencement."

The two men glared at each other like wild animals, and I turned from one to the other in hopeless perplexity.

"Drive on!" cried Mr. Wilson, and the driver loosened the reins. He evidently enjoyed the situation.

The two men moved toward each other, and then Aunt Margaret came down the path, hastening to the untangling of Uncle William's mistakes, as she had been doing throughout their married life.

"This is a muddle," she said to Mr. Wilson, in her sweetest tones. "The stablemen have probably got the two orders confused."

"I don't know about that," said Mr. Wilson, "but I've got the carriage."

"But see here," put in Uncle William, "Dick's best man, and he mustn't be late at the wedding."

"I can't help that," retorted Mr. Wilson. "My niece mustn't be late at the commencement, either."

"I'll tell you," cried Aunt Margaret, with sudden inspiration, "why can't they go together? The ceremony is only a little ways beyond Christ church. I know your niece won't object if I explain."

Aunt Margaret dashed out into the street toward the carriage, and I followed, wiping my moist brow, bewailing my willing linen and consumed with humiliation.

In the next few seconds I heard Aunt Margaret making a hurried explanation which concluded with "Awfully good of you, I'm sure, but I knew you'd consent under the circumstances," then the door was flung open, Uncle William gave me a push from behind, while Aunt Margaret murmured introductions, and I found myself stepping into a carriage which seemed filled with flowers and fluffy white stuff, from the midst of which peered the face of Dorothy Melton!

"Why—Dick—Mr.—" she cried, half rising from her seat.

I started back with a confused attempt at an apology, but Uncle William hastily slammed the door, and with a commanding "Drive lively now!" motioned the driver to start. The horses were off with a jump, and I sank into the seat beside the young woman whom six months ago I had sworn never to see again.

It was the early dusk of what had been a perfect June day. The street lamps were not yet lighted, but the bright moon shone in at the carriage windows, and I knew Dorothy could see my hot flushed face and my nervousness and embarrassment.

"Miss Melton," I began, feeling that I must say something "I'm extremely sorry to intrude upon you in this manner. I had no idea—"

"Oh, pray do not mention it," said Dorothy. "I'm, of course, extremely glad to be of any service whatever to Mrs. Clarkson, and it would be too bad for you to be late at the wedding."

"It's to be quite a large wedding, I believe?" she said, turning her face full upon me.

The driver was evidently intent upon reaching the church in time. He turned a corner so sharply that just as I was about to stagger out a commonplace about the wedding we both were nearly thrown from our seats. Dorothy threw up her hand, her roses fell in confusion and as I bent forward her dainty fingers lightly brushed my face.

"Oh, Dorothy! Dorothy!" cried I, and then—

"I'm sure that I couldn't tell what I said. I only know that the words I had been holding back, the love that I had been trying to stifle for six months, burst from me, and before we reached the next corner Dorothy lifted her shining eyes, and through tears said:

"Oh, Dick! Dick!" and I knew everything was right, and wished that Christ church was 20 miles away.

The carriage pulled up at the church door in the nick of time and dashed away again to leave Dorothy at the young ladies' seminary, where she had been teaching for a few months.

I found Tom in the vestry so supremely happy that he had not even noticed my tardiness—but, for that matter, I walked in the clouds all evening, and noticed nothing whatever that happened at his wedding, so we are quits on that score.

Dorothy and I will be married in September, and Mr. William, who insists that his "good management" brought it all about, has promised to set us up of a carriage of our own on the day of the wedding.

A SUMMARY OF THE BRITISH-BOER CAMPAIGN

TEXT OF ROBERTS' DESPATCH.

Latest Story of the Operations as Told by the Chief.

London, May 18.—Following is the text of Lord Roberts' despatch to the War Office—

"Kroonstad, May 18.—Methuen entered Kroonstad yesterday unopposed. Generals Dunne and Durnford and forty men have surrendered.

"Broadwood occupied Lindley yesterday after slight opposition. Only two of our men were wounded. Steyn was not there, and his Government officials had left Sunday.

"Hutton's mounted infantry yesterday surprised and captured about thirty miles northwest of this place, Commandant Kitchin, Field Cornet Gassen, five Johannesburg policemen and seventeen Boers. There were no casualties on our side."

"Huller reports that several Natal farmers are handing in arms."

HOW HULLER DID IT.

Story of the Skillfully Concealed Operations in Natal.

London, May 18.—The Times has a special from Ladysmith describing the driving of the Boers from the Biggarsberg.

It says—

"The plan was admirably conceived and carried out. While our left remained at Foundersburg the right by means of a flying column was flung at the extreme eastern part of the range, effected a lodgement there, and thus opened an easy line of advance to Dundee, threatening the flank of the whole Boer main position.
The march took five days, and began on the 8th inst. The 2nd Division and the 3rd cavalry brigade marching from the camp midway between Ladysmith and Foundersburg, concentrated on the Ladysmith-Helpmakaar road at Sunday's River.
Together with a large number of field and long-range guns and a large convoy."

"The march throughout was over an extremely hilly and difficult country, the roads being bad, mostly deep sand. The eleventh column bivouacked on the Wachbank River, immediately in front of which lies the almost unbroken line of the Biggarsberg. The 12th cavalry brigade, who scouted all the time ahead of the column, came in touch with the enemy below the Biggarsberg. That night the force bivouacked two miles from the foot of the hills and eight miles from the Wachbank River. The next morning the Boers fired into the camp. The whole column marched along the road leading to Pomeroy, to a point where it enters a deep valley running east, and three miles west of Helpmakaar. The mounted infantry supported by the 2nd brigade rapidly seized the hills on both sides. Colonel Bethuen, with a considerable force of mounted infantry, co-operating from Pomeroy."

"The Boers were completely outmanoeu-vered and forced to evacuate a carefully prepared position, commanding our advance upon the valley, and fell back to a small kopje immediately north of Helpmakaar, where they had long-range guns and Vickers-Maxims. Battery A engaged them. Later our Vickers-Maxims, which were in action for the first time, silenced till sunset. In the evening our heavy guns were brought up and the troops bivouacked two miles from the Boer position. Our loss was one horse. The enemy retired during the night, and at dawn we occupied Helpmakaar. Hence the road runs along the top of the Biggarsberg through open and comparatively flat country to Dundee. Lord Dundonald's cavalry immediately pursued, but the Boers set fire to the grass behind them and made it difficult to come to close quarters.
They fought a rear guard action at Spion Kop, where they were shelled out of their position, and again at Hlesboko Laagie, where the pursuit was slightly checked.
This position was turned, and the pursuit resumed. Lord Dundonald bivouacked ten miles from Dundee, and the infantry and supply column at Belth. Two prisoners and many horses were taken. Our casualties were extremely slight. Our success was the signal for a general advance, and General Hildyard is now advancing along the railway."

HULLER ENTERS DANNHAUSER.

Boers are Now Falling Back Upon Amajuba Hill.

Dannhauser, Thursday, May 17.—Gen.
Huller entered Dannhauser at 10 o'clock this morning. The houses in the town were found to be not much damaged, owing to the sympathies of the Boer inhabitants. A house at Hatting Spruit, however, was destroyed. A number of rebel's were found at their homes and arrested. The railway in little damaged, but several large culverts have been destroyed.

"The Boers north of Newcastle are falling back on Amajuba."

General Buller has received a message from the Queen, congratulating him upon the taking of Dundee, and expressing appreciation of the work of the troops, to which he has replied.

"The Boers left two doctors and an ambulance here."

BLOWN UP THE BRIDGE.

Boers Prepare to Resist the Advance of Roberts.

London, May 18.—From Kroonstad comes a story attributed to excellent authority to the effect that a peace party is being formed at Pretoria, while reports from Pretoria itself indicate discouragement at the recent reverses and the possibility of an early suing for peace.

On the line of Lord Roberts' advance the only important news is that the Boers have blown up a bridge over the Rhoenster River, 37 miles north of Kroonstad.

POWELL OUTWITTED THEM.

He Allowed the Boers to Take a Position, and Then Took Them.

London, May 18.—Skeleton messages from Lorenzo Marques based upon information that leaked out at the Pretoria War Office show that the Boer stormers on Saturday fell into a trap.
Colonel Baden-Powell permitted them to seize one fort and he then surrounded and overbore them before the large forces near at hand perceived the stratagem. It was thus that Sarel Kloof, President Kruger's grandson and part of his commando were taken, and fifty Boers killed.

It seems that a final assault was ordered in consequence of the approach of the relief column, which started from above Kimberley about April 19, reached Taungas toward the end of the month, and was within thirty-five miles of Mafeking several days ago.
This force is supposed to consist chiefly of the Kimberley Light Horse, Roberts' Horse, Marshall's Horse and Imperial Volunteers. Its start and progress were masked by the movement of General Carrington's force from Beira and General Hunter's advance upon Fourteen Streams. But while the column escaped observation in its first detour towards Taungas,

WANTED--A SMELTER

The Lardeau wanted a Smelter.
Eastern Capitalists wanted a good Investment.
They knew the Lardeau to be a good field
And sent an agent to report.
The agent arrived in due course.

The local mine owners and operators wanted that Smelter,
And undertook to show WHY there was a good opportunity for investment
By showing the immense bodies of Ore available for treatment,
And took the Smelter man over the district
To the various good properties.

The third one visited was the ROB ROY MINES! Is that not sufficient evidence of the value of this property? Do Smelter Owners want scenery or rock for the works? If they want ORE why did the local men select the Rob Roy as one of the big reasons why these men should build?

The Smelter is to be built, and the Rob Roy is to supply a lot of Ore for it.

Until we get returns we must still sell shares to complete the work our engineer wants done, and a special issue has been made to meet the requirements. Do you want any shares? $150.00 buys $1000.00 worth of stock. 15 cents per share.

REFUGEES ARE OPTIMISTIC.

They say that Mafeking has been Relieved.

London, May 18.—A special despatch from Lorenzo Marques dated yesterday says the last five hundred refugees who arrived there, agree in stating that Mafeking had been relieved.
The end of the war is anticipated by the Queen's birthday, May 24.
It is stated at the War Office that no news as to the relief of Mafeking had been received up to eight o'clock

MAKING RELIEF FORCE.

It is Believed to Have Already Reached its Destination.

London, May 18.—The latest report is to the effect that the Mafeking relief force left Bloemfontein at the beginning of May, and marched across the country towards the goal, passing to the rear of the Boer forces at Fourteen Streams. It is added that satisfactory news of the progress of this force was received May 11, leading to confident anticipation in high quarters that it has by now achieved its mission.

A Word of Warning

Editor Morning Times:
Sir,—I desire to give a word of warning to Engineer Hay and those associated with him in looking after our streets. We have had a large amount of new walks put down, costing a very large sum of money, and it is important that this work should be of a permanent character, or the money so spent will be wasted.
What I want to say is that the walks are in a bad way in many places. Take a walking stick and tap the pavement and you will see for yourself that it is hollow in many places. Near the post office, for instance, it is very thin, and will go soon. I hope Mr. Editor, that a thorough examination will be made before the time finally taking the walks over from the contractors arrives.
Thanking you for your space,
I am, &c.,
R. A. PATERSON.

Submarine Cable

Editor Morning Times:
Sir,—Will the Times kindly give one of its readers a short history of Submarine telegraph work, and the name of the man that gave the world the Ocean Cable.

A SUBSCRIBER...

Ann.—In 1842 Prof. Morse, of New York stretched a submarine cable between Castle Garden and Governor's Island, and succeeded in transmitting an electric current from one end to the other. This led him to state that it would be possible to effect electrical communication through the sea. Three years earlier Sir William O'Shaughnessy gave practical proof that messages could be conveyed through water. In 1845 the Messrs. Brett were successful in submarine telegraphic undertakings. In 1854 Cyrus W. Field and others began plans for a cable across the Atlantic, but their efforts were not completely successful until 1866.

About Sidewalks

Editor Morning Times:
Sir,—I see that Belleville proposes to put down asphalt sidewalks. At the Council meeting in that city, a letter was read from the city engineer of London, giving as his opinion, that Asphalt was the best, all things considered. A London contractor, Mr. Marden, wrote offering to lay a specimen at 80 per foot if he was guaranteed $400 worth, or 90 for a smaller quantity, a five-year guarantee to go with the work. A gentleman in St. John, N. B., Mr. Peters, in his letter said asphalt was the best, all things considered, and they were laying it in St. John at 35c per yard.
The street surveyors of Belleville pointed out to the council that this was ten cents a yard cheaper than they could lay a plank walk for now. Now, Sir, to view of the above I think it would do well for Peterborough to go slow in the matter of laying down more granolithic walks.
Thanking you, Mr. Editor, I am, &c.,
R. A. PATERSON.

The Garden of Eden

Editor Morning Times:
Sir,—I have a conundrum to propose to Peterborough's great family journal. The Times, as I see you answer all sorts of questions. Did any writers of ancient and modern history attempt to locate the Garden of Eden?
ENQUIRER.

Have a Cigar?

Editor Morning Times:
I am a constant reader of the Times, been supplied with it by a neighbor, who had first reading of it. I now want to take it for myself, and enclose $4 for which send it for one year. I think every citizen, who loves his town and his country should subscribe for Peterborough's brightest and best daily newspaper with hearty good wishes for your continued success.
I am, &c.,
ALEX. SMITH.

Contract Let

Messrs. Brown & Cooper, of Toronto, who have the contract for the building the additions to the Canadian General Electric Company's Works here, on yesterday let the contract for the doors and window frames to Mr. J. D. Haple, Peterborough Planning Mills. This is a guarantee that the work will be well done.

HUMAN BRAIN CELLS

THEY REFUSE TO WORK UNDER TOO HIGH A PRESSURE.

Put on Too Much Steam and These Minute Organisms Go on Strike. Why Men Go Crazy or Become Absent-minded.

Keeping pace with scientific thought and progress certain problems which in the past have been shelved for want of light being thrown upon them have been taken up again one by one to undergo further examination by the aid of improved science.

The newest revelation in this direction tends to the science of the mind and includes the following problems: Why does a man act queerly when he is intoxicated?

Why is a man absent-minded on occasions?

Why does a man sometimes become violently insane, often a dangerous, raving lunatic?

Such questions as these have puzzled our immediate fathers, who have hardly ever satisfactorily explained them away or indeed thrown much reliable light upon them. The human brain is composed of cells, and each cell is a simple bit of nerve substance, from one end of which, like an octopus, spring a number of tentacles, while from another part arises an arm different from them and of great length. The long arm is intended for transmitting impressions from one portion of the brain system to another, it being made to touch the tentacles or short arms of the next one to it, the latter in its turn effecting contact with a third cell, and so on.

Thus a message is conveyed and the mind gets its news. The entire brain is made up of these cells, whose number is legion and whose full strength is grouped in systems, these systems in turn being arranged in communities, the communities in clusters and finally the clusters in constellations, by which divisions they are known to physiologists.

So long as the mind is in a healthy condition each little cell, or brain octopus, attends to its business faithfully and gives no trouble, but as man generally is an animal who usually refuses to live the life spanned out by nature and adopts instead the life laid down by the modern artificial process of living, instituted forthwith by civilization, mental disturbances frequently arise through the brain becoming abused in various ways, from overwork and alcohol principally.

Your octopuslike brain cell is a living little thing, and it can endure a great deal of abuse from you, but if you should go a little too far it rebels and refuses to work any longer by breaking contact with its companion cells, which it can do by withdrawing its long arm and getting itself out of circuit. But this rebellion is conducted by whole groups of cells acting together in full harmony.

Now, the object of this "strike" is simply to avoid overwork, for each tiny cell has stored within its minute space only a certain amount of energy, but if you put on the high pressure this is easily consumed by the operation of the brain, and the organism breaks down from exhaustion. Now, take the first of the problems just stated. When a person takes too much to drink, the cells in those patches of the brain that are responsible for the conduct of muscular movement become affected and the man staggers.

When the dose is very large, the cells, which, although stupefied, have tried to keep their master on his legs, now cease working, and the man sleeps like one dead. Finally, if more than enough of alcoholic drink be taken, the effect on the cells is to paralyze them, and the unfortunate man dies.

There is some relation between extraordinary activity of the mind and insanity. Geniuses are apt to exhibit symptoms of mental alienation, and, singular to relate, their children are usually inferior to those of average men.

For instance, not to go out of England for example, Cromwell was a hypochondriac and had visions, Dean Swift inherited insanity and was himself not a little mad. Shelley was called by his friends "Mad Shelley," Charles Lamb went crazy, Johnson was another hypochondriac, Coleridge was a morbid maniac, Milton was of a morbid turn of mind, nearly approaching insanity (modern ideas of madness are largely formed on the descriptions evolved by his diseased imagination), and Byron said he was visited by ghosts.

This mental alienation occurring in the foregoing cases shows that certain specific groups of brain cells have come under the baneful influence of the guiding spirit called talent or genius, which has used up all the energy stored in each cell and each group of cells, to the detriment of the whole, with the result that their ceasing work has brought about various types of insanity as depicted or, to phrase it more softly, induced disturbance of the mental equilibrium.

The remaining problem is absent-mindedness. This is produced by a temporary disjunction of certain groups of cells. A man becomes so absorbed in his study of some particular subject and lends his whole mind to thought that the hard thinking disorganizes the groups of cells employed in the process of reflection, their tentacles being turned all one way, to the detriment of mental action generally, and so the man with the tentacles of his brain cells turned in the one direction passes along the streets lost to all observation or mental perception and does all manner of queer things because he is not conscious of what he is doing.

You want to get well. Who doesn't? But you are discouraged. You've tried medicines that promised much but didn't keep their promises. If you want to get well try the medicine that makes people well,

DR. PIERCE'S GOLDEN MEDICAL DISCOVERY.

For diseases of the stomach and organs of digestion and nutrition, this medicine offers a practically unfailing cure. Ninety-eight per cent. of all who use it get well. "I cannot express half my feelings of gratefulness to you," writes Mrs. J. E. Clark, of Enterprise, Shelby Co., Mo. "I had despaired of ever getting well. I had been in bad health for twelve years. Had aches all through me, numb hands, cold feet, and everything I ate distressed me; bowels constipated, was very nervous, depressed and despondent. When I first wrote to you I thought I could never be cured. I have taken six bottles of Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery, and my health is now good."

Chicago is having more trouble with her river than Buller had with the Tugela.—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

The National Educational association has decided to meet at Buffalo next year. It is only fair to add that Buffalo decided some time in advance that they should meet there.—Albany Argus.

THE COOKBOOK.

When making bread, do not use too much salt or the loaves will not be light. An appetizing relish for dinner meats is made from a cabbage heart cut into dice and pickled like little onions.

Following the English fashion, crisp, tender celery stalks are often nowadays handed around with cream cheese and crackers at dinner just before the coffee is served.

If chicken that is to be creamed in the chafin dish is marinated for a couple of hours in olive oil, the flavor of the dish will be much improved. Allow two tablespoonfuls of oil to a cup of chicken. In creaming it later, use strong celery salt freely.

TOWN AND COUNTY NEWS

Remember the Date
Bradburn's Opera House, Tuesday, May 22nd. Keep your eye on the Rough Rider Nub Red.

Special Meeting.
Brigadier McIntyre, of Buffalo, arrived in town on Saturday evening, and conducted meetings at the Salvation Army barracks yesterday morning, afternoon, and evening. There was a large attendance, and a very pleasing and profitable time was spent. The Brigadier leaves this morning for Toronto.

Remnants! Remnants!
Just received, 1,200 yards of Tweed Worsted and Serge Remnants—all good ends—from one to ten yards each, suitable for boys' trousers and suits, men's trousers and suits, and some of the new Khaki cloth for ladies bicycle suits. Greatest snap we ever had. Call early and get first choice. H. LEBRUN & CO.

A. A. Army.
The well known self-denial week of the Salvation Army will be observed by that body from May 27th to June 2nd. The balance sheets of the Salvation Army in the various countries in which it operates show that the total saving effected by self-denial last year amounted to the startling sum of $400,000. This is all the more astonishing when it is taken into consideration that the great majority of the Army's followers are poor people.

10,000 SORRY HEARTS.
La Grippe Has Made Them So—But Dr. Agnew's Cure for the Heart Will Bring Joy and Health.

La Grippe has left many a heart weak and diseased. Dr. Agnew's Cure for the Heart, because of its great merit as a heart remedy, the magical quickness in giving relief, and the almost incredible cures it performs, is snatching from death's door many who had been given over as hopeless cases. It's a wonder worker; it's a specific for all heart derangements, and no matter how acute or seemingly hopeless, will give relief inside of 30 minutes. For sale by Ormond & Walsh.

The Lakeside Picnic.
Don't fail to be present at Lakeside picnic. The best of the season. Hear Hon. J. R. Stratton and Hon. P. R. Latchford's addresses. Hear the Hastings band, one of the best in the country. Enjoy a good outing—refreshing, entertaining and instructive. An excellent dancing platform and free to all, best music possible. See our large posters for athletic sports, prizes numerous and valuable.

Bank Discourtesy.
Those who are "running the show" in connection with the Queen's Birthday Celebration, have not extended an invitation to the Head of the Sons of England to assist in the celebration. Now the members of the society feel that they have not received fair treatment. The Sons of England have always taken a leading part in all loyal and patriotic efforts, and to be overlooked in this manner is not pleasing to contemplate. We hope that it may not yet be too late to give both the society and their band a place in the programme on Thursday next.

Wm Mitchell's Case.
The petition signed by 500 Peterborough citizens was laid before the Minister of Justice at Ottawa by Mr. E. B. Stone, and is now being considered. It is altogether probable that the young man will be liberated in a few days.

Remonstrated the Waggon.
On Saturday last the horse attached to Hetherington's milk delivery wagon took fright in the lane back of Water street and ran away. One half the wagon was left in front of the police station and the horse carried the other part as far as Charlotte street, when the horse was captured.

Given Free.
Davidson's Famous Graneware for your homes, free with a $2.00 purchase of any price Tea or Coffee, Baking Powder, Pepper, Mustard, Ginger, Spice, etc. It is a grocery price, 25, 35, 45 and 40 cents per pound. Send in small trial mail order and secure grand premiums and big list of prizes. Agents wanted everywhere. Salary and commission. Stamp for reply and catalogue.

GREAT PACIFIC TEA CO.
144 St. Catherine St., Montreal, Que.

To be Prosecuted.
Chief Roszel has decided to prosecute setting off dynamite fire crackers in future. This is decidedly wise, and we think if the officers of the law would also include Roman candles and similar fireworks, it would be in the public interest. At least it should be an offence to shoot these balls of fire into a crowd. Even small fire crackers should not be used in this way. We are to use fireworks, let them be set skyward. The Council would do well to strengthen the Chief's hands by at once passing a by-law regulating fire works within the town.

Not An Applicant.
Mr. George Ball called on the Times on Saturday to say that he was not an applicant for the position of collector or deputy collector of customs. He further added that he was "agit" the government, and said that he had gotten his last Liberal vote for that party.

LITTLE LOCAL LINES.

Thursday will be the 24th.
The steam road roller has been doing some good work on George and Water Street.

Mr. John Kincaid goes up to Stoney Lake next week to erect a large addition to Mr. D. Breeze's cottages at "Glenwood."

Mr. R. B. McKee, who had the sleeve of his coat torn with a tommy knife Friday night, should present a bill to the Council.

School Section, No. 9, Smith, Mr. P. O. Smith, teacher, sent $2.50 to the Ottawa fire fund, the proceeds of a collection in the school.

"Delays are dangerous." Those who have poor, weak, impure blood should take Hood's Sarsaparilla at once. It never disappoints.

There has been abundant and viable proof lately of the fact that good strings of trout may still be taken by the knowing ones in this locality.

Dr. Jessie Birnie will give the last of Dier series of health talks at the Y.M.C.A. to-morrow evening, at 8 o'clock. Subject, Nerves and Nervousness.

Saturday's Globe has a group picture of four Peterborough boys who are serving in South Africa. Ptes. D. Spence, A. Hall, R. G. Johnston, and A. Truster.

Lieut. W. H. Bradburn of "C" squad, 3rd Dragoons expects to have a splendid turnout on May 21th. He has now all the men he can accommodate for the occasion.

The steamers Eclipse and Beaver brought up large numbers of passengers from Lake Lake points Saturday. The Hawkbow brought up a scowload of telegraph poles.

The Times has been asked if the Corporation could be held responsible for damages for injury received on Friday night through the explosion of firecrackers. We think the town is liable.

By invitation the members of the 1st Degree Team of Peterborough Lodge, have arranged to be present and confer the 1st Degree on several members of Ottawa Lodge, on the evening of May 28th.

SOCIAL AND PERSONAL.

Mr. Rolly Griffin, of Lakefield, was in town yesterday.

Mr. Wm. Snowden has returned from a visit to Clifton Springs feeling well after his trip.

Mr. John Craig, of the Craig House, Lakefield, was down attending the market Saturday.

Mr. J. Kilbourne, of Owen Sound, who is interested in the Cement Works at Lakefield, passed through Saturday on his way west.

Dr. Young, who was severely injured on Friday night by a dynamite firecracker, is still very lame, and it will be some days before he has entirely recovered.

Mr. R. A. Dutton has returned from the fruit sales. He purchased a car load of oranges and lemons, and also received from Philadelphia Saturday a car load of bananas.

Mr. W. W. Daly has resigned his position with the Sun Life Insurance Co., with which he has been connected for four years past. Mr. Daly has now accepted the position of manager for the National Insurance Co. of Canada, for the district east of Toronto.

We are pleased to see Mr. Arthur Robinson, who is on the staff of the Toronto School of Science, in town on vacation. Mr. Robinson is regarded as one of the most promising young men in his profession in Canada, as evidenced by the high position which he occupies.

PROSPECTUS

The Canadian Portland Cement Company has been formed for the purpose of acquiring the cement business carried on by the Rathbun Company at Napanee Mills and Maribank in the Province of Ontario; the business of the Beaver Portland Cement Company at Maribank and the business of the St. Lawrence Portland Cement Company at Montreal, in the Province of Quebec.

The assets are to be turned over to the new company free of all encumbrances and comprise the following:

Factories. The factory of the Rathbun Company at Napanee Mills, with ample factory site and clay lands, and with all buildings, plant, etc., in full running order, having a capacity of 325 barrels of completed cement per day.

The factory of the Beaver Portland Cement Company at Maribank, controlled by Messrs. James Dobson and Chas. J. Webb of Philadelphia, with all lands, buildings, and plant used in connection therewith, having a capacity of at least 500 barrels of completed cement per day.

The leasehold factory and premises of the St. Lawrence Portland Cement Company, of Montreal, used in the manufacture of Silica Cement.

MARL PROPERTIES. The marl deposits at Maribank, with dredges, plant, and appliances connected therewith, and owned and used by the Beaver Portland Cement Company and the Rathbun Company in connection with their cement business, containing altogether about 820 acres of land.

The report of Mr. M. J. Butler, C. E., shows that the supply of marl upon these properties is practically inexhaustible, the survey showing 19,835,773 cubic yards of marl, sufficient to produce at least 69,425,000 barrels of Portland Cement.

STOCK. Supplies, cement manufactured or in process of manufacture or sale to the amount of $50,000.

TRADE MARKS—PATENT RIGHTS. The "Star" brand and other brands and trade marks of the Rathbun Company and the Beaver Company, the Silica Cement Patent Rights for the Dominion of Canada owned by the Rathbun Company, and the goodwill and businesses, including all the trade marks and rights of all the Companies above named.

Silica Cement is manufactured from Portland Cement and sand, by a patented process exclusively controlled by this Company for the Dominion of Canada, under the patent rights above referred to. This product has been most favourably received by consumers, and forms a growing and profitable trade.

The above-mentioned trade marks and brands have taken a long time and great expense to establish, and are an asset of great value. The whole output of the new Company will be manufactured from the same materials and under the same management and staff and sold under these brands.

MARKET

The Cement business of the Rathbun Company has been established for a number of years, and the "Star" brand of Portland Cement and the "Citadel" and other brands of Silica Cement have been thoroughly established as first-class, being accepted by the Government of the Dominion of Canada, by the Grand Trunk Railway Company, the Canadian Pacific Railway Company, the Intercolonial Railway Company, by the City of Montreal and Toronto, and by other steam and electric railways and municipalities throughout the Dominion.

Prior to the incorporation of this Company the Rathbun Company had contracted for the sale of their whole output for the year 1900, and no difficulty is anticipated in disposing of the entire product of the new Company in view of the extent and character of the demand for the brands of cement of which that product will consist. The confidence of the railways, municipalities, and the principal purchasers of cement throughout the country in the brands of this Company having been gained, not only as a result of scientific tests, but by years of actual use, such cement has become a staple article of commerce, the demand for which has increased each year, and is certain to increase in even greater proportion in the future. No important engineering or architectural work can be undertaken without the use of cement. Every steam and electric railway annually uses large quantities in the construction and maintenance of its works. It is used to an increasing extent in replacing masonry, being much more easily moulded to the required form. The foundation of every permanent pavement laid upon the streets of our cities is constructed with it, and not only in the larger cities, but also in the smaller towns and villages throughout the country it is gradually displacing wood in the construction of sidewalks.

RAILWAY FACILITIES

The marl beds, clay banks, and works of this Company are situated directly on the line of the Bay of Quinte Railway, midway between junctions with the Canadian Pacific Railway at Tweed and with the Grand Trunk Railway at Napanee. This affords to the output of this Company competing lines for railway freight, while access to water communication is obtained at Deseronto and Kingston over the Bay of Quinte railway.

The location of their works will enable the Company to manufacture the large portion of their output without railway transport of either clay or marl, and to load the finished cement direct from the works upon the railway cars.

PROFITS

The Toronto General Trusts Corporation have made a special audit of the cement business of the Rathbun Company at Napanee Mills for the year ending 31st December, 1899 and their certificate shows a net profit of $84,822.80.

This result was attained with a plant producing an average of 325 barrels of completed cement per day.

The plant and equipment of the Beaver Company are only now being completed, but that Company undertake to deliver to the new Company by 1st June their plant and equipment, completed in every respect, and of the most modern design, capable of producing 500 barrels of completed cement per day.

It will be seen by the above that the profits from the business of the Rathbun Company alone were largely in excess of the total amount of $450,000 Preference dividend on the Preference Stock of the new Company, and it may reasonably be expected that the earnings of the combined Companies will be such as to enable the new Company to pay the additional 1 per cent. dividend on this stock. It is also anticipated that by the co-ordination of interests time cost of production and sale will be considerably reduced.

As has been already pointed out, the Company do not anticipate any difficulty in disposing of their entire output, and in this connection it may be mentioned that last year the Rathbun Company found it necessary to buy a considerable amount of imported cement which was used in the manufacture of Silica Cement, their own factory not being able to supply the demand in sufficient quantity.

DIVIDENDS

The Preference Stock is entitled to a first cumulative dividend of 7 per cent. per annum, payable half-yearly, and after the Common Stock has received a like dividend shall be entitled to share with the Common Stock in any surplus profits up to, but not exceeding, a further 1 per cent. upon the Preference Stock.

RESERVE FUND

The By-laws of the Company provide that after payment of the 7 per cent. dividend upon the Preference Stock, and before any dividend shall be declared and paid upon the Common Stock, the Company shall set apart out of any profits earned, as undivided profits, an annual sum of not less than $15,000 and no more than $25,000 until a Reserve Fund of $150,000 has been accumulated, which fund is to be used by the Company, or invested, as may be directed by the Board. The By-laws of the Company also provide for the election of two directors by the Preference stockholders to represent them on the Board.

AUDIT

The Toronto General Trusts Corporation have undertaken the yearly audit of the Company's affairs, and will certify that the proper amount has been set aside for the Reserve Fund, as provided by the By-laws, before dividends are declared on the Common Stock. They will also act as Transfer Agents of the Company, and will counterclaim all certificates of stock.

DISPOSAL OF PREFERENCE STOCK

Of the total amount of $450,000 Preference Stock, $200,000 has already been taken at par by Directors and others interested in the Company, $50,000 remains in the Treasury, and the balance of $200,000 is now offered for sale at par by Messrs. Osler & Hammond, 18 King Street West, Toronto, the right being reserved to them to accept the offers of applicants for the whole or any proportion of the amount applied for.

A deposit of 10 per cent. is payable on application, an interim balance on allotment, which will be made not later than the 5th June prox. If no allotment made deposit will be returned, and if a partial allotment is made the surplus deposit will be applied towards the amount payable on allotment.

In making allotments regard will be had to the order list which applications for stock are received.

Application will be made in due course to have the Preference stock listed on Toronto Stock Exchange.

Report of the Auditor of the Toronto General Trusts Corporation on the cement business of the Rathbun Company, and report of Mr. M. J. Butler, C. E., the marl properties, may be seen at the office of the undersigned, where forms of application, together with copies of Prospectus, may also be obtained.

Washington, May 21. Referring to the relief of Mafeking, the Times says: Not the least gratifying feature of the deliverance, as in the defence of Mafeking is the glorious part played by those colonial forces, the full importance of which are now for the first time being recognized by ourselves and by the other nations of the world.

Lorenzo Marquez, May 21. The defence works of Johannesburg are progressing rapidly. Six guns brought from the front have been placed in a fort, while trenches and trenches intersect Katrand near Klip River just behind the race course.

London, May 21, 9.35 p.m. The following despatch has been received from Lord Roberts at the War Office—

"Kroonstad, May 21.—The following is from Hunter—'Mafeking is relieved. Mahon entered May 18.'"

London, May 21. Mr. Joseph Chamberlain has accepted an invitation to attend the Canadian Banquet in London on Dominion Day.

London, May 22, 3.15 a.m. British horsemen, according to a despatch from Lorenzo Marquez, are now close to the Vaal River, within forty miles of Johannesburg.

The migration from Pretoria has begun. Women and children are being sent on trains to Machadodorp, on the way to Lydenburg. Trains are arriving at Lorenzo Marquez filled with passengers, among whom are many Germans who are bound for Europe.

Some details of Colonel Mahon's Mafeking relief expedition are now coming through from wayside points. It was one long rush to Mafeking. Mr. C. E. Hand, the Daily Mail's correspondent, is mentioned in Lord Roberts' despatches to the War Office as dangerously wounded in the fight in the Bush, May 17, sent his last message from Vryburg, May 18, by runner to Kimberley, May 21. He says—"The flying mounted column secretly and swiftly organized by Gen. Hunter, started from Barkley and arrived here to-night, covering 130 miles in five days. It is a grand force of mounted men, Imperial Light Horse, from Ladysmith, the Kimberley Mounted Corps, with Royal Horse Artillery and Pom-poms, and a selected body of infantry from the Fusilier Brigade. A special equipment of lighted mule transport completed this splendid force, the force so equipped was enabled to move with such rapidity that, although this is a difficult country, requiring vigilant scouting, the Boers were surprised. The column moved parallel with the enemy's positions on the Vaal at Roodan and Fourteen Streams, actually getting behind them without firing a shot. So close were we Sunday and Monday, that General Hunter's balloon was visible and his bombardment heard."

correspondent with General Hunter, telegraphs as follows from Fourteen Streams—"Col. Mahon's relieving column left Barkley West under secret orders May 4, and reached Vryburg, May 10. The Boers marched on the right flank of the British and a strange race followed. Mahon pressing towards Mafeking with the utmost speed consistent with keeping the force in condition, and the Boers hurrying parallel to an effort to pass him and to throw themselves across his path. The Boers succeeded. Mahon then turned west during the night. The Boers followed, overtook and attacked him in the bush, but were beaten off."

as Lord Roberts wired Col. Mahon and Col. Plumer united forces at Jambula, May 15, and Mafeking was relieved three days later, under conditions not yet known here.

THE TIMES SKEPTICAL. London, May 21.—The Times says: The sensational story that the Boer Government has decided to ask for the nation of hostilities on condition that it guarantees the lives of the colonial soldiers who joined the enemy, and adds that in case of our refusal that Johannesburg and the mines will be destroyed, does not deserve much attention. We certainly shall not grant cessation of hostilities, nor grant any terms to the Boers, either for the use of the rebel colonists, save unconditional surrender.

FENIAN ATTEMPT UPON ESQUIMAULT.

Three Men Detected by a Sentry at Fort MacAulay and Are Fired Upon.

Vancouver, B. C., May 20. — A major of the Sixth Duke of Connaught's Own Rifles said Saturday that a naval officer at Esquimault had informed him that strict orders had been issued to the men at Great Britain's North Pacific station to shoot anyone approaching the fortifications immediately after a second challenge, and to shoot to kill.

These orders have been issued owing to very reliable information received from San Francisco, Cal., that pro-Boer Fenians had left California for Victoria in considerable numbers for the avowed purpose of blowing up with dynamite the dock-yards and fortifications of Esquimault. Detectives have been engaged by the British authorities, and three well known Fenians residing in San Francisco had been recognized in the streets of Vancouver. These men were shadowed for some time, but finally disappeared.

The guard at MacAulay Point, close to the British warship dockyards, was changed on Monday night, the regulars being taken off and sixty Canadian volunteers from Vancouver, under Captain Akroyd, being placed in charge. These men were warned that dynamite might be expected any night, and more particularly now, as dynamite did not fear volunteers as they did regulars. The men were told that if any strangers approached the dockyard or fort at that point to challenge once, and if there was no answer to fire high, immediately challenge again, and if there still was no response to shoot to kill and call out the guard.

One of the Canadian sentries was surprised to see three men crawling towards him on their hands and knees, scarcely ten feet away, on Wednesday night. He shouted, "Who goes there?" and, getting no response, he fired point blank at the strangers, who turned and fled in the darkness. The entire guard turned out and ran after the strangers as long as they could be seen, firing at them as they ran.

As little harm could be done to Fort MacAulay by dynamite, it is thought the supposed Fenians were reconnoitering the fort preparatory to an attempt to dynamite a British warship at that time lying in the dockyard close by.

SHOT WITH POISONED ARROWS.

Story of the Recent Fierce Fighting With the Mintchi Tribes of Nigeria.

London, May 21.—Reuter's agent at Jebba, Nigeria, writing under date of March 29, deals with the recent fighting with the Mintchi tribes, against whom a special expedition was despatched in February, under the command of Lieut. Colonel Lowry Cole, Royal Welsh Fusiliers. Time after time on the line of march the Mintchis attacked most pluckily, and of the troops under Colonel Cole's command (not including two other small columns) there were ten non-commissioned officers and men killed and about thirty wounded; amongst the white men one officer, Captain Eaton, of the Buffs, and Sergeant Hawkins, of the Rifle Brigade, severely wounded. The latter, it is understood, had his toes amputated. The enemy, in addition to other weapons, used poisoned arrows of a most deadly kind, necessitating immediate treatment, or it is soon all up with a wounded man. The column had then

A very large quantity of the explosive was used, and its effect was terrific. The shock was felt for a great distance from the tunnel, which is now completely choked up from end to end with huge masses of earth and rock, which will require months and great engineering skill to remove.

All the commandoes are occupying fine strategic position, and feel confident that they can easily repel any attempt by Gen. Buller to enter the Transvaal by way of Laing's Nek.

SECRET SERVICE EXPENDITURE.

Money Will be Needed for Intelligence Work After the War is Over.

London, May 21.—The annual sum hitherto set apart for secret service purposes is to be more than doubled. As has already been announced, Parliament is to be asked to provide £60,000 for the ensuing year, instead of the £30,000 which was deemed sufficient in previous years.

A Daily Mail representative has made inquiries as to the purpose for which these extra thousands are needed, and there is good reason to believe that, to a large extent, they will be required for work which will have to be done in South Africa. The need of an adequate organization when the war is over to deal with the secret societies which are sure to spring up, and whose one and only purpose will be to spread, as far as possible, a spirit of disloyalty, has been made ob-

BULLER IS DELAYED BY WRECKING OF RAILWAY

Hunter is Pushing up the Railway With Supplies for Mafeking's Starving Garrison.

PRESIDENT KRUGER HAS NOT SUED FOR PEACE.

There is no Truth in Report That the Transvaal President Has Proposed Terms for Peace and no Communication is Expected from Him Just Now.

"Kroonstad, May 21.—Buller reports that his advance will be delayed for a few days on account of the way in which the railway has been destroyed. "Rundie reports that Ladybrand has been occupied."

"Hunter is pushing up the railway with supplies to the Mafeking garrison and is arranging a hospital train for the conveyance of the sick and wounded to Kimberley."

London, May 21.—As announced in this despatch some days ago, the invasion of the Transvaal by General Hunter was merely a feint to occupy the attention of the Boers and prevent them concentrating to oppose the advance of the small column which relieved Mafeking. The relief having been accomplished this force is now pressing forward up the railway with supplies and a hospital train for the decimated garrison. The column under Colonel Mahon was in light marching order and consequently did not carry a large supply of food and other necessities with it. Hence the advance of Hunter's division with such things.

As the despatch to Sir Alfred Milner announcing the raising of the siege is dated from Taungs, 140 miles south of Mafeking, to which place the railway and telegraph are probably open, it will be seen that the second column has a long march before it. Meanwhile Lord Methuen, who was at Hoopstad, is moving forward to engage the Boers and keep them in play during the advance of the column, or, in other words, perform precisely the same service for Hunter that Hunter performed for Mahon. The technical details of the relief of Mafeking as far as they can be grasped reflect lustre upon the military genius of Roberts and Kitchener, the latter of whom evidently had a hand in the affair. Economy in men and horses and a clockwork system which enabled the siege to be raised almost at the moment fixed are the two prominent features. Instead of sending a large army over 200 miles of difficult and hostile country Lord Roberts sent a small detachment of 1500 men, while the remainder of the Kimberley force made a march towards the heart of the Transvaal, drew down the Boers from Mafeking to defend their country and thus allowed the uninterrupted passage of the smaller force which, under the circumstances, proved quite sufficient. It is the art of war reduced to an exact science that Roberts is illustrating on the South Africanveldt.

MEANWHILE Buller has recovered for the Queen the whole of the territory in Natal which she held at the beginning of the war. Not a foot of British ground in that colony is now occupied by the Boers. But the grim heights of Laing's Nek and Majuba confront the army of Natal and make it doubtful whether any further advance in that direction can be made.

The likelihood is that a flanking movement either into the Free State or the Transvaal which has long been expected from Buller will now take place, seeing that an attempt to force the formidable neck of Natal would be attended with serious loss, which would be averted by the alternative method.

General Buller is still pressing northward along the Basuto border and has occupied Ladybrand with other places in its vicinity. He will in all probability continue his march to Harpersburg, where he will be in a position to join hands with a force from Ladysmith.

The announcement that Col. Baden-Powell is only to be promoted to the rank of Major-General is a surprise to most people who imagined that the immense service to the empire of the hero of Mafeking would have been better rewarded. As a colonel, B.-P. gets £2 a day, and the promotion only gives him an additional £1 a day, which is a miserable reward for a gallant empire to pay one of its most deserving soldiers.

HAS NOT SUED FOR PEACE.

PEACE IS NEAR.

British Government does not Anticipate any Negotiations Just Yet.

London, May 21, 2.25 p.m.—The Associated Press is able to say that no message from President Kruger, direct or indirect, has recently been received by Lord Salisbury or by any department of the British Government, nor, it may be added, is any communication from him dealing with the question of cessation of hostilities expected by them in the immediate future. The proximity of peace according to the Government point of view, will remain a matter of military progress. How soon the latter may bring about the former is still too supposition a question for serious forecast on the part of any high Government official. The consensus of opinion as gleaned by the Associated Press at the

ALMOST AT LAING'S NEK.

General Buller Has Recovered the Whole of Natal.

London, May 21.—The War Office has received the following despatch from General Buller dated Newcastle, May 19th.

"General Clery moved to Ingogo to-day, and General Dundonald to Laing's Nek. We almost caught up with the tail of the enemy's column, and have captured a few prisoners and wagons."

"The men have marched very well indeed. I left Ladysmith May 10th and by the road used, am now 138 miles from there."

"The telegraph section has been indefatigable, and the Service Corps has kept up full of rations all the time. The 5th division has also done great services."

General Buller has recovered the whole of Natal.

A PROMISING PROSPECTUS.

Stock in Canadian Portland Cement Co. offered for sale.

The Canadian Portland Cement Co., Limited, which has acquired the well-established cement business carried on by the Rathbun Company at Napanee Mills, Marlbank, and Montreal, has decided to offer for sale $200,000 of 7 per cent. cumulative preference stock. The capital of the company is placed at $1,500,000, and the directors embrace some of the best known names in financial circles in the Dominion. The company succeeds to the trade mark, patent rights, etc., of the Rathbun Company, including the "Star" brand of cement, and the silica cement patent rights for the Dominion of Canada. The marl deposits of the company at Marlbank, Ont., are practically inexhaustible, and the profits of the old company in the past have been very large. The output of the new company will be manufactured from the same materials and under the same management and staff.

The prospectus of the new company, as outlined in another column of this issue, is of the character that will appeal to shrewd investors. The preference stock is entitled to a first cumulative dividend of 7 per cent. per annum, payable half-yearly, and after the common stock has received a like dividend shall rank for an additional dividend of 1 per cent. Of the $450,000 preference stock, $200,000 has already been taken at par by the directors and others interested, $50,000 remains in the treasury, and the balance of $200,000 is offered for sale at par by Messrs. Osler and Hammond, 18 King street west, Toronto.

WON A FORTUNE IN ALASKA.

Tried For Murder in Chicago in 1897 and is now worth $250,000.

It is strange how the wheel of fortune acts in the case of some men, says a Chicago lawyer. Take the case of Jack Harris, for instance. In 1895 Harris was arrested on Clark street, charged with murder. There was no question about the killing, but Jack claimed the act was in self-defense. He was lodged in the Cook county jail, but who he was or where he came from was never revealed by the defendant to his own counsel. He did say his name was assumed and there he stopped. When arrested Harris had about $50. He spent $1 for postage stamps and as much more for stationery, and began writing to the outside world. In about a month Jailer Whitman was surprised at the number of registered letters and express packages which came addressed to Jack Harris. The sum ranged from $5 to $100, and in a short time the jail register showed nearly $2,200 to his credit.

Harris remained for 22 months an occupant of murderers' row, and then went up for trial. He was acquitted and left the jail when discharged with a $5 note and was never heard of again until last week.

Harris is now king of the Cape Nome ports. He started out from Seattle two months after his acquittal in Chicago for Dawson City. He located a claim on Dominion creek and worked it for all it was worth. When the cold weather set in, in 1898, he was down to bed rock and had a deposit of $50,000 in a Portland bank. He sold out for $40,000 and went to Nome, where he invested it in mining claims, which are said to-day to be worth half a million. He is now a partner of Jim Grady, and he owns two saloons at Nome, as well as a well-equipped gambling house. The monthly income from the faro table alone is said to be $5,000. The wealth already acquired by Harris cannot be less than $500,000 in round numbers. He expects to build an opera house and dance hall at Nome during the present summer. He says when he can count a cool million he is going to sell out and return to civilization.

"Salvation, O Salvation!"

As the Secretary of the Church Missionary Society of London remarked at the Missionary Conference on Monday, this present or nineteenth century has been the period to which Protestant missions have chiefly been confined, but a very great part of the progress achieved has been within the last fifty years only. The missionary movement began almost simultaneously among the Protestant Churches and in their conception it became soon of foremost importance. The early missionaries, on their return visits, received an enthusiastic welcome and reports from lands then strange aroused the passionate religious feeling expressed in the famous missionary hymn.

"Shall we whose souls are light
With wisdom from on high;
Shall we who men benighted
The lamp of life deny?
Salvation, O salvation,
Till each remotest nation
Has learnt Messiah's name."

The test of the depth and fervor of the religious faith and devotion of a Church was the consuming fire of its missionary zeal. Of the inhabitants of the world, at least two-thirds were men "benighted," and still, in spite of the half century of active and self-sacrificing missionary effort, the ratio remains about the same, or, in round numbers five hundred millions in Christendom to one thousand millions in "heathendom." By this we do not mean to imply that the work of evangelization has been without fruit, but the great as its numerical results have been, the converts made have not exceeded the natural growth of the population and probably have fallen below it. Actually they have been relatively few. It has seemed and still seems a hopeless task, but as a missionary to India, declared last Sunday it is not hopeless to Christian faith, for "nothing is impossible to GOD."

The same speaker said very significantly and very truly that the great danger now before missionary enterprise is "the new and appalling danger" of "the growing tendency to agnosticism," and a missionary to Japan recently repeated the warning to fear that country paganism is concerned, saying that the tendency of the educated people there is toward agnosticism and scepticism, and that the impression prevails among them, as it does among others of the educated Orientals, that Occidental civilization is of a like tendency. Nor can it be denied that there is justification for the feeling. Of the 421 translations of the Bible which have been made, 148 are into Asiatic languages. The Bible is "God's greatest missionary," said one of the missionaries from the East; and he further described it as "His infallible missionary, unwearied, impregnable to danger or disease, unerring." When, therefore, Christian scholarship proceeds to declare that the Scriptures are full of errors, what becomes of the power of this greatest of missionaries? For, it must be remembered, the knowledge of this criticism already extends throughout the world. "Heathendom." How can you ask us to give up our own religion and substitute yours," the Buddhist or Mohammedan may well ask, "when even in Christendom itself the Divine authority for your religion is denied by your scholars?" Accordingly, the most dangerous opponent against which the missionary movement has now to contend is assembling it from behind, in this Christian assault on the Bible, "God's greatest missionary." The scepticism of Christendom is propagated even faster than its belief and is destroying faith not merely in Christianity but in all religion also.

Meantime the Missionaries encounter inevitable prejudice against outsiders, "carpetbaggers," who undertake to upset deeply rooted institutions in countries where they are strangers. Hostility to European civilization, justified frequently by high-handed political and military interference, is also against them. Their habits of life constitute another bar to their progress—for example, their flesh-eating in countries where such food is abhorred. Oftentimes, too, when through the schools by which to a great extent they seek to propagate Christianity they teach their pupils our language, they only open up to them the vast agnostic and sceptical literature of the Christendom of this time. In spreading a tenderer sentiment of humanity and in introducing our methods of healing and medical treatment and in other incidental philanthropic ways, however, they are conferring practical benefits on the people among whom they go which must tend to conciliate the favor of many, in spite of the distrust provoked by European conquests and reasonable fears that nominally Christian civilization is yet to be forced on them violently and their own social and political systems to be completely destroyed. We should feel the same if foreign aggression threatened us. What right have we to complain of the exclusiveness of China when we shut out the Chinamen from our country?

PROSPECTUS

The Canadian Portland Cement Company has been formed for the purpose of acquiring the cement business carried on by the Rathbun Company at Napanee Mills and Marlbank in the Province of Ontario; the business of the Beaver Portland Cement Company at Marlbank and the business of the St. Lawrence Portland Cement Company at Montreal, in the Province of Quebec.

The assets are to be turned over to the new company free of all encumbrances and comprise the following: 1. Factories. The factory of the Rathbun Company at Napanee Mills, with ample factory site and clay lands, and with all buildings, plant, etc., in full running order, having a capacity of 325 barrels of completed cement per day.

The factory of the Beaver Portland Cement Company at Marlbank, controlled by Messrs. James Dobson and Chas. J. Webb of Philadelphia, with all lands, buildings, and plant used in connection therewith, having a capacity of at least 500 barrels of completed cement per day.

The leasehold factory and premises of the St. Lawrence Portland Cement Company, of Montreal, used in the manufacture of Silica Cement.

MARL PROPERTIES. The Marl deposits at Marlbank, with dredges, plant, and appliances connected therewith, and owned and used by the Beaver Portland Cement Company and the Rathbun Company in connection with their cement business, containing altogether about 53 acres of land.

The report of Mr. M. J. Butler, C. E., shows that the supply of marl upon these properties is practically inexhaustible, the survey showing 19,335,773 cubic yards of marl, sufficient to produce at least 60,425,000 barrels of Portland Cement.

STOCK. Supplies cement manufactured or in process of manufacture, or cash to the amount of $50,000.

TRADE MARKS—PATENT RIGHTS. The "Star" brand and other brands and trade marks of the Rathbun Company and the Beaver Company, the Silica Cement Patent Rights for the Dominion of Canada owned by the Rathbun Company, and the goodwill and businesses, including all the trade marks and rights of all the Companies above named.

Silica Cement is manufactured from Portland Cement and sand, by a patented process exclusively controlled by this Company for the Dominion of Canada, under the patent rights above referred to. This product has been most favorably received by consumers, and forms a growing and profitable trade.

The above-mentioned trade marks and brands have taken a long time and great expense to establish, and are an asset of great value. The whole output of the new Company will be manufactured from the same materials and under the same management and staff and sold under these brands.

MARKET

The cement business of the Rathbun Company has been established for a number of years, and the "Star" brand of Portland Cement and the "CKadel" and other brands of Silica Cement have been thoroughly established as first-class, being accepted by the Government of the Dominion of Canada, by the Grand Trunk Railway Company, the Canadian Pacific Railway Company, the Intercolonial Railway Company, by the Cities of Montreal and Toronto, and by other steam and electric railways and municipalities throughout the Dominion.

Prior to the incorporation of this Company the Rathbun Company had contracted for the sale of their whole output for the year 1900, and no difficulty is anticipated in disposing of the entire product of the new Company in view of the extent and character of the demand for the brands of cement of which that product will consist. The confidence of the railways, municipalities, and the principal purchasers of cement throughout the country in the brands of this Company having been gained, not only as a result of scientific tests, but by years of actual use, such cement has become a staple article of commerce, the demand for which has increased each year, and is certain to increase in even greater proportion in the future. No important engineering or architectural work can be undertaken without the use of cement. Every steam and electric railway annually uses large quantities in the construction and maintenance of its works. It is used to an increasing extent in replacing masonry, being much more easily moulded to the required form. The foundation of every permanent pavement laid upon the streets of our cities is constructed with it, and not only in the larger cities, but also in the smaller towns and villages throughout the country it is gradually displacing wood in the construction of sidewalks.

RAILWAY FACILITIES

The marl beds, clay banks, and works of this Company are situated directly on the line of the Bay of Quinte Railway, midway between junctions with the Canadian Pacific Railway at Tweed and with the Grand Trunk Railway at Napanee. This affords to the output of this Company competing lines for railway freight, while access to water communication is obtained at Deseronto and Kingston over the Bay of Quinte railway.

The location of their works will enable the Company to manufacture the larger portion of their output without railway transport of either clay or marl, and to load the finished cement direct from the works upon the railway cars.

PROFITS

The Toronto General Trusts Corporation have made a special audit of the cement business of the Rathbun Company at Napanee Mills for the year ending 31st December, 1899 and their certificate shows a net profit of $34,832.80.

This result was attained with a plant producing an average of 325 barrels of completed cement per day.

The plant and equipment of the Beaver Company are only now being completed, but that Company undertake to deliver to the new Company by 1st June their plant and equipment, completed in every respect, and of the most modern design, capable of producing 500 barrels of completed cement per day. It will be seen by the above that the profits from the business of the Rathbun Company alone were largely in excess of the total amount of $450,000 Preference stock to be issued by the new Company, and it may reasonably be expected that the earnings of the combined Companies will be such as to enable the new Company to pay the additional 1 per cent. dividend on this stock. It is also anticipated that by the consolidation of interests the cost of production and sale will be considerably reduced.

As has been already pointed out, the Company do not anticipate any difficulty in disposing of their entire output, and in this connection it may be mentioned that last year the Rathbun Company found it necessary to buy a considerable amount of imported cement which was used in the manufacture of Silica Cement, their own factory not being able to supply the demand in sufficient quantity.

DIVIDENDS

The Preference Stock is entitled to a first cumulative dividend of 7 per cent. per annum, payable half-yearly, and after the Common Stock has received a like dividend shall be entitled to share with the Common Stock in any surplus profits up to, but not exceeding, a further 1 per cent. upon the Preference Stock.

RESERVE FUND

The By-laws of the Company provide that after payment of the 7 per cent. dividend upon the Preference Stock, and before any dividend shall be declared and paid upon the Common Stock, the Company shall set apart out of any profits earned, as undivided profits, an annual sum of not less than $15,000 and not more than $25,000 until a Reserve Fund of $150,000 has been accumulated, which fund is to be used by the Company, or invested, as may be directed by the Board. The By-laws of the Company also provide for the election of two directors by the Preference stockholders to represent them on the Board.

AUDIT

The Toronto General Trusts Corporation have undertaken the yearly audit of the Company's affairs, and will certify that the proper amount has been set aside for the Reserve Fund, as provided by the By-laws, before dividends are declared on the Common Stock. They will also act as Transfer Agents of the Company, and will countersign all certificates of stock.

DISPOSAL OF PREFERENCE STOCK

Of the total amount of $450,000 Preference Stock, $200,000 has already been taken at par by Directors and others interested in the Company, $50,000 remains in the Treasury, and the balance of $200,000 is now offered for sale at par by Messrs. Osler & Hammond, 18 King street West Toronto, the right being reserved by them to accept the offers of applicants for the whole or any proportion of the amounts applied for.

A deposit of 10 per cent. is payable on application, an advance on allotment, which will be made not later than the 5th June prox. If no allotment is made deposit will be returned, and if a partial allotment is made the surplus deposit will be applied towards the amount payable on allotment.

In making allotments regard will be had to the order of application for stock as received.

Application will be made in due course to have the Preference stock listed on Toronto Stock Exchange.

Report of the Auditor of the Toronto General Trusts Corporation on the cement business of the Rathbun Company, and report of Mr. M. J. Butler, C. E., on the marl properties, may be seen at the office of the undersigned, where forms of application, together with copies of prospectus, may also be obtained.

Short Story of the Day

LOVE WILL FIND A WAY.

"Dear me, Will, why will you be so annoying! When you are nice I am sure you're very nice, but when you commence to talk that way, well—"

"What do you expect a fellow to do?" asked Will Sinclair, as he dug his heels into the soft earth beside the fallen tree on which they were sitting.

"You can't expect a man to be with you every day for weeks and not love you, can you? Well I love you and must say it."

"That's just it," said Clara English, as she pointed adorably. "There's no doubt you say it often enough in good snoot, too. For two weeks you have said nothing else until I'm weary of your swan song. Now please don't begin all over again."

"You are a heartless flirt," said the young man coldly, as he rose to his feet. "You have accepted my attentions well knowing your power, have left me on and when I admit my humility and love, scorn me."

"I like you very much, Will," said the girl, lifting her shy eyes to the averted face. "That is when you are good. But love is not everything. Oh, I know you have money, but what I want is somebody who will be my master, who will rule me. I want to be run away with, elope, or do something. This thing of loving and wedding just like common everyday folks is revolting to my soul. Now when you do something grand, or smash a record somewhere, come back and we'll talk it over. I'm going to tea now."

"You are a heartless flirt," said the young man coldly, as he rose to his feet. "You have accepted my attentions well knowing your power, have left me on and when I admit my humility and love, scorn me."

"I like you very much, Will," said the girl, lifting her shy eyes to the averted face. "That is when you are good. But love is not everything. Oh, I know you have money, but what I want is somebody who will be my master, who will rule me. I want to be run away with, elope, or do something. This thing of loving and wedding just like common everyday folks is revolting to my soul. Now when you do something grand, or smash a record somewhere, come back and we'll talk it over. I'm going to tea now."

Will gazed after the lithe, supple figure of his sweetheart as she walked rapidly away toward the distant farmhouse where they were putting in their vacation. He was filled with moodiness, disgust and distemper. He knew she was the loveliest creature on earth, but being a wholehearted young fellow with business instincts her wildly romantic notions caused him to shiver with fear. How could he hope to make such a woman happy when he was himself satisfied with common ordinary things, social and domestic?

He jumped up at last and striking his cane fiercely across a stump was ashamed to see that less than half remained in his hand. He pulled his cravat hat over his eyes and was about to follow in the wake of the disappearing girl when he heard a low chuckle beside him. He returned in a rage and saw the wrinkled and bearded face of the farmer standing by grinning in shared amusement. Jasper Stebbins, farmer and horse "swapper," had a keen sense of the ridiculous, but also a heart big enough for a man twice his stature. He bit on a piece of straw, spat it out and then said:

"I heard ye makin' love to the gal. Ye'n I heard what she said back at ye. Now, don't get mad, young man, I'm not a twist yer ears and have been through it all. Land sakes, I mind how Mandy kept me busy when we was a-courtin'. That's a likely colt, but she need to be broke. Want to try?"

"What in thunder do you mean and why are you spying on me?" asked the youth in vast wrath.

"Wouldn't it huffy if I was you," calmly said the old man. "That's a gal with hevin' and she kin be used. You know she's goin' down to Miss Berry's past the bend in the lane to-night after supper 'n' ye order set out and keep her company. There's a lot of tramps a-heavin' about these days and 'tain't no likely place for a gal to trail alone. 'F I was you I'd kinder hehly grow to the bend in the lane's a-ways back thar."

"Good heavens!" said the young man as he started off at a run.

"He'll spite the hull thing I'm a-ferd," muttered the old man as he watched the flying figure. "I got to kile along putty fast, too, or I'm bound to be late. Now, lemme git in to that scarecrow outfit an' then I'm off."

Clara wondered why Will did not appear at supper in the farmhouse. She had become so accustomed to seeing him just opposite and to chaffing him during meals that his absence annoyed her greatly. She was silent and abstracted during supper, scarcely speaking a word, while "Aunt Mandy" as her hostess was called, wondered audibly "what in nation was keepin' Jasper out so late." After the meal she loitered about the porch a bit in hopes that Will would appear and escort her down the country lane. In fact she had begun to realize just how much of a part the young fellow was taking in her life and how much his desertion. Finally she started alone, angry at him, but determined to make her call and get back before it was too late in spite of him.

She was a good walker, feared nothing and because of her wrath cared little about the incidents which otherwise might have worried her. She strode on her face fixed on her destination, glancing now and then at the bow moon. It was a beautiful country place, with rail fences on both sides and huge elms dropping with foliage fringing the path. It was a picture in the soft moonlight to attract a much less romantic mind than hers, but she was too angry to be romantic.

"Hold on a moment, lady," said a rough voice at her elbow. "In a heap of a hurry, be'n't ye? Guess ye got time to say a word to a pore man what ain't had nothin' to eat for two days."

The girl turned in terror and saw a startling figure, clad in garments too ragged to hide the powerful muscles of arms and limbs. He wore a shocking hat and seemed to wear a set of whiskers of recent growth. He leered frightfully at her and kept close to her side in spite of her efforts to escape.

"Don't waste much," he said. "Wait a bit. Quarter'll do and a kiss. No you don't," as she started to run.

The frightened girl made a futile effort to break away, but the man stepped directly in her path. As she whirled about to run the other way he caught her wrist and held her as in a vice. Then with a leer he drew the lovely form toward him. "Help!" screamed the girl as she struggled to free herself.

"Dear Jim Jones loved a young man, fierce anger gleaming from his eyes. He dashed the tramp to the ground and squared away to give him more if he should rise, but the vagrant had enough, and crawling to a safe distance suddenly got up and vaulted over the fence. From this retreat he gazed between a pair of rails on the rescued and rescued. He saw the youth drop on his knees and lift the unconscious girl in his arms.

"Clara," called Will in an agony of fear. "Look up, my darling, it is I. Will. The danger is over. I have driven off that foul beast. You are safe in my arms."

"Will, is that you?" asked Clara as she clung tightly to him. "My brave Will. Oh, how frightened I was. You won't let him come near me, will you, Will?" And she shuddered in recollection of the peril.

"Never," was the valiant reply. "You are safe with me."

"I am so glad."

"Are you? Will you let me be your protector always?"

"Always. Yes, you have won. I said I might love you if you would do something and not talk always of love. You are a hero, Will, and I love you. But how did you happen to be there just then?"

"Never mind that," was the confused answer. "I was here and that was the main thing."

As the lovers walked away together Uncle Jasper raised a grinning face above the fence. He wore a black eye on one side, but he was content. He rubbed the injured member and said softly to the moon, upon whom he bestowed a wink:

"There's different kinds of ways o' breakin' fillies. Sum takes it easy and sum shys. But they all learn to go in double harness if they ain't wore out by too much coaxin'. Reckon I better git home or Mandy'll be scared for me."

PEN, PENCIL AND BRUSH.

New that John Ruskin is dead a "Ruskin" union has been formed in London for the purpose of studying his works.

Emperor William has commissioned William Pape, the artist, to paint the scene of Archbishop Simar rendering homage.

The name of Samuel Smiles has been so long forgotten by the reading public that many will probably be surprised to learn that the author of "Self Help" is still alive. He lives in London.

Winston Spencer Churchill, the British war correspondent now in the Transvaal, has published his first novel. It bears the title "Savrola" and depicts the political intrigue and revolution in the imaginary republic of Laurasia.

The clay model for the bust of the late Joseph Medill C. Chicago has been badly damaged in some way in the studio of the sculptor, Richard H. Park of Chicago, and he will have to reproduce it from memory.

The Superstitious Camel.

There are few things more interesting in north China than the great Mongolian camel train. The two humped Bactrian camels of central Asia are the most curious beast, quite throwing the African brothers into the shade. When clothed in his new winter coat of rich dark brown fur, which even covered his knees, he is doubly imposing. A string of 15 to 20 camels is fastened together by a cord, attached to the nose of the first and the tail of the second, and so on to the last one, which wears a large bell around his neck, so that the Mongol, who is perched on the leading camel, can easily discover when the connecting cord breaks.

A mandarin and a camel are the most superstitious creatures upon earth. The former, wrapped in rich silks and furs, as he is carried along in his sedan chair, glances at the European with pitying disdain. But the camel ignores you altogether, and with a snarl on his mouth glides slowly along, not deigning to look at anything that is not on a level with his eyes. It is therefore necessary to give a camel train a wide berth, for the great beasts would calmly walk over one, and, finding some obstacle in the road, would probably give a kick which would silence one for ever.—Cornhill Magazine.

Mr. Goodnight's Retiring Act.

London possesses one of the cleverest trained horses in the world. His specialty is a retiring act, and to be entirely in accord with it he is named Mr. Goodnight. The costume in which he appeared for his act was checked trousers, dark jacket, boots on his hind feet and a straw hat. These clothes he took off leisurely and then sat down in an armchair and removed his boots.

He then left the ring and wheeled in his bedstead by pushing it along with his head. One by one the bedclothes followed, and, with a little help from the attendants, he was careful to place the bolster and pillow in the right positions. A light was next brought in by the horse, but, as he reached around the ring, it went out. He promptly fetched another and lighted a candle by his bedside. After putting out the match or torch by kneeling down and knocking it on the sawdust, he laid down to rest, first of putting his light out by knocking over the washstand on which he rested. When lying down, the horse pulled the quilt over him and pretended to be asleep.

QUEER MARRIAGE CUSTOMS.

Young Bulgarian Peasants Arrange Nuptials by Proxy.

There are few places within the limits of semi-civilization that boast of more interesting marriage customs than Bulgaria. Every young peasant wishes to marry as early as possible, as he is of little importance in the community until he has a wife. But he is not in danger of forming an alliance in opposition to his parents' wishes, as his earnings belong to them until he is wedded, and his wife must be bought and paid for according to their station in life. The parents usually give him the necessary sum as soon as they can afford it, so that the restriction is less galling than it seems.

A "wife purchase" varies from $200 to $1,500, in proportion to the wealth of the contracting families, for the marriage is strictly a family affair. In addition to this sum a smaller amount is given to the bride's mother for her personal use.

After the betrothal arrangements have been made by the proxies the betrothal takes place on either a Wednesday or Thursday. It consists of the exchange of written pledges regarding the sum to be paid by the bridegroom on the one hand and the household furnishings to be supplied by the bride on the other.

Rings then are blessed by the priest and exchanged by the couple, the fiancée kisses the hands of the guests assembled and retires with her young friends to a feast prepared in another room. The young people then dance outside the house and sing.

The fiancé's presents are then produced and their value estimated by the father of the bride. These consist of shoes, headbands and neckties of cloth, silver belt, bracelets and other jewelry. The father usually regards their value as insufficient, probably to enhance his daughter's worth in her suitor's eyes, and the lover adds coin by coin until an agreement is reached. The marriage does not take place until six months after the betrothal.

During the week preceding the day set for the wedding the house for the young couple is furnished by the bride's parents. Then her home is cleaned and white-washed and every hidden store brought out for decoration. Cakes are made and sent around as invitation cards, requesting the recipients to come to the wedding on Sunday, the invariable wedding day.

The articles composing the trousseau are hung up for inspection on cords stretched across the principal room on Friday by the feminine part of the community. On the following day two of the bride's friends come to help her dress her hair, plaiting it in minute braids, not to be undone until after the ceremony. Then the village maids come with gifts of sweets and flowers, and all sit down on the floor to a dinner of vegetables.

On Sunday the bride is seated in state in all her gorgeous apparel, and with a spangled red veil over her face, to be seen of all the village folk. She wears all the ornaments given by her fiancé and as many more as she possesses. The religious ceremony is that of the Greek church and may take place in the church or in the home of the bridegroom's father. After its performance the party returns to the home of the bride's parents, where the wedding feast is held. Singing and dancing follow until time to escort the bride to her new home.—New York Tribune.

He Was Very Humble.

The Detroit Free Press tells of a disappointed office seeker who at last obtained a gift through a late won humility. When he arrived at Washington, it was with the idea that he was a distinguished and prominent citizen; but after hanging about and swallowing disappointments, he began to suspect that he was not so very important after all.

Then he thought of home and the means of getting there and sought out Colonel Blank, the passenger agent of a certain railroad.

"I say, colonel," he remarked persuasively, "I want to go home."

"Why don't you go?"

"No money. Can't you give me a pass?"

The colonel stiffened.

"We give passes to nobody," said he.

The countenance of the disappointed candidate brightened with a smile of humility.

"Well, colonel," he pleaded, "then give me one. I'm nobody."

The colonel admitted the force of the argument and gave the pass.

A Roofed Lake.

A roofed lake is certainly a novelty. We read much of them in fiction. Lakes are made to exist in caverns and subterranean passages, but rarely do we hear of such in fact. However, such a thing as a roofed lake does exist, and this is not subterranean. There is a lake at Obdorsk, in Siberia, nine miles wide and 17 miles long. Time was when the rapid evaporation of the water left great salt crystals floating on the surface which gradually came together and formed into one gigantic cake. The water of the lake still further evaporated, but the cake of salt kept its own level, thus forming a roof to the lake. Another lake on the Mangishlak peninsula, in the Caspian sea, is similarly roofed with salt crystals which are of such consistency as to permit of man and beast crossing over them with safety.

The Point of the Sword.

In the use of the sword in cavalry fighting the point is considered more deadly, the cut more disabling. The cavalry fight at Llerena, in Estremadura, April 11, 1512, is an example. The fight lasted but a few minutes, for the British, charging, broke the French formation. The latter had 12 men killed and lost 123 prisoners, all suffering from sword cuts, while the English had nine men killed and 47 wounded. All the killed were slain by the "point" and the wounded practically in every case had received their injuries by the "cut." Napoleon was a great believer in the point. At the battle of Wagram he shouted to his cuirassiers as they passed him at the trot, "No sabering; give point! give point!" and kept plunging his sword into the air to emphasize his orders.

Considerate.

"Confound it," said the patient, "you have pulled a sound tooth and left the one that ached."

"Never mind, madam," said the dentist, "there will be no extra charge under the circumstances, although a sound tooth is harder to pull."—Boston Transcript.

In the Category of Poetry.

"Being I am associated with the snow," said the office cat, as it tumbled into the office's wastebasket, "I thought I would drop into poetry."—Boston Transcript.

The surest way to keep the womanly health is to use Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. It promotes perfect regularity. It dries the drains which weaken women. It cures inflammation, ulceration, and female weakness. It soothes and strengthens the nerves, drives away despondency, and gives a healthy appetite and refreshing sleep. It makes childbirth easy, and nursing mothers will find it a strength giving tonic.

"Favorite Prescription" contains no alcohol, neither opium, cocaine, nor other narcotic.

"I never courted newspaper notoriety," writes Mrs. E. A. Bender, of Keene, Coahochon Co., Ohio, "yet I am not afraid to speak a good word for your 'Favorite Prescription' and 'Pleasant Pellets.' Over a year ago I suffered terribly for nearly four weeks with prolapsus and weakness. I have taken no medicine since and have had no symptoms of my former trouble. Have used the 'Favorite Prescription' at different times for more than four years and find it has no equal."

Free. Dr. Pierce's Medical Adviser, in paper covers, sent free, on receipt of 31 one-cent stamps to pay expense of customs and mailing only. In cloth binding 50 stamps. Address Dr. R. V. Pierce, Buffalo, N. Y.

He fumbled with his hat and kicked the fire.

"Molly," he said, "ef you ain't as good as a mind reader I'll give it up! Cause I'm fer Williams fast an last! Durn him!"

The fact that Messrs. The Times will always endeavour to retain the good opinion of its friends and patrons, and when it develops a little more strength, it will be improved to such an extent as to compare favourably with the Toronto morning papers.

Bad Shooting Fatality.

Chicago, May 21.—A special to the Record from Paulding, Ohio, says: Simon W. Cramer, ex-representative of this State, accidentally shot and killed his wife, Mrs. Cramer, while attempting to dislodge a rat from a pile of debris. Mrs. Cramer was on the opposite side of the woodshed from her husband, who held in his hand a loaded shotgun. He thought he saw the rat and fired, striking Mrs. Cramer full in the face. Death was almost instantaneous. Mrs. Cramer was sixty years old.

Private Haywood, with his regiment, was besieged in Kandahar, and to relieve the city Lord Roberts made that famous march from Kabul to Kandahar. After the relief of the city, Lord Roberts, with his remaining force and the garrison, inflicted a crushing defeat on the Afghans. In this battle Private Haywood was engaged.

LORD ROBERTS IS AGAIN MOVING ON TO PRETORIA

The British Infantry Left Kroonstad Monday to Push on to Transvaal Capital.

TRANSVAALERS DECIDE TO FIGHT TO A FINISH.

Johannesburg and Pretoria Being Cleared of Non-Combatants and Boers Preparing With Utmost Haste to Defend These Two Important Cities.

London, May 23, 3.30 a.m. The Transvaal Government has informed the correspondents at Pretoria that it has not considered, and does not intend to consider unconditional surrender, but will fight to a finish.

The foreign consuls have been informed that Johannesburg will be defended, and that the Government announces that it will not hold itself responsible for injury to persons or property resulting from the defence measures.

Pretoria despatches affirm that President Kruger, President Steyn and all the most prominent leaders of both Republics had a prolonged meeting. The minority of the leaders advocate surrender without terms.

Mrs. Reitz, wife of the Transvaal State Secretary, and her family, with the families of other officials, have gone to Lorenzo Marques.

Johannesburg and Pretoria are being cleared of non-combatants. The Boer chiefs, who now recognize the possibility that they will have to defend these cities, are preparing with the utmost haste. The Boers' spirits have been rising from a low ebb, and are now ready for a steadfast resistance.

Nevertheless according to the Daily Chronicle, long messages in Dutch have been received by the British Government by way of Amsterdam, in which President Kruger seeks peace. According to one account, President Kruger surrenders unconditionally; according to another, he asks for terms.

There seems to be good reason for believing that he is earnestly endeavoring to secure terms, but cable inquiries fail to confirm the assertion that correspondence has recently passed between Great Britain and the Transvaal respecting terms.

Lord Roberts is again moving. The British infantry left Kroonstad, Monday, and headquarters was expected to leave Monday. The railway has been repaired and the first train is due to arrive to-day. The Boers are busy blasting for gun emplacements along the Rhenoster River. General De Wet commands, as General Botha is ill.

The advance of Gen. Roberts will probably be swift. It is the expectation well informed observers there that the Vaal River five miles beyond Kroonstad will be crossed by the end of the week.

Sir Redvers Buller in a general order to his troops congratulating them on the result of their ten day operations, says they were only checked at Laing's Nek by a gaffish commando sent from the Transvaal. General Cleary with a cavalry brigade seized the rear-guard of the Boers at Laing's Nek on Sunday and captured a number of wagons and took some prisoners. His artillery shelled the Nek. The Boers in their retreat laid waste the territory, blew up bridges and burned several houses, as many as six in Newcastle. The machinery of the Navigation Colonies was ruined.

General Buller replying to residents of Newcastle who presented to him a trophy said he expected to return from Pretoria soon.

Nothing new concerning the relief of Mafeking has come through. All the accounts of the engagement on May 16 extol the bravery of the Canadians. Col. Mahon's column arriving at the rendezvous one hour after Col. Plumer showed with what accuracy the movements were timed.

Cape Town, May 21.—British troops have arrived at Vereeniging, in the Transvaal, north of the Vaal River. The bridge across the Vaal was found to be intact. Twenty-seven Free State and Transvaal locomotives were captured.

CANADIANS AT MAFKING.

London, May 22.—The Daily Telegraph in a second edition prints a despatch stating that Col. Mahon's force arrived last Tuesday at Jannasbush, where Col. Plumer's Rhodesians and detachments of Canadians and Queen'slanders joined him, both forces having made forced marches of nearly thirty miles daily since May 13.

Several days ago a despatch was received announcing that a battery of the Canadian artillery and a detachment of the Australian bushmen, which formed the advanced guard of Gen. Carrington's force, had reached Bulawayo, 400 miles north of Mafeking. It is evident they were transported south over the railroad to join Col. Plumer's force. The Canadians were landed at Beira, in Portuguese East Africa, and made a rapid march across the northern end of Rhodesia, to Bulawayo.

DIED IN SOUTH AFRICA.

Ottawa, May 22.—Lt.-Col. Pinault, Deputy Minister of Agriculture, has received word that 321, Pte. Wood, "D" squadron, Canadian Mounted Rifles, has died in South Africa. No particulars are given.

In the official list of the Canadian Mounted Rifles, the numbers of the men in "C" and "D" squadrons are not given, but it contains the names of Private Percy Ambrose Wood, Macleod, Alta., whose father resides at 3 Woodlawn-terrace, Leeds, England; Private William Wood, Edmonton, Alta., whose father resides at Toxford, Heaver Lake, Alta.; and Private William Wood, "D" squadron, whose mother resides at Hancock, Perth county.

UNITED STATES AND THE BOERS.

Official Statement by Secretary of State Hay Scouts the Idea of Intervention.

Washington, May 22.—The State Department has met the issue raised by the coming to Washington of the Boer delegation by declining to interfere in behalf of the South African republics in the present struggle. The delegates presented themselves by appointment at the State Department yesterday afternoon, and had an hour's conference with Secretary Hay. In despairing they stated to a number of newspaper men that they had and would have nothing to say as to what happened.

Secretary Hay, however, after a consultation with the President, gave out a statement in which he begins by saying that the delegation laid before him the desire of the Boer Republics that the United States should intervene in the interest of peace and use its influence to that end with the British Government, but that Mr. Hay, in reply pointed out that the United States Government had maintained an attitude of neutrality throughout the war. That the President was not, however, neglectful of any favorable occasion to use its good offices in the interest of peace, was shown by his tendering the British Government his services as mediator between the combatants in Mafeking last at the request of the Boer Republics. That offer, the President, to-day reviewed a detachment of the Guards, which is proceeding to South Africa. Her Majesty addressed the troops, wishing them success, and expressing the hope that she would see them all back at no distant date. Six garrison trains have been ordered to be prepared at Aldershot for transportation to South Africa.

GUIDED TO MAFKING.

Soldiers from the beleaguered town escaped and showed the way.

London, May 22.—A despatch to The Daily Mail from Jan Masabi, dated May 11, says:

"Lieutenant Moorhouse, with the protectorate regiment from Mafeking, joined us. They went first to Colonel Plumer, making a wide western circuit, and got through the Boer lines with many hair-breadth escapes, reaching Vryburg after a daring ride of ed him where he got the fowls, and the soldier from Canada replied, 'I commandeered them, sir.'

"For goodness sake, hide them quickly," remarked the officer, "here is Roberts coming. He'll have you shot."

When the little Commander-in-Chief of the British forces arrived, he asked sternly what the man was doing with the chickens, and the officer told him that the Canadian understood that Roberts was short of rations, and he desired to offer the fowls he got from a farmer close by.

Lord Roberts said: "You are very kind. What's your name? I am much obliged to you."

The Canadian rode away, leaving the Executive Council and surrender the Transvaal to Lord Roberts at an early date.

Many progressive Dutchmen, who are also members of the Judiciary, are said to be parties to the movement.

RUSSIA'S HOLD IN COREA.

She Has Leased a Site for a Coal Depot and a Naval Hospital There.

London, May 21.—In the House of Commons to-day the Parliamentary Secretary of the Foreign Office, Mr. William St. John Brodrick, who was bombarded with questions on the subject, replied that the British Government understood that Russia had leased a site for a coal depot and naval hospital at the treaty port of Mianmou in Corea. This port, he added, is open to navigators of all countries, and the landing and storage of supplies for the Russian fleet within the site just acquired is to be governed by the existing treaties there. Therefore no exclusive right was ceded to the Russian Government, and the treaty rights conceded to British subjects were not to be limited by the arrangements recently arrived at.

The Government also understood that an agreement had been made by which Russia undertook never to ask for itself or its subjects any concession on the Island of Koll, or on the opposite mainland, or any of the surrounding islands, and the Korean Government engaged not to allow any government to rent or purchase land in the localities indicated.

Mr. Brodrick concluded rather lamely that, as the Government had not yet obtained possession of the text of the agreement, it could not say whether the action of Russia was in accordance with her explicit pledges not to acquire any territory whatever in Corea.

FOREIGN NOBLES CAPTURED.

Boers at Mafeking were led by Two British Deserters.

London, May 22.—A despatch to The Daily Mail, dated Mafeking, May 13, says:

ROBERTS TOOK THE CHICKENS.

An Interesting Story Told About a Member of First Canadian Contingent.

London, May 22.—Canada's artillery is now winning commendation. By fast marching they succeeded in reaching the vicinity of Mafeking in time to render valuable assistance to Colonel Mahon in raising the siege. The brave colonel pays a high tribute to the men from Canada, whose arrival on the morning of the fight, which succeeded in bringing about the entrance of his column into Mafeking, was brought about by forced marches.

In a letter to the London Daily Mail, Julian Ralph, the well-known war correspondent, referring to the looting among the British soldiers, says that one of Lord Roberts' staff seeing a member of the Royal Canadian Regiment of Infantry in possession of two fowls, asked him where he got the fowls, and the soldier from Canada replied, 'I commandeered them, sir.'

"For goodness sake, hide them quickly," remarked the officer, "here is Roberts coming. He'll have you shot."

SQUADRON OF COLONIAL TROOPS ARE AMBUSHED

Bethune's Horse Entrapped by Boers in Transvaal and Many Are Captured.

REPORT OF THE MISHAP FROM GENERAL BULLER

Reports that Boers Have Abandoned Laing's Nek—Boer Peace Commissioners Receive a Final Chill from President McKinley at Washington.

London, May 22, 4.37 p.m.—It is officially announced that Colonel Bethune has reported that while marching in the direction of Newcastle, Natal yesterday, he was ambushed by a party of Boers, six miles west of Vryheid, in the Transvaal, and that very few of his force escaped. His casualties numbered 66 men.

THE OFFICIAL DESPATCH.

General Buller tells of the Ambush Near Vryheid.

London, May 22, 4.48 p.m.—The War Office has received the following despatch from Gen. Buller:

"Newcastle, May 22.—I have received the following from Bethune: 'May 21, while marching in the direction of Newcastle, I was ambushed by Boers six miles west of Vryheid, and very few escaped. Lieuts. Lausum and Capell are among the missing. Captain the Earl de La Warr is slightly wounded in the leg. The total casualties are about 66. I have returned to Nqutu for supplies; will march to-morrow for Newcastle via Dundee.' Gen. Buller then proceeds: 'I detached Colonel Bethune and about 500 men from Dundee May 17, with instructions to march to Nqutu, which was reported to have been evacuated by the enemy, preparatory to the return of the magistrats, and the civil establishment to the district. He was to rejoin me at Newcastle afterwards.'

LAING'S NEK ABANDONED.

Reports that the Boers Have Entirely Left Natal.

London, May 22.—A despatch from Pietermaritzburg dated Monday May 21, says the Boers are reported to have entirely left Natal, leaving Laing's Nek free. If this is true it leaves the way open for Gen. Buller to advance into the Transvaal so soon as the repairs of the railroads are sufficient to ensure good communications.

Lord Roberts is still at Kroonstad reorganizing his forces.

Rundie Recupercating.

Gen. Rundie's forces are encamped at Trommel recuperating. A patrol, four miles from Tonnell, was attacked by the Boers. One man was wounded and some horses were killed. The affair was unimportant, except in showing that the Boers are still in the neighborhood, and on the lookout for any chance of sniping.

Deserted Their Chief.

Further details of the fighting at Mafeking, that Commandant Sarel Eloff's followers deserted him. Thereupon Eloff fired on them himself, and then surrendered with eighty followers. The despatch also says that one party of Boers were driven out of the Steat and allowed to escape, as "we had sufficient prisoners."

The capture of Eloff and his followers cost Baden-Powell three men killed and seven wounded.

GOOD-BYE TO WASHINGTON.

Boer Delegates Receive a Final Chill from McKinley.

Washington, May 22.—Messrs Fischer Wessel and Wolmarus the three Boer envoys, who are now in this country, visited the White House at 10 o'clock this morning, according to previous arrangement to pay their respects to the President. They said they understood that what Secretary Hay told them yesterday was final and that the position of the United States was that the present struggle in South Africa. The President confirmed this view. He said that the action he took sometime ago when he offered his good offices to bring about peace, he did with great pleasure in the hope that it might possibly bring the conflict to an end. This offer had been declined by Great Britain, and he says, there was nothing further that the United States could do in the premises.

The envoys intimated that they were glad to feel they had friends in this country and then bade the president good-bye.

VAN REENEN'S PASS OPEN.

Harrowsmith Boers said to be Retreating Northward.

London, May 22.—Winston Churchill, The Morning Post's correspondent at Kroonstad states that the Boers who were at Harrowsmith are retreating northward. Van Reenen's pass is said to be lightly held by the burghers.

PANIC AT PRETORIA.

Public Meeting Held to Take Measures of Safety.

Pretoria, May 21.—An open air meeting was held to-day by the local Hollanders, 280 of whom were present to consider the situation in the event Pretoria should be beleaguered. A committee was appointed to secure a place of safety for the women and children. The Council-General of the Netherlands Herr Nieuwenhuys, was asked to advise his Government to take its subjects.

One speaker said the position was most dark. The British, he declared, would be masters of the Free State and the Transvaal, might would be right, the capitalists would dominate, the poor would be the sufferers, and the Hollanders would have no chance.

Dr. Heyman contradicts the reports circulated regarding the health of President Kruger, which, he says, is good. Herr Kruger is transacting all the work for the Presidency.

In accordance with an understanding with Gen. Buller, and President Steyn, the Government has issued a circular stating that should the enemy succeed in gaining a position in the Transvaal and take possession of one or the other district, the inhabitants would be free to decide whether or not to leave their families on the farms but the men must remain with the commandos.

THE OPERA HOUSE LAST NIGHT.

Mr. Danny Simons Gives His Annual Entertainment.

There was a large audience last night in the Opera House to see Mr. Danny Simons and his amateur Vaudeville company. The performance was superb, and reflected great credit on Mr. Simons and those who assisted him.

The entertainment opened with a character song by little Miss Carrie White, which showed to advantage the rare talent of the child.

Joe Guerin followed with a negro song and dance, which was well received. The club singing of Fred Andrews was a marvel, and elicited well-deserved applause.

Miss Lily Simons next appeared, and as usual, her recitation was a feature of the evening. She was loudly applauded.

Little Miss Carrie White and Mr. James Brown gave two part songs, in character, entitled "The Burglar," which was heartily received.

The melody dance of Danny Simons captured the audience by storm, as it were, as did also "Dusty Rhodes," a character in which Danny made a big hit in the States last season. Danny's dancing was perfect, and brought down the house.

A song by six beautiful maidens, a solo by Mr. James Brown, and a song by little Miss Nellie Graham, were all well received. Little Carrie White, in her song "A Dancing Girl," captured the hearts of the audience, and she was given a hearty encore.

Miss May Clancy sang "Life's Saw," very prettily, and received a second call.

The very pleasing entertainment closed with a sketch entitled "Irish Love," by Miss Lily Simons and Mr. Jack Simons.

Women's Missionary Society.

The annual meeting of the Women's Missionary Society of the Methodist church of the district, took place yesterday, Mrs. Kendry, the President, in the chair. In the evening addresses were delivered by Rev. C. H. Coone, of Cavan, and Rev. Dr. Kade, of Millbrook.

Took Ill in Church.

Yesterday afternoon while the Women's Missionary Society Meeting was in progress in the George Street Methodist church, Mrs. Fuesse, wife of the Rev. C. H. Fuesse, of Warsaw, was stricken in church with heart trouble. She was carried into the parsonage and medical aid summoned. She gradually recovered, and was able to leave her home after

CANADA'S GRANDEST OLD MAN.

Lord Strathcona struck a grand note of imperialism in his recent speech in London—an imperialism based on the loyalty of all the nations of the Empire. There was no hint of legal instruments, but a splendid sentiment of unswerving devotion was insisted on as guaranteeing the integrity, the power, and the maintenance of the empire. This is in accord with the sentiment which prevails in the Dominion. It is not so much a question of votes or of constitution; it is a question of loyal feeling. An impulse has been stirred throughout the outlying portions of the empire which may crystallize into a formal union when the time is ripe for that consummation; but, in the moment of stress, the mother country will find, without the need of formal bond, that her children who have formed themselves into great self-governing nations over the sea, will be ready to rush to the defence of the imperial idea which is a union of hearts rather than a legal instrument. Lord Strathcona has the happy faculty of measuring the occasion. He strikes the right key. His views are broad and statesmanlike. He regards the empire as a whole. He understands the feelings of the public. He has kept in touch with the sentiment not only of the Dominion but of England. His remarks were greeted with loud cheers, for though the fashion was once different, Englishmen recognize that there can be no empire without the loyal support of the colonies—a support spontaneously offered, out of love and pride.

ARMED FOR DEFENCE.

Lord Salisbury does not look for a speedy modification of human nature, and he advises every able-bodied Englishman to learn to shoot straight with a rifle. In other words, instead of being able to take your brother by the hand at the close of the nineteenth century, your chief business is to be able to shoot him with accuracy. Human nature is exemplified in the policy of governments, and it is the policy of European governments to be opposed to England, which they hate because of her marvellous prosperity. You must not expect a change for the better. Human nature will remain largely the same. And therefore you need to be on guard; you need to stand with a gun in your hand. And in spite of education and refinement, of art and music and painting, of the elegancies of modern life, of the teaching of brotherly love, it is pitiful to think that back of all the assuagements and ameliorations, back of every humanizing effort, to bring the race into friendly relations, and so fulfil the law of God, looms the Maxim gun. The moral, however, of Lord Salisbury's speech is that England must have a large standing army. The nation must be armed for defence against a possible combination of enemies. Conscription will not be resorted to, but the patriotism of the whole people will be appealed to. This appeal will not be made in vain, but is a sad commentary upon the so-called progress of the age that the nation which stands for righteousness, for the fullest liberty and for every element desirable for individual and national life, should be compelled to arm herself to the teeth, to defend a national existence which has been an incalculable blessing to the world.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

These retreating tactics of the Boers are the right thing. When arms are for the moment unserviceable it's well to take to the legs.

As to those remarks about Ireland, Lord Salisbury as a persistent office-holder rather than have anybody else step in his shoes put his foot in it.

Johannesburg—next station.

When Bobe gets ready the procession will proceed.

Africa is a British colony. I will tell you how England makes her colonies. First she gets a missionary, when the missionary has found a specially beautiful and fertile tract of country, he gets all his people round him and says, "Let us pray," and when all the eyes are shut up goes the British flag.

If the Boer commissioners intend, as yesterday's despatches intimate, to offer the U. S. a protectorate over their country with the hope that Uncle Sam will interfere to prevent the absorption of the two alleged republics by Britain, they cherish a vain hope. Great Britain would not submit to American dictation, were Uncle Sam disposed to interfere, and your Uncle Samuel has too many troubles of his own just now to seek another row in South Africa.

The fool who rocks the boat bobs up serenely every summer. It is not often he drowns himself, it is generally somebody else, but death sometimes catches him. Two Ionias, Michigan, young men rocked once too often last Sunday, and the neighbors dragged for their bodies a little later.

Mr. Davin, M.P., is the scholar and wit of the House of Commons. His powers of repartee are unrivalled. On the 10th inst. Mr. McMullen twitted him with his baldness and said Mr. Davin had rooms to let in his head. The retort came swiftly—"I and the honorable gentleman differ in two respects, I am bare-headed, while he is bare-faced, and, while the rooms to let in his head are empty, unfurnished, those in mine are furnished." The whole House, minus Mr. McMullen, was convulsed with laughter. Sneers at a man's personal appearance are intensely vulgar, in this case they were justly punished.

Naturally in scoring victories now General Buller feels he is wiping out some old scores.

Since he owes the money to Uncle Sam as a good Mohammedan the Sultan should acknowledge the Koran and pay up.

"The Strength of Twenty Men."

When Shakespeare employed this phrase he referred, of course, to healthy, able-bodied men. If he had lived in these days he would have known that men and women who are not healthy may become so by taking Hood's Serravallo's. This medicine, by making the blood rich and pure and giving good appetite and perfect digestion, imparts vitality and strength to the system.

PROSPECTUS

The Canadian Portland Cement Company has been formed for the purpose of acquiring the cement business carried on by the Rathbun Company at Napanee Mills and Marlbank in the Province of Ontario; the business of the Beaver Portland Cement Company at Marlbank and the business of the St. Lawrence Portland Cement Company at Montreal, in the Province of Quebec.

The assets are to be turned over to the new company free of all encumbrances and comprise the following:
 Factories. The factory of the Rathbun Company at Napanee Mills, with ample factory site and clay lands, and with all buildings, plant, etc., in full running order, having a capacity of 325 barrels of completed cement per day.

The factory of the Beaver Portland Cement Company at Marlbank, controlled by Messrs. James Dobson and Chas. J. Webb of Philadelphia, with all lands, buildings, and plant used in connection therewith, having a capacity of at least 500 barrels of completed cement per day.

The leasehold factory and premises of the St. Lawrence Portland Cement Company, of Montreal, used in the manufacture of Silica Cement.
 MARL PROPERTIES. The Marl deposits at Marlbank, with dredges, plant, and appurtenances connected therewith, and owned and used by the Beaver Portland Cement Company and the Rathbun Company in connection with their cement business, containing altogether about 62 acres of land.

The report of Mr. M. J. Butler, C. E., shows that the supply of marl upon these properties is practically inexhaustible, the survey showing 19,835,773 cubic yards of marl, sufficient to produce at least 69,425,000 barrels of Portland Cement.

STOCK. Supplies, cement, manufactured or in process of manufacture, or cash to the amount of $50,000.

TRADE MARKS—PATENT RIGHTS. The "Star" brand and other brands and trade marks of the Rathbun Company and the Beaver Company, the Silica Cement Patent Rights for the Dominion of Canada owned by the Rathbun Company, and the goodwill and businesses, including all the trade marks and rights of all the Companies above named.

Silica Cement is manufactured from Portland Cement and sand, by a patented process exclusively controlled by this Company for the Dominion of Canada, under the patent rights above referred to. This product has been most favourably received by consumers, and forms a growing and profitable trade.

The above-mentioned trade marks and brands have taken a long time and great expense to establish, and are an asset of great value. The whole output of the new Company will be manufactured from the same materials and under the same management and staff and sold under these brands.

MARKET

The Cement business of the Rathbun Company has been established for a number of years, and the "Star" brand of Portland Cement and the "Citadel" and other brands of Silica Cement have been thoroughly established as first-class, being accepted by the Government of the Dominion of Canada, by the Grand Trunk Railway Company, the Canadian Pacific Railway Company, the Intercolonial Railway Company, by the Cities of Montreal and Toronto, and by other steam and electric railways and municipalities throughout the Dominion.

Prior to the incorporation of this Company the Rathbun Company had contracted for the sale of their whole output for the year 1900, and no difficulty is anticipated in disposing of the entire product of the new Company in view of the extent and character of the demand for the brands of cement of which that product will consist. The confidence of the railways, municipalities, and the principal purchasers of cement throughout the country in the brands of this Company having been gained, not only as a result of scientific tests, but by years of actual use, such cement has become a staple article of commerce, the demand for which has increased each year, and is certain to increase in even greater proportion in the future. No important engineering or architectural work can be undertaken without the use of cement. Every steam and electric railway annually uses large quantities in the construction and maintenance of its works. It is used to an increasing extent in replacing masonry, being much more easily moulded to the required form. The foundation of every permanent pavement laid upon the streets of our cities is constructed with it, and not only in the larger cities, but also in the smaller towns and villages throughout the country it is gradually displacing wood in the construction of sidewalks.

RAILWAY FACILITIES

The marl beds, clay banks, and works of this Company are situated directly on the line of the Bay of Quinte Railway, midway between junctions with the Canadian Pacific Railway at Tweed and with the Grand Trunk Railway at Napanee. This affords to the output of this Company competing lines for railway freight, while access to water communication is obtained at Deseronto and Kingston over the Bay of Quinte railway.

The location of their works will enable the Company to manufacture the larger portion of their output without railway transport of either clay or marl, and to load the finished cement direct from the works upon the railway cars.

PROFITS

The Toronto General Trusts Corporation have made a special audit of the cement business of the Rathbun Company at Napanee Mills for the year ending 31st December, 1899, and their certificate shows a net profit of $84,682.80.

This result was attained with a plant producing an average of 325 barrels of completed cement per day.

The plant and equipment of the Beaver Company are only now being completed, but that Company undertake to deliver to the new Company by 1st June their plant and equipment, completed in every respect, and of the most modern design, capable of producing 500 barrels of completed cement per day.

It will be seen by the above that the profits from the business of the Rathbun Company alone were largely in excess of the total amount of $450,000 Preference Stock dividend on the Preference Stock of the new Company, and it may reasonably be expected that the earnings of the combined Companies will be such as to enable the new Company to pay the additional 1 per cent. dividend on this stock. It is also anticipated that by the consolidation of interests the cost of production and sale will be considerably reduced.

As has been already pointed out, the Company do not anticipate any difficulty in disposing of their entire output, and in this connection it may be mentioned that last year the Rathbun Company found it necessary to buy a considerable amount of imported cement which was used in the manufacture of Silica Cement, their own factory not being able to supply the demand in sufficient quantity.

DIVIDENDS

The Preference Stock is entitled to a first cumulative dividend of 7 per cent. per annum, payable half-yearly, and after the Common Stock has received a like dividend shall be entitled to share with the Common Stock in any surplus profits up to, but not exceeding, a further 1 per cent. upon the Preference Stock.

RESERVE FUND

The By-laws of the Company provide that after payment of the 7 per cent. dividend upon the Preference Stock, and before any dividend shall be declared and paid upon the Common Stock, the Company shall set apart out of any profits earned, as undivided profits, an annual sum of not less than $15,000 and not more than $25,000 until a Reserve Fund of $150,000 has been accumulated, which fund is to be used by the Company, or invested, as may be directed by the Board. The By-laws of the Company also provide for the election of two directors by the Preference stockholders to represent them on the Board.

AUDIT

The Toronto General Trusts Corporation have undertaken the yearly audit of the Company's affairs, and will certify that the proper amount has been set aside for the Reserve Fund, as provided by the By-laws, before dividends are declared on the Common Stock. They will also act as Transfer Agents of the Company, and will countersign all certificates of stock.

DISPOSAL OF PREFERENCE STOCK

Of the total amount of $450,000 Preference Stock, $200,000 has already been taken at par by Directors and others interested in the Company, $50,000 remains in the Treasury, and the balance of $200,000 is now offered for sale at par by Messrs. Osler & Hammond, 18 King Street West, Toronto, the right being reserved by them to accept the offers of applicants for the whole or any proportion of the amounts applied for.

A deposit of 10 per cent. is payable on application, and the balance on allotment, which will be made not later than the 5th June prox. If no allotment is made deposit will be returned, and if a partial allotment is made the surplus deposit will be applied towards the amount payable on allotment.

In making allotments regard will be had to the order in which applications for stock are received.

Application will be made in due course to have the Preference stock listed on Toronto Stock Exchange.

Report of the Auditor of the Toronto General Trusts Corporation on the cement business of the Rathbun Company, and report of Mr. M. J. Butler, C. E., on the marl properties, may be seen at the office of the undersigned, where forms of application, together with copies of Prospectus, may also be obtained.

Buffalo, N. Y., March — The Service Building of the Pan-American Exposition, to be held at Buffalo, N. Y., on the Niagara Frontier, from May 1st to November 1st, 1901, was the first building of the Exposition to be erected and is used by the corps of officials and employees having direct charge of the constructive work of the Exposition.

The building, which is situated on the west side of the grounds, is 95x145. It is in the form of a hollow square, having two stories on its exterior facades and three stories on the court side. The entrance, which is in the form of a driveway, faces the north and communicates directly with the inner court. Part way down this entrance, and from each side, extend the main corridors. That on the right leads to offices and apartments to be used for police headquarters and hospital service, including the rooms for the use of the Commandant of Police Station, the Chief of the Fire Department, medical waiting room, drug supplies, offices for a surgeon and his assistants and an operating room. The hospital has a porte cochere entrance for ambulance and emergency purposes.

The other portions of the first floor are taken up by a large room for the officers and clerks who have charge of the admissions and collections, and the auditing of accounts; these rooms being fitted with fire-proof vaults. The working office of the Director of Works, with his private office and stenographer's room, offices for the landscape Architect, the Superintendent of Building Construction, Purchasing Agent, Chief Engineer, Mechanical and Electrical Engineer, and accommodations for the officers having charge of Transportation and Installation, Exhibits and Concessions, are arranged to carry on the business of these Departments.

On the second floor is the large draughting room; used by the force of architectural draughtsmen. This Department has separate offices and draughting rooms, with a large vault for valuable drawings. On this floor are the sleeping apartments of the Director of Works and the Chiefs of the various Bureaus, comprising the Department of Works. Here also are numerous apartments for such of the employees as the nature of their duties requires to be continuously at the Exposition grounds. A kitchen and dining room, apartments for the janitor and hospital nurses, and several guest chambers are provided on this floor. The top floor of the building has additional apartments, a large blue-printing room for the use of the Architects and Engineers Departments, and the operating rooms for the Official Photographer of the Exposition.

The building has a cellar. Frame

PEN, PENCIL AND BRUSH.

Now that John Ruskin is dead a "Ruskin union" has been formed in London for the purpose of studying his works.

Emperor William has commissioned William Pape, the artist, to paint the scene of Archbishop Simar reading homage.

The name of Samuel Smiles has been so long forgotten by the reading public that many will probably be surprised to learn that the author of "Self Help" is still alive. He lives in London.

Winston Spencer Churchill, the British war correspondent now in the Transvaal, has published his first novel. It bears the title "Savrola" and depicts the political intrigue and revolution in the imaginary republic of Laurania.

The clay model for the bust of the late Joseph Medill of Chicago has been badly damaged in some way in the studio of the sculptor, Richard H. Park of Chicago, and he will have to reproduce it from memory.

German Catholics Meet.

Johnstown, Pa., May 21.—The seventh annual rally of the German Catholics of Pennsylvania opened here today. About 10,000 visitors and 1,000 delegates are present.

The program of the convention is as follows: This afternoon there will be a reception to the delegates at St. Joseph's School Hall, which is the headquarters of the convention. At 7 p. m. the delegates will assemble at the Cambria theatre. Tomorrow night there will be a mass meeting at the theatre, when several church dignitaries and others will deliver addresses. On Tuesday at 9 a. m. a pos-construction has been used throughout. The studs are covered on the inside with composition board and sheathed on the outside with hemlock planks, which are covered with cement plaster, the final finish having the appearance of stucco.

The ornamental work, including the flag standards, finials, festoons, etc., are of staff. The roof is covered with Spanish tile of iron. The building is in its architecture a free adaptation of the Spanish Renaissance, such as is shown in old Californian and Mexican missions and churches. This style was followed as closely as the requirements and exigencies of arrangement for light and space necessary in a first class working office allowed.

The building was erected ready for occupancy in 33 working days.

PROGRESS OF THE WORK ON THE EXPOSITION GROUNDS TO JANUARY 20, 1900.

Work was begun on the site September 26th. Since that date the land has been cleared of stumps, twenty-four hundred small poplar trees, twelve hundred willow bushes and seven hundred assorted shrubs have been planted about the border of the grounds. A boundary fence has been built eight feet high and twelve thousand feet long. A nursery has been prepared and several thousand trees and shrubs have been placed therein. Seventy-five large trees have been transplanted from points in the site to avenues on the border of the grounds. Some ten thousand cubic yards of top soil have been scraped, piled, mixed, and turned over. Four thousand yards of excavation have been removed from the East Lake; two green houses 20x30x10, with propagating houses adjoining have been built, and a number of cold frames have been set out.

The grounds have been cross-sectioned; buildings, canals, and roads have been staked out, 13,000 feet of sewer have been constructed. Plans for fire mains and domestic water supply have been completed. Route for intramural railway has been surveyed, and from 4,000 to 5,000 feet of canal, which encircles the grounds, have been excavated.

Two thousand poplar trees and maples have been received and prepared for early planting in the Spring. Two hundred and fifty Monumental cedars have been prepared, boxed, and are now awaiting Spring before being shipped from New Jersey.

Plans have been completed for the foundations of the Agricultural Building, and complete plans for Machinery and Transportation, one of the large buildings—350x500. Bids for all the main buildings will be invited at an early date, and even before Spring of this year much progress in the constructive work will be made.

He Was With Roberts.

Brookville, Ont., May 21.—E. Haywood, a resident of Lynn, a short distance from here, several under Lord Roberts in the Afghan campaign 20 years ago, as a private in the 86th Regiment. Two months ago Captain Fisher, of Brookville, applied to the War Office at London for the Afghan medal to which Private Haywood was entitled, and the medal has reached here. Private Haywood, with his regiment, was besieged in Kandahar, and to relieve the city Lord Roberts made that famous march from Kabul to Kandahar. After the relief of the city, Lord Roberts, with his remaining force and the garrison, inflicted a crushing defeat on the Afghans. In this battle Private Haywood was engaged.

Bad Shooting Fatalities.

Chicago, May 21.—A special to the Record from Paulding, Ohio, says: Simon W. Cramer, representative of this State, accidentally shot and killed his wife. Mr. and Mrs. Cramer were attempting to dislodge a rat from a pile of debris. Mrs. Cramer was on the opposite side of the woodshed from her husband, who held in his hand a loaded shotgun. He thought he saw the rat and fired, striking Mrs. Cramer full in the face. Death was almost instantaneous. Mrs. Cramer was sixty years old.

Looker-for New Laureate.

Paris, May 21.—Major Marchand, French hero, has been applied to the Government for another mission to Africa. He wishes to go to the region of Lake Tchad to organize the fruits of the recent French expedition, and to put French influence in South Africa on a more secure basis.

Dutch Diplomatic British.

Kington, Jamaica, May 21.—Mail advices received here announce that the South African war has caused bad blood between the natives and British residents of Surinam, Dutch Guiana. Bands of native parades before the British Consulate, using most insulting language towards Great Britain. Some days ago matters reached a climax, when a Dutch officer was compelled by an officer of the Royal Mail Steamship Company to apologize for publicly insulting the British nation. Trouble is feared.

A large dog broke into the henhouse of Mr. John Trombley, Charlotte st., on Saturday evening and killed seven hens.

A SUMMARY OF THE BRITISH-BOER CAMPAIGN

CAPTURED MANY PRISONERS.

How Defender of Mafeking Caught the Enemy in a Trap.

London, May 21, 4 p.m.—The War Office has received the following despatch from Lord Roberts:

"Kroonstad, May 21.—Major (Colonel B. T. Mahon) reports having joined Plumer at Jananada May 15. He was followed by a Boer commando from Moritzburg and turned westward to avoid it. May 18 he was attacked in the thick bush, losing five men killed, 2 missing and 24 wounded, including a Daily Mail correspondent. Hands, dangerously. The Boers lost more than Mahon in killed and wounded."

"Another report has been received from Baden-Powell, dated May 13, giving important news. Before dawn May 13 a storming party 250 strong, personally led by Kloss, rushed the pickets and reached the Staat and protectorate camp from the westward, along the Malopo Valley, a strong military demonstration being made at the same time along the eastern front of our position. Our western posts closed in and stopped the Boer supports following, thus cutting off Kloss's retreat while the town defences stopped his further advance. His force got divided in the darkness and a strong party was placed between them, completely surrounding them. Fighting continued all day long. "Soon after midnight the two parties surrounded and the other was driven out of the Staat under a heavy fire. Ten dead and 19 wounded of the enemy were left behind and 288 prisoners were taken, including Kloss and 9 officers. Seventeen Frenchmen and many Germans were among the prisoners. Our losses were six men killed and two officers and 9 men wounded."

BOER DELEGATES AT WASHINGTON.

Delegate Fischer Thinks Kruger Has Made no Peace Proposals.

Washington, May 21.—"It is possible that President Kruger may have asked for a cessation of hostilities," said Abraham, head of the Boer delegation, on Saturday night. "I would be inclined, however, to look upon the report as untrue."

"When I left Pretoria there was no talk of destroying the mines at Johannesburg. But I would not be surprised if the Boers should destroy the mines to show their contempt for Lord Roberts's warning that he would hold those concerned in the destruction of the mines personally responsible for the act."

The credentials of the Boer delegates in Washington will be submitted to the Secretary of State to-day.

Commissioner Fischer expressed himself as wishing to be frank without giving offence to the American Government. "We are playing a wholly unaccustomed role as diplomats," said he, "and it is of the utmost moment that we should not give offence to the American Government by violating any of the technical rules of this game which we know nothing about."

The delegates were given a big public reception last night.

APPEAL TO THE POWERS.

International Peace Bureau will Try to End the War.

Berne, Switzerland, May 19.—The committee of the International Peace Bureau has decided to make a formal appeal to the 25 powers who are signers of The Hague Peace Conference in favor of the restoration of peace in South Africa. The committee calls attention to the clause of the convention for the peaceful settlement of international conflicts by the terms of which the signatory powers agreed to use all efforts for the settlement. The committee declares an offer of mediation cannot be considered by Great Britain as an unfriendly act.

The appeal seeks to show that the clauses providing for the settlement of international disputes apply not only to conflicts arising between the signatory powers but to all international differences. Therefore it is claimed the offer of mediation by the powers in the present conflict comes within the category of cases anticipated by the conference, and could not be regarded by Great Britain as an unfriendly act. The committee further agrees that a mediating power, as defined at The Hague, ought not only to take steps to conciliate the conflicting claims of the disputing States, but ought to suggest a means of conciliation, which has not yet been done in the present dispute. The committee therefore begs the powers who have gained the respect of the world in signing The Hague convention to ask themselves whether the hour has come to consider an offer of mediation on their part as merely a fulfillment of the obligation to humanity or, to use the expression employed at The Hague, the "fulfillment of the duty imposed upon them" by membership in the Society of Civilized States. Finally the committee expresses the opinion that the efforts of international diplomacy, if skilful, honest, and authoritative, would secure the acceptance of proposals, which would be advanced in the name of the civilized world, and that they may quickly secure the conclusion of a peace honorable to all parties.

PEACE IS NEAR.

British Government does not Anticipate any Negotiations Just Yet.

London, May 21, 225 p.m.—The Associated Press is able to say that no message from President Kruger, direct or indirect, has recently been received by Lord Salisbury or by any department of the British Government, nor it may be added, is any communication from him dealing with the question of cessation of hostilities expected by them in the immediate future. The proximity of peace according to the Government point of view, will remain a matter of military progress. How soon the latter may bring about the former is still too supposititious a question for serious forecast on the part of any high Government official. The consensus of opinion as gleaned by the Associated Press at the Government offices is that the Boer delegates will exhaust every effort in the United States before President Kruger goes directly, though Lord Salisbury himself does not believe the delegates will accomplish much in America. The official confirmation of the relief of Mafeking does away with the lingering doubts which existed in the minds of a few people who had got into the habit of believing nothing but War Office despatches. With belated enthusiasm that department hoisted the flag on receipt of the official telegram, and the crowd cheered. It is announced that Colonel Baden-Powell will be made a major-general.

Mafeking was actually relieved by Colonel B. T. Mahon, who served in the Dongola and Nile expeditions with General Kitchener. Lord Roberts' latest despatch merely continues his description of the organization of the transport of supplies and the rest for the men of the British forces in the Free State and Natal found necessary after their long, quick marches. This delay seems likely to continue for a few days.

British Convoy Attacked. A despatch from Kroonstad dated Sunday May 20 says a British convoy on its way to Lindley was attacked by the Boers and obliged to halt. The result of the attack is not known, but it is evident that the Boers facing the main British army are on the alert and aggressive.

BULLER'S PATH IS BARRED. Laing's Nek Tunnel Totally Destroyed with Dynamite. Volksrust, on the Transvaal Border, May 17, via Lorenzo Marquez, May 18, 8 p.m.—The large tunnel at Laing's nek, which was 2,213 feet long, and which afforded the only means of railway communication between Natal and the Transvaal has just been completely destroyed by the Boers, who blew it up with dynamite.

A very large quantity of the explosive was used, and its effect was terrific. The shock was felt for a great distance from the tunnel, which is now completely coked up from end to end with huge masses of earth and rock, which will require months and great engineering skill to remove. All the commandoes are occupying fine strategic position and feel confident that they can easily repel any attempt by Gen. Buller to enter the Transvaal by way of Laing's nek.

Marvellous Developments

THE ROB ROY
MINES

Are taking place at the property. Matters are in such a state that we really cannot see how it is possible for us to fail now. A practical miner of 33 years' experience told one of our shareholders this week, that where ore was found scattered as ours is it was an unfailing indication of an immense ore body—he had never in all his experience known this sign to fail.

We have found ore in several new places, and our Superintendent writes us this week, "I feel it in my bones that we are on the eve of a strike."

The special issue of stock at fifteen cents (15) per share is being taken up freely, orders coming in from all over by mail. Orders for about 18,000 shares have been received this week so far.

This stock is one of the safest investments at this price that you can get into and offers opportunities for making large profits very seldom met with, and for a thoroughly safe and remunerative investment we recommend these shares. As soon as we strike the Ore Body the property will develop itself and no more shares will be offered. Get a copy of the Ferguson "Eagle" from our office if you haven't seen one and see what the Rob Roy is thought of there.

THE LATE THOMAS CAHILL.

Death of One of Peterborough's Most Esteemed Citizens.

It is with much sorrow that we are forced to chronicle the death of Mr. Thomas Cahill, which sad event occurred last night about eight o'clock. Mr. Cahill had not been in good health for some months, although he was able to attend to his duties in the Inland Revenue office in the Customs building. On Saturday he was around as usual, and in his usual health. In fact he seemed better than he had been for some time. During Saturday night he was seized with a severe chill, and early on Sunday morning Dr. Mohr was summoned and subsequently Dr. Haliday was called in consultation. Pneumonia had set in, and this, added to his heart trouble, made his case very critical. Realizing his condition, he had his will drawn, and spoke a final word to the grief-stricken family around his bedside. After this he lapsed into semi-consciousness and remained so until the end.

Mr. Cahill was born in Ireland, and was comparatively a young man, being only 32 years of age. He settled in Peterborough about 40 years ago. He married a Miss Sheehan, who, with a family, one son and six daughters, survive him. Mr. Cahill was a self-made man. About 1875 he was appointed assistant collector of Inland Revenue, a position he held until his death. For about 20 years sat in the Council, and was always regarded as one of the most capable men that ever sat at the board. In 1896 he was nominated for mayor, but was defeated.

Generous and kindhearted, Mr. Cahill was esteemed and beloved by everybody, and his death will be deeply deplored, for we believe of him it can be said—he had not an enemy. To the sorrowing wife and family the Times extends its heartfelt sympathy.

From South Africa.
Dr. Young yesterday received a card from his brother, Lieut. Young, who is with the Canadian Mounted Rifles in South Africa. He says that Col. Greenwood and all the Peterborough men are in good health. The climate is not to be compared to that of Canada, the sand storms and heat being almost unbearable.

A Good Appointment.

The Canada Life—Canada's greatest life insurance company—is progressing even more so now, since Mr. E. W. Cox became associated with the management than ever before. It has divided the eastern district into two parts, with Mr. James Mix as manager for that portion between Toronto and Kingston. For a number of years Mr. Mix has been in Barrie, representing the interests of Hon. George A. Cox in that town and for the last 18 months he has been connected with the local branch of the Canada Life. During that time he has made many friends in town, who will extend hearty congratulations to him on his promotion.

Lakefield Cement Works.

Mr. R. C. Strickland of Lakefield was in town yesterday and dropped into the Times office. In discussing the proposed cement works in that village, Mr. Strickland said that he believed it would be a good thing for Lakefield. The large amount of money which will be spent in the construction of the buildings and in operating the works will give an impetus to trade that will be far-reaching. Additional population will be added to the place, which means greater civic revenue. Mr. Strickland thought that the works would be of no advantage to himself, personally, but nevertheless he was in favor of assisting the company for the sake of the great benefit the works would be to the village at large.

Habeas Corpus Granted.

Toronto World-In Chambers, before Mr. Justice Hume, an application was made for the release from custody, on a habeas corpus, and for a writ of certiorari, to bring up the conviction of William Mitchell, Peterborough, a junk dealer, who is serving a three-months sentence for receiving stolen goods. The commitment, which was made by Police Magistrate Dumble, is, it is alleged, faulty, and the proceedings are said to have been irregular. The matter was enlarged until Friday.

Services will be held in St. Paul's church, Lakefield, at 8.30 a.m.

In the afternoon at two o'clock a splendid programme of athletic games will be run off including foot-racing, jumping, etc. The Hastings Band will be in attendance all day. ## HARD TO BREAK.

But the Coffee Habit can be Put Off.

"I was a coffee user from early childhood, but it finally made me so nervous that I spent a great many sleepless nights, starting at every sound I heard, and suffering with a continual dull headache. My hands trembled and I was also troubled with shortness of breath and palpitation of the heart. The whole system showed a poisoned condition and I was told to leave off coffee, for that was the cause of it. I was unable to break myself of the habit, until someone induced me to try Postum Food Coffee. "The first trial, the Food Coffee was flat and tasteless and I thought it was horrid stuff, but my friend urged me to try again and let it boil longer. This time I had a very delightful beverage and am now in a very greatly improved condition of health. "My brother is also using Postum instead of coffee and a friend of ours, Mr. W., who was a great coffee user, found himself growing more and more nervous and was troubled at times with dizzy spells. His wife suffered with nausea and indigestion, also from coffee. They left it off and have been using Postum Food Coffee for some time and are now in a perfect condition of health." Grace C. M. Cuyabanga Falls, Ohio.

No Christening Science.

Sir,—Will you kindly ask through the Times if someone will not give me a few of the reasons why Christian Science is so strongly objected to by the majority of the people? I am interested in it, and desire to know if there is anything wrong about it, excepting that those who practice it occasionally allow their patients to die without having a medical doctor when he could perhaps save the patient's life. It is generally thought that Christian Science is a work of the devil. I think that is a mistake. I trust that you will give me some information on this subject through your valuable paper, and thanking you in advance.

19 WILLIAM STREET. - TORONTO

HER MOST GRACIOUS MAJESTY QUEEN VICTORIA

Who is 81 years of age to-day and who is monarch of the mightiest empire the world has seen.

The Queen's eighty-first birthday is a notable event—the rounding off of a marvellous career. She was 18 years old when she ascended the throne; now she is 81; the figures are reversed. For nearly 63 years Victoria has reigned over the great British Empire, and yet it was due to a chapter of accidents that she became a Queen. Her uncle, George IV., eldest son of King George III., had a daughter, Princess Charlotte, a bright and beautiful young woman, whom the nation had learned to look upon as the future sovereign. Charlotte was married to Leopold, an uncle of our Queen's future husband, but she died in childbirth in 1817, thus leaving William IV. as the heir to his brother George IV. Then William was married to the young Princess Adelaide on the same day that his younger brother Edward was married to Princess Victoria. William's wife had two children, but they both died young. That left Victoria the daughter of Edward, the heir to the throne after William, unless her aunt Adelaide should have another baby; and the old books tell us that, while that event remained uncertain, it was thought best not to let Princess Victoria know that she would probably be Queen Victoria some day. When she was twelve years old, the information was imparted to her, and six years later, on the death of William IV., Queen Victoria ascended the throne.

There are some oddities about the succession of a Queen to the throne. The eldest sons of the sovereign is the heir, to the exclusion of older sisters; but a daughter who has no brothers succeeds, to the exclusion of younger brothers of her father or their male descendants. Thus we see that Edward IV., son of Henry VIII's third wife, ascended the throne in preference to his elder sisters, Mary and Elizabeth, who succeeded him in turn; but if Princess Charlotte had survived her father, George IV., she would have reigned instead of William IV., and on the same principle Victoria ascended the throne in 1837, though three of her father's brothers were alive at that time. Again, the first child of Queen Victoria and Prince Albert was a daughter, who is still living, but the second child, the present Prince of Wales, is the heir apparent to the throne, and we look to him, his children and his grandchildren for our future sovereigns.

Our German fellow citizens should take as much interest in the Queen's birthday as those of British origin. Our Queen's eldest daughter was married to the Crown Prince of Prussia, and her son is the present Emperor of Germany. Our Queen's mother and grandmother and husband were all Germans. Indeed, the reigning houses of the two nationalities are so intimately related that, when one thinks of possible war between Britain and Germany, or when one reads that the Germans sympathize with the Boers and dislike the British, the idea seems entirely unnatural. Family quarrels have gone out of fashion.

Our Queen is eighty-one years old to-day, yet she is keenly alive to the duties and responsibilities of her exalted position. Only the other day she was reviewing some of her troops, and a few weeks ago she made an extended visit to Ireland, doing an amount of work that would have proved exhaustive to a much younger person. It cannot be expected that her subjects throughout the Empire will have many more opportunities to wish Queen Victoria many happy returns of her birthday, but they will not forget her, nor soon cease to do honor to her memory. Her reign has been long and prosperous, and from the very first she has retained the affection as well as the respect of her subjects. The twenty-fourth of May is a day of merriment, but its enjoyment need not be marred by indulgence in a few serious recollections and reflections concerning the reasons why we sing "O God save the Queen."

METHODISTS IN CONVENTION.

Peterborough District of Methodist Church
Annual Session.

The Methodist District Meeting was continued yesterday, the following lay delegates taking part—Thos. Morrow, Jas. Wetherland, Theo. Joye, R. W. Clarke, W. Weir, Robert Walsh, Peter Dawson, John Hull, J. M. Welford, W. Coughton, R. Graham, Thos. Thompson, Jos. Sampson, Jos. Barnett, H. Harrison, Jas. Hales. It was resolved on motion Messrs. Clarke and Steele that in the case of Aspley Mission, we recommend the total deficit of salary be added to the sustentation fund committee.

The following Conference Committees are following Committee—Rev. J. E. Moore, Sabbath School Committee—Rev. C. H. and Dr. Couch. Epworth League Committee—Rev. T. P. and Mr. T. P. Graham. Sustentation Fund Committee—Rev. H. Fosse and Mr. R. W. Clarke. Missionary Committee—Mr. John Hull. Reports were read from the various churches.

A resolution was presented by Rev. Dr. Cade commending the 25th Century Fund and expressing gratitude to the people for subscribing over three quarters of a million dollars so far. Rev. Dr. Cade also presented a resolution expressing appreciation to Rev. S. J. Shorey for his services as chairman of the district for the past three years, and regret that he is removing to another district. The meeting adjourned with prayer, followed by the benediction.

A Good Implement.
When a Times representative was in Quebec a few days ago he noticed that the corporation laborers use very large and heavily-ironed hoes in connection with cleaning the streets. The iron portion of the hoes referred to are 12 inches by 5 inches, and tapering from one-eighth to one-sixteenth of an inch in thickness. They are excellent for street cleaning. One half dozen should be ordered for Peterborough, and more later on if they are found effective.

Measuring Walls.
Lindsay Post.—Mr. R. W. Errett of Peterborough Marine Surveyor, was in town yesterday measuring the local steamers, yachts and scows. He left for Lakeshore to-day. Strange, isn't it that we have to look to Peterboro for a man to perform this duty when we have dozens of men qualified to undertake it. Of course, the perquisites are not large, which is possibly the reason there are not many applicants. All the same, we want a home man, and we hope Mr. Geo. McHugh, M. P., will give the matter his early attention.

Camps of Instruction.
The date of the annual camp of instruction affecting the local corps is now officially given out. The 3rd Trigonometrical Battalion of Infantry, on the same day as the Dragons go into camp at Deseronto along with the 2nd and 8th field batteries.

ROBERTS RESUMES HIS ADVANCE UPON THE VAAL AND PRETORIA!

He is Now Now Twenty Miles North of Kroonstad Eight Hundred Rebels Surrender.

THIRD BOER CAPITAL OCCUPIED BY THE BRITISH

Hamilton Reaches Heilbron After a Series of Engagements With a Boer Force Under DeWet, Who is Retiring Before British Advance.

The Post publishes a statement to the effect that Mr. Kruger has consented to unconditional surrender. This is doubted by many as the crafty President is surely trying to gain time. The work of erecting defences at Johannesburg and Pretoria in progress with feverish haste. A despatch from Natal states that general Buller is almost ready for a forward movement. The destruction of the railway by the enemy was a clever move, as it gave the Boers time to prepare for retreat toward the capital.

London, May 23. Lord Roberts has already advanced twenty miles from Kroonstad towards the Vaal, now only sixty miles away. Heilbron, the third capital of the Free State, thirty miles to the northwest, is in the hands of General Ian Hamilton. The passage of the Rhenoster River, thirty miles to the northwest, has been forced by Gen. French. The British army in the Free State is drawn up like an equilateral triangle, with the base pointing towards the Vaal and the apex towards Bloemfontein. The apex is at Honing's Spruit, occupied by Roberts, French is at the left base, the Rhenoster; and Hamilton at the right angle. Heilbron, in other words, Roberts is on the railway, with French far away to the south and left, and Hamilton an equal distance to the north and right. Such a formation is evidently intended by wide turning movements to force the Boers back upon the Vaal, which, despite the erroneous reports of yesterday, is still unoccupied by the British. The position of Hamilton at Heilbron gives him command of another line of railway—the branch from Heilbron to Wolfes Hoek, on the main line from Bloemfontein to the Vaal. An indication of the demoralized condition of the burghers is furnished by the fact that the three British columns are so far apart and out of touch with each other, a course which would not be adopted if virile and formidable opposition were expected.

London, May 23. Enquiries made by representatives of the Associated Press to-day confirm the exclusive announcement of the Associated Press yesterday that no peace proposition, or communication of any kind from President Kruger has been received as reported in Press despatches here.

London, May 23, 8.14 p.m. A despatch from Mafeking dated May 17, the first message except Col. Baden Powell's despatch, forwarded since the relief, says—The town was filled with joy, and many people wept as they greeted their deliverers, and that the scene as the troops traversed the streets baffles description.

Washington, May 23. Mr. Fischer, one of the Boer envoys, spoke freely with a representative of the Associated Press as to their general plans for the future. He said it was their purpose to visit ten or twelve of the principal cities of the United States and tell the people of the Boer cause. They were, he said, particularly anxious to avoid even the semblance of taking any part in American politics.

They came to plead to the whole American people. It is possible that they will eventually reach San Francisco stopping en route at Chicago and Cincinnati.

The envoys hope to have completed their trip in two months and be ready to leave for Europe before they planned important work. Mr. Fischer said that they did not contemplate making any set addresses in the cities visited, but would give the people plain talk on the subjects in which would depend entirely upon what particular phases of the great question at issue the people wished to be informed upon. He wanted it distinctly understood that he and his friends wished to avoid any partisan demonstrations that might be construed to mean that their sympathies were for one particular party in the United States much stronger than with another. A time for their departure from Washington has not yet been fixed.

CANADIANS WOUNDED.

Ottawa, Ont., May 23.—A cable was received to-day announcing that the following non-commissioned officers and men belonging to the Canadian contingents have arrived at the Herbert Hospital, Woolwich, from South Africa: Pte E. D. Craig, Pte. W. Marquette, Corporal A. Lohman, Pte. A. Bruch, Lance Corp. F. D. Rae, Col. Sergt. C. Thompson, Pte. J. Johnston, Pte. R. B. McFarlane, Pte. Carew, Pte. H. Durant, Pte. McConnell, L. F. Finch, Pte. Fradham.

REBELS SURRENDERING.

Kimberley, May 22.—About 800 rebels have surrendered at Vryburg, north of Kimberley and a little more than half way between that place and Mafeking. The road is all clear from Mafeking and all opposition in this district is practically ended.

WARREN'S PROGRESS.

Cape Town, May 22.—Gen. Warren has occupied Douglas after heavy fighting and without sustaining any loss. The Boers have retreated to the north.

FRENCH ADVANCING.

Honing Spruit, Orange Free State Tuesday evening, May 24.—General French has crossed the Rhenoster River, northwest of here. This movement combined with Gen. Ian Hamilton's occupation of Heilbron, results in the Boer position 20 miles in our front untenable, but the latest reports received say the Burghers are prepared to make a strong resistance and possess 15 guns. Fifteen prisoners were taken to-day.

KRUGER FEARS THE WEST.

He Dreads a British Attack from the Direction of Mafeking. London, May 23.—The Times has received a despatch from its correspondent at Mafeking, who was released by the Boers after having been a prisoner for seven months in Pretoria. He quotes a high Government official as saying that President Kruger dreads an invasion from the west. He says that if an attack is made upon that quarter the Boers will be done for. They can check the British on the east, but have not enough men for the west.

DESPATCH FROM LORD ROBERTS.

London, May 23.—The War Office issues a despatch from Lord Roberts under date of Honing Spruit, May 23, announcing the receipt by him of the following message from Major-General Buller:—

Mafeking, May 17.—I am happy to inform you that Mafeking was successfully relieved. The Northern and Southern columns joined hands on May 15 and attacked the enemy yesterday, and after a small engagement entirely defeated them with loss. The British casualties were three killed and 22 wounded. The relieving force marched into Mafeking at 9 a.m., and the relief and defence forces combined and moved out and attacked the enemy's head laager. We shelled them out and nearly captured Symons and took 1 gun, a flag, and a large amount of ammunition, stores, etc. five dead and 15 wounded Boers were found. The enemy appeared to be retreating in all directions except one commando, which is lying in wait to cover the retreat of the remainder. Capt. McLaren and Corp. Murray were found in the Boer hospital. They are doing well. The town people and the garrison of Mafeking are heartily grateful for their relief. Lord Roberts' despatch further states—Ian Hamilton reached Heilbron this morning after a series of engagements with a Boer force under DeWet, who is retiring before him. Broadwood has captured 15 Boer wagons. There have been 75 casualties in Hamilton's force to yesterday evening. He marched here this morning.

NOT SING FOR PEACE.

New York, May 23.—President Kruger of the South African Republic has sent a cablegram from Pretoria to the World, dated yesterday, saying in four words that the report that the Transvaal Government is suing for peace, is untrue. "It is a gross misstatement."

ADVANCING IN FORCE.

Lord Roberts Again Moves Upon the Boer Positions.

London, May 23.—2.05 p.m.—Once more Lord Roberts is advancing in force. The wait at Kroonstad is over and already the main British army is about twenty miles north of its former resting place. Lord Roberts is at Honing Spruit Station, while flanking him on either side of the railway are General French's cavalry and General Ian Hamilton's mounted infantry, both slightly in advance of Lord Roberts and threatening to surround op the Boer position, which extends for twenty miles due north. Gen. French probably crossed the Rhenoster River, near its junction with Honing Spruit, which runs thence to Honing Spruit Station. The main British army will probably advance along the railway, while General French converges from the west and Gen. Hamilton from the east. Against this overwhelming force the Boers will probably follow their usual tactics of retreating to positions which, doubtless, have been prepared in advance for their occupation.

Gen. French and Gen. Hamilton are separated from each other by about forty miles, while Lord Roberts is within twelve miles of Gen. French and thirty miles of Gen. Hamilton.

Since the last despatch left Honing Spruit yesterday, Lord Roberts has doubtless still further advanced and by now is either engaging or following the retreating Boers.

Despatches to the Associated Press from Heilbron says that the Boer general De Wet had 4,000 men posted on the adjacent hill, but that he retired when Gen. Hamilton approached. President Steyn fled from Heilbron May 22, and his destination is not known.

BOERS AT HARMONEA.

Five Thousand of them May Make a Strong Stand.

London, May 22.—A despatch from Maseru Basutoland reports that there are 5,000 Boers with ten guns at Harmonea, where they are expected to make a stand, the country there being rugged and most favorable to them.

GENERAL BULLER ANNOYED.

Col Bethune Lost His Men Through Disobeying Instructions.

London, May 23.—General Buller's annoyance at the capture of a squadron of Bethune's Horse near Vryheid is revealed in the incisive summary of the orders which Bethune had received from him. The squadron had gone well afield into the Vryheid district, instead of halting at Nqutu and then marching to Newcastle. The success of the Boers in reverting to their hunters' stratagems and luring a mounted force into ambush will serve to convince their leaders that guerrilla warfare is their strongest resource during the remainder of the campaign. Among the wounded in this affair is the Earl of Albemarle. He is a nephew of Lord Sackville, whose diplomatic adventures in the United States will not be forgotten.

FOUR YEARS FOR MINTYRE.

Sent to Mimico Industrial School for Needed Discipline.

Arthur McIntyre will spend the next four years of his young life in the Industrial School at Mimico. This was the punishment meted out to him to-day for the crime of killing his father, the jury having found him guilty last evening on the charge of manslaughter.

The jury too took sentence with the same coolness that characterized his conduct throughout the trial; He left the court-room still smiling, while his broken-hearted mother was tendered womanly consolation in the witness-room.

Mr. Justice Street told the boy he had behaved very badly. While he had certainly not intended to kill his father, his conduct in the affair had been very wicked, and merited severe punishment. He was a wilful, perverse boy, and would have to be taught that he could not always have his own way. He would get this instruction, as well as the restrained from the perusal of bad books, at the Mimico Industrial School.

SPORTS AND PASTIMES.

FINANCIAL AND MINING STOCKS

SUMMARY OF THE BRITISH-BOER CAMPAIGN

London, May 22.—Boer opposition in the Free State has entirely melted away. Since the capture of Kroonstad the burghers have evidently become utterly disintegrated. Upon no other theory can the important announcement that General Roberts' advanced party have reached Vereeniging be explained. This town is on the Vaal eighty miles north of Kroonstad, and is in Transvaal territory. Johannesburg is only forty miles to the north and Pretoria 80 miles, so that a portion of Lord Roberts' army is only two days of hard galloping distant from the Boer capital. In all likelihood the force which has just reached Vereeniging consists of General Hutton's mounted infantry, including the Canadians, with General French somewhere not far distant directing the dash into the Boer country. The suddenness of the onslaught can be grasped when it is pointed out that the Boers had not even time to destroy the railway bridge at Vryheid drift, near at hand which is now in British hands, assuring an easy passage for the army in its march upon Johannesburg and Pretoria. The line of the Vaal has clearly been abandoned by the enemy, who are in all likelihood falling back upon Johannesburg with the intention of making a stand upon the ridges of the Witwatersrand, unless their demoralization prevents them from making any resistance at all.

The full story of the relief of Mafeking is coming in slowly. It serves still further to illustrate the perseverance of the British and the pertinacity of the Boers. The relieving column, it appears, marched northwards to Salagal, south of Mafeking, when they made a turn to the west, skirted round the invested town and joined Colonel Plumer at his camp in the River Malagat at Jan Masabul, which is twenty-five miles west and slightly north of Mafeking. Hither they were led by a party of Baden-Powell's men, who broke through the Boer lines, and after a ride of 300 miles and remarkable adventures, reached Mahon's column and returned with it, the whole force being joined by the Canadian artillery, who by forced marches had hurried down from Rhodesia, eager for the fray, and who in a critical hour proved so handy with their guns that they turned the tide of battle. The two traitors—Hay and Houlton—who led the Boers in their final and disastrous attack upon the garrison, must be held up to execration by true Britons forever, and it is certain that their names will go down to history in no pleasant light—a light quite contrary to that which will enwrap the brave soul who, according to the despatches, was shot rather than surrender to the enemy. The story of Kloof, Kruger's grandson, who was deserted by his men at the crisis, fired upon their retreating forms and then was captured, is a story which will live. On the whole, the tale of Mafeking is the most romantic of the war, and when the end of it is reached truth will indeed have been proved to be stronger than fiction.

The report that Col. Bethuen and his colonials have fallen into an ambush near Vryheid is the first intimation that a portion of General Buller's force has entered the Transvaal from Natal, probably to clear his right flank from the Boers, who may be collected on the farther side of the Buffalo River, which separates Natal from the Transvaal. So that the Transvaal has now been invaded at three points—north of Kimberley, at Vereeniging and near Vryheid. The announcement regarding Col. Bethuen's force leads to the impression that a serious disaster has befallen the British, and that 500 or 600 men at least have been captured; for Bethuen's whole force is said to have been lost and 66 of them either killed or wounded. It is interesting to note that Roberts and Buller are following similar tactics—the former in his northward advance left Rundle behind to keep his flanks clear, while the latter has left Bethuen to follow him to Newcastle by a parallel route for the same purpose.

CAPTURE OF LOCOMOTIVES.

Cape Town, May 21.—British troops have arrived at Vereeniging, in the Transvaal, north of the Vaal River. The bridge across the Vaal was found to be intact. Twenty-seven Free State and Transvaal locomotives were captured.

CANADIANS AT MAFFERING.

London, May 22.—The Daily Telegraph in a second edition prints a despatch stating that Col. Mahon's force arrived last Tuesday at Janmasabul, where Col. Plumer's Rhodesians and detachments of Canadians and Queenslanders joined him, both forces having made forced marches of nearly thirty miles daily since May 13.

Several days ago a despatch was received announcing that a battery of the Canadian artillery and a detachment of the Australian bushmen, which formed the advanced guard of Gen. Carrington's force, had reached Bulawayo, 400 miles north of Mafeking. It is evident they were transported south over the railroad to join Col. Plumer's force. The Canadians were landed at Beira, in Portuguese East Africa, and made a rapid march across the northern end of Rhodesia, to Bulawayo.

DIED IN SOUTH AFRICA.

Ottawa, May 22.—Lt.-Col. Pinault, Deputy Minister of Agriculture, has received word that Sgt. Pte. Wood, "D" squadron, Canadian Mounted Rifles, has died in South Africa. No particulars are given.

In the official list of the Canadian Mounted Rifles, the numbers of the men in "C" and "D" squadrons are not given, but it contains the names of Private Percy Ambie Wood, Macleod, Alta., whose father resides at 3 Woodmill-terrace, Leeds, England; Private William Wood, Edmonton, Alta., whose father resides at Torfield, Beaver Lake, Alta.; and Private William Wood, "B" squadron, whose mother resides at Haddock, Perth county.

TO BOMBARD PRETORIA.

Six Siege Trains Ordered to Leave for South Africa.

London, May 21.—The Queen, at Windsor, to-day reviewed a detachment of the Guards, which is proceeding to South Africa. Her Majesty addressed the troops, wishing them success, and expressing the hope that she would see them all back at no distant date. Six siege trains have been ordered to be prepared at Aldershot for transportation to South Africa.

GUIDED TO MAFFERING.

Soldiers from the beleaguered town Escaped and Showed the Way.

London, May 22.—A despatch to The Daily Mail from Jon Masabul, dated May 11, says:

"Lieutenant Moorsome, with the protectorate regiment from Mafeking, joined us. They went first to Colonel Plumer, making a wide, western circuit, and got through the Boer lines with many hair-breadth escapes, reaching Vryburg after a daring ride of nearly three hundred miles through a country scourged with a destructive fever similar to the influenza. There was hardly a Boer house or a native kraal without a case of the disease; hundreds died. The column is continually moving, and is healthy, active and clean. The troops entirely escaped. Many concealed arms have been discovered and their owners arrested promptly. They inform against their neighbors. The natives render every assistance. Mafeking knows the column is coming."

THANKS FROM CHAMBERLAIN.

Services of the Canadian Artillery at Mafeking Appreciated.

Ottawa, May 22.—A cable has been received by the Governor-General from Mr. Joseph Chamberlain, Secretary of State for the Colonies, congratulating Canada on the great services rendered by the Canadian artillery in relieving Mafeking.

FOREIGN NOBLES CAPTURED.

Boers at Mafeking were led by Two British Deserters.

London, May 22.—A despatch to The Daily Mail, dated Mafeking, May 13, says:

"Among the prisoners captured with Commandant Sorel Elloff are Count de Bremond, a Frenchman, and Count von Voise, a German. It is found that the Boers were guided by two deserters named Hay and Bolton. At the enemy's request we have handed over their dead."

Marvellous Developments

ROB ROY
MINES

Are taking place at the property. Matters are in such a state that we really cannot see how it is possible for us to fail now. A practical miner of 33 years' experience told one of our shareholders this week, that where ore was found scattered as ours is it was an unfailing indication of an immense ore body—he had never in all his experience known this sign to fail.

We have found ore in several new places, and our Superintendent writes us this week, "I feel it in my bones that we are on the eve of a strike."

The special issue of stock at fifteen cents (15) per share is being taken up freely, orders coming in from all over by mail. Orders for about 18,000 shares have been received this week so far.

This stock is one of the safest investments at this price that you can get into and offers opportunities for making large profits very seldom met with, and for a thoroughly safe and remunerative investment we recommend these shares. As soon as we strike the Ore Body the property will develop itself and no more shares will be offered. Get a copy of the Ferguson "Eagle" from our office if you haven't seen one and see what the Rob Roy is thought of there.

GOOD-BYE TO WASHINGTON.

Boer Delegates Receive a Final Chill from McKinley.

Washington, May 22.—Messrs Fischer Wesel and Wolmaras the three Boer envoys, who are now in this country, visited the White House at 10 o'clock this morning, according to previous arrangement to pay their respects to the President. They said they understood that what Secretary Hay told them yesterday was final and that the position of the United States was that this country could not interfere in the present struggle in South Africa. The President confirmed this view. He said that the action he took sometime ago when he offered his good office as bringing about peace, he did with great pleasure in the hope that it might possibly bring the conflict to an end. This offer had been declined by Great Britain and, he says, there was nothing further that the United States could do in the premises.

The envoys intimated that they were glad to feel they had friends in this country and then bade the president good-bye.

No admission charged to see the games and sports in the Nicholls park. Everything free. All welcome.

The cycle parade will dismount on arrival at the park gates and march up the hill and on to the track, then circle twice round the track.

Merchants are requested by the committee to have their stores lighted during the evening of the 24th. Brilliantly lighted places of business add much to the brightness of the evening.

Entries for the bicycle parade can be made at the cycle stores of Thos. Barrie, F. McPherson and F. Davidson, where each contestant will be supplied with an number, which must be worn conspicuously pinned on the wearer's left side, during the parade. The judges will allot the prizes by their numbers, hence riders must be careful to have themselves so identified.

Enquiries for programmes of sports and games are coming in fast from Toronto, Orillia, Port Hope and other points. There should be some good material on the grounds when time is called.

The judges of the cycle parade are Messrs. R. M. Roy, A. H. Stratton and R. Neill.

Cyclists will assemble at the drill shed not later than 1 o'clock, and be ready to start in the parade at 1.30 sharp.

The prizes in the sports and games are on exhibition in the window of E. B. Clegg's furniture store.

Prizes will be presented to winners in the sports and games immediately on conclusion of the programme of such events. The winners in the cycle parade will be also announced at the same time.

The children will assemble at Victoria park, and take their places around the band stand at 11.30 o'clock, not at 12 o'clock as previously announced. The change has been made in order to allow of this part of the day's programme being finished in good time for dinner and an early resumption of the events of the afternoon. The selection to be sung have been in rehearsal and the children will do the day credit.

THE ARCTIC MOSQUITO.

It is About the Most Terrible Insect Pest in the World.

"Nothing that has ever been written about the arctic mosquito begins to come up to the real thing," said a guest in the St. Charles corridor the other evening. "I went up the Yukon river in the summer of 1896, representing the Alaska and Dominion Trading company, and we struck mosquitoes as soon as we got into the hills. They are twice as large as our familiar bayou species, and their sting is like the prod of a hot needle. They sweep along the valleys in dense clouds, and if they catch a man unprepared they are liable to blind him before he can escape. I heard stories of children being stung to death and can readily believe them."

"Whenever we went ashore we wore heavy hat nets and took the utmost precaution, but were certain to suffer more or less. One of our party cut the tongues out of his shoes, and a narrow line of sock was exposed under the lacing. Next day he was bitten there at least a hundred times, and his feet were so terribly inflamed that the shoes had to be cut off."

"Another man, a fireman in the boat crew, got drunk on Alaska whiskey one afternoon and lay down to take a nap in a corner of the engine room. I noticed him a little later and was horrified at the solid brown mass of mosquitoes that had settled on a small exposed section of his cheek and throat. In an hour his face was swollen out of all resemblance to anything human, he was unable to swallow and was burning with fever. It was a week before he was able to be about. I saw a number of cattle near Fort Hamilton that had been made stone blind by stings near the eye."

"The arctic foothill mosquito is without doubt the most terrible insect pest in the world."—New Orleans Times.

Mr. "Joe" Hill, the genial and popular representative of the O'Keefe Brewing Company, Toronto, is in town in the interests of his concern.

Permits Issued.

Mr. Wm. Snowden, who is understood to have jurisdiction over the creek through the town, has issued fishing permits to Messrs. Bennett, Fred, Stenson and a number of others for to-day only. It is understood, however, that these privileges are not to be abused. Should it afterwards be discovered that any fish have been caught by the tail by wading into the water, all permits will at once be revoked. Mr. Snowden is a determined sportsman himself, and therefore objects to chasing the life out of the fish by pursuing them on foot in this way.

A Pretty Night.

Victoria Park was the scene of a very joyous gathering yesterday morning, when the Kindergarten Children of the Central school in charge of their teachers, marched through the shady walks. The little tots were decked out with flags, and regalia. They looked exceedingly pretty, and made their presence known by the beating of tiny drums and high school bells. After parading around in this manner for some time, songs were sung and general jollification indulged in.

A SCIENTIFIC BREAKFAST.

Rightly selected food will cure more than half the diseases. Try a scientific and healthy breakfast:—Fruit of some kind, preferably cooked; a dish of Grape-Nuts, with cream; two soft-boiled eggs. Put two eggs in a tin pint cup of boiling water, cover and set off for nine minutes. Whites will then be the consistency of cream and most easily digested. One slice of bread with butter; cup of Postum Cereal Food Coffee.

On that breakfast you can work like a horse and be perfectly nourished until noon. Your nervous troubles, heart palpitation, stomach and bowel troubles, kidney complaints and various other diseases will gradually disappear and firm, solid health will set in.

Why? You have probably been living on poorly selected food, that is, food that does not contain the required elements the body needs. That sort of food, and coffee, is the direct or indirect cause of more than half the ills the human body acquires.

Grape-Nuts is a perfectly cooked food and both the Postum Food Coffee contain fine microscopic particles of phosphate of potash obtained in a natural way from the grains of the field and by scientific food experts incorporated into food and drink. That element joins with the albumen in food to make gray matter, which is the filling of the brain cells and the nerve centres all over the human body.

A man or woman thus fed is scientifically fed and rapidly grows in vigor and vitality, and becomes capable of conducting successfully the affairs of life. To produce a perfect body and a money making brain, the body must have the right kind of food and the expert food specialist knows how to make it. That is Grape-Nuts and Postum Cereal Food Coffee, produced at the pure food factories of the Postum Cereal Co., Ltd., at Battle Creek, Mich.

Spelling

Editor Morning Times
Dear Sir,—Ignorance in the art of spelling as in all other matters is excusable except where the spelling is intended for public notice where it behooves us to see that it is correctly done. The committee which have charge of the printing for the celebration on the Queen's birthday have issued their large posters in which they inform the public of the "colossal" celebration to be held on that day. No doubt they meant "colossal" and did not mean to make it move colossal by adding the extra "l". As the art of spelling is almost exclusively acquired by the sense of sight and not by that of sound, such a mistake has a tendency to mislead the mind in the correct spelling of the word ever afterwards to the great detriment of the thousands who read the posters, and move particularly the youthful minds. Such mistakes too, frequently occur, and should be guarded against.

Yours &c.
VINUS.

Be Christian Scientists.

Editor Morning Times
Sir,—Whence is Christian Science? Here are a few of the facts "Engineers" asks for, from which he may draw his own conclusions:—
A.—The Bible teaches that in the beginning God created heaven and earth, spirit and matter. Christian Science denies the existence of matter.
B.—The Bible teaches that man consists of both matter and spirit. Christian Science denies the existence of our material body.
C.—The Bible teaches that Christ became like unto us, flesh and blood, and that his material body was nailed to a material cross. All this is denied by Christian Science, which teaches that the incarnation of Christ was a delusion practiced by God to free our deluded mind from some other delusion.
D.—The Bible teaches that he who believes that the eating of meat is sin and yet eats it, he is a sinner. What shall we say of Christian Scientists who teach that the belief in the material existence of man is sin, but who yet continue to feed this material with material food, clothe it with material clothes, heat it with material heat, house it with material houses, etc.?
With every breath of air they draw they prove that either they do not really believe what they profess or if they really believe it they sin with every breath of air they take.
E. R. F.

Social Medicinities.

Editor Morning Times
Sir,—Is society the fairest sample of good breeding and Christian fellowship? It seems as though society does not profit sufficiently by its higher method of civilization. After attaining that which is unanimously sought after by the world in general, such as popularity, prominence and financial distinction, a person should endeavor to offer assistance to the struggling soul which is toiling to reach a certain degree of distinction. After having attained and secured all that heart could desire, the fortunate one seldom permits his thoughts to wander upon concerns his own personal benefit.

Why should one in splendid social and financial circumstances disdain to notice a fellow citizen who is struggling to place himself on an equality with his superiors? Why should society sympathetically crush and discourage his frugal efforts to secure their attainment? The person of wealth is under various obligations to the struggling. Has not all wealth been obtained by the toil of the muscular arm and the vain swollen hand of the poor man? The toil of the laborer's accumulation and might operations are kept only further the purposes and requirements of the one by whom they are possessed. Why, then, should the influential one disclaim any acquaintance with his poor but honest servants?

And why, too, should the alma-seeker be turned from the doors of luxurious homes with severe reprimands for laziness? Those who can afford to contribute the most are generally the people to give the least, and they do not trace back to the time when they themselves were struggling for daily bread; they do not recollect the discouraging drawbacks they received. They have climbed the ladder of success and then everything which does not contribute to their own personal gain is put beyond reach as void and useless. Surplus food, which is superabundant on the tables of the wealthy, is cremated as garbage, and would have given life and vigor to the hungry and starving population. Old, though elegant, wearing apparel, which haughty ladies have discarded as being worn too frequently, is being laid aside to decay in dusty attics, and would have clothed the poor, who would have poured forth the gratitude of their hearts for that which they might consider costly gifts, instead of charitable contributions. And if society would kindly condescend to proffer assistance to the struggling masses, instead of nursing their many little, pretty schemes, in which their greed is the most conspicuous object, there would be more happy and prosperous families, and everything would harmonize more successfully than it has heretofore.

BRITISH ARE RAPIDLY NEARING KRUGER'S LAND

Roberts Next Despatch May be Dated Within the Sight of Transvaal Capital City.

MOVEMENTS OF BOERS SHROUDED IN MYSTERY.

President Steyn is Reported to be at Velde, Where Free Staters Are Concentrating Preparatory to Join Commandos
Now Opposing Buller at Laings Nek.

London, May 25, 3.30 a.m.—The latest in from Lord Roberts' headquarters at Vredfort Station, dated 5.35 Thursday afternoon, says that the British were advancing rapidly. General Hamilton had effected a junction with Lord Roberts. The country in front of them was clear of Boers to Villiers Drift. The Boers were evacuating all their position south of the Vaal River and several thousand had already crossed to the north bank. Probably Gen. French's cavalry is already reconnoitering the force of the Vaal.

War Office observers expect that the next despatch from the Field Marshal will be dated in sight of the Transvaal frontier.

Mr. Bennett Burleigh, cabling to the Daily Telegraph from Vredfort Thursday evening, said Lord Roberts would doubtless cross the Vaal, Saturday or Sunday. The British outposts were then at Kretzgeuk, nine miles north of Vredfort, and 25 miles south of the Vaal River. The railway is much damaged.

While the British in overwhelming force are thus approaching the Transvaal, the movements of the Boers are enveloped in mystery. The latest newspapers to reach Lorenzo Marquez were a week old. Everyone seemed to cross the Portuguese border from the Transvaal is searched for newspapers and letters. Despatches and mail letters containing even harmless references to the war are suppressed, and the only news that has emerged from the Transvaal during the last ten days has come by word of mouth. According to these oral reports, yesterday the Boers were quarrelling among themselves. Transvaal paper money was circulated at 80 per cent. discount.

Beckets firm was giving one pound in gold for five pounds in paper. Krouse and Klinka the engineers who opposed the blowing up of the mines have been disarmed. Commandant Schutte has been appointed to defend Johannesburg and all the British subjects had been turned out. The Transvaalers fear that the British will blow up the bridge at Koom at this point thus cutting off their supply from Delagoa Bay and a commando of 500 is guarding the bridge against any such attempt by British raiders. It is re-asserted that President Kruger will return to Lydenburg when fighting is imminent at Johannesburg and Pretoria. It is expressed at Pretoria with reference to the possibility that Gen. Carrington may come down from Rhodesia with 5000 men to co-operate with as many more entering the Transvaal by way of Mafeking.

London, May 25.—The Daily Mail in its second edition publishes the following despatch, dated Friday from New castle:—"President Steyn is reported to be at Velde, where the Free Staters are concentrating preparatory to moving to join the commandos now at Laings Nek. Little opposition is expected this side of Volksrust. Occasional rifle shots are exchanged with the Laings Nek outposts."

London, May 25.—While the Boers are entrenching themselves strongly at Laings Nek in order to prevent the advance of Gen. Buller into the Transvaal through that pass, Gen. Roberts, by his rapid movement upon the Vaal, is daily rendering the Boer position on the Natal border a precarious one. The main body of the British army, if reports are to be relied upon, is at Vredfort Road Station, twenty miles from the border of the Transvaal, while Hutton's mounted infantry, including the Canadians, are said to be at Vredfort, twenty miles to the west and on the banks of the river, which they may cross at any moment. Gen. Methuen is meanwhile pushing steadily along the north bank of the Vaal and has reached a point about twenty five miles from Kroonstad, on a level with Kroonstad. One of Hutton's brigades, by forced marches, on a level with Kroonstad, has reached Vryburg, a hundred miles south of Mafeking, and the General himself will shortly join them there. In the Free State there has been a general moving up of troops along the lines of communication which do not now need to be so strongly guarded, the country through which they pass being practically pacified. Lord Roberts cannot have much less than 100,000 men between Bloemfontein and the Vaal.

and Buller's force in all likelihood approaches 50,000. General Roberts is now no far northwest that the Boers cannot long hold their position among the mountains which form the northern boundary of Natal. At any moment his cavalry may cross the river, make a rash of 40 or 50 miles and break the railway connecting Laings Nek with Pretoria, thus cutting off the Boers who hold Buller at bay. The Natal field force has made a show of trying to outflank Laings Nek by crossing the Buffalo river into Transvaal territory, but this step will be rendered unnecessary by the movement of Roberts, which will force the enemy to fall back to avoid being surrounded, a course which the Boers have been following in Natal and the Free State since the occupation of Bloemfontein. The clearance of Natal has been more automatic than otherwise, and it is undoubtedly the idea of the commander-in-chief to continue the process. In the meantime there is no reason why the Drakensburg passes should not soon be occupied by the British, and communication resumed between Natal and the Orange Free State.

NO MARCHES FROM THE VAAL.
Vredfort, Thursday, May 24.—The British columns, after an unopposed march to the Vredfort road at noon today and are now only two marches from the Vaal river.

HUNTER OCCUPIES VRYBURG.
Warrenton, Thursday, May 24.—Operations have been pushed forward eight miles, one of General Hunter's brigades having occupied Vryburg last night. Considering the difficulties of the road, this is a remarkable achievement for a mixed force, short of rations, making forced marches. Some portions of the brigade covered eighteen miles without a break. Gen. Hunter personally goes to Vryburg today by train.

BULLER HELD AT BAY.
Boers are Strongly Entrenched at Laings Nek.

London, May 25 3.30 a.m.—In Natal General Buller's volunteers occupied Mafeking on Monday. Lord Dundonald's cavalry is at Finsburton, near Ingogo. His infantry rests at Schabens. These names are all of late date. The Boers are strongly entrenched at Laings Nek, where the Boers, through the range glasses of the British are occasionally visible. In the march across the Biggarsberg all the farms, except one, have been finished at Vryburg. Trains now go to Dundee. General Buller said the best way to celebrate the Queen's Birthday was to repair the railway to New castle, and every man was put to work. Earl de la Warr, who was supposed to have been captured at the time of the Boers' attack on the squadron of Beetham's Horse, contrived to escape. He lay all night with a wounded leg, behind an anti-heap, reaching the camp the next day.

General Buller's forces have crossed into the Transvaal near Ingogo, but are still held at bay at Laings Nek, where the Boers are strongly entrenched. With the exception of this pass, Natal is clear of Boers. They have a big gun pointed, but it is doubtful if they will be able to hold the position when threatening by a flanking move from the force that crossed the Ingogo river.

FLED DURING THE NIGHT.

Boers Did Not Think it Advisable to Defend Their Position.

London, May 25.—The War Office this evening published the following from Lord Roberts:—"South Bank of the Vaal River, May 23, 1.30 p.m.—We found on arrival this morning that the enemy had fled during the night. They occupied a strong position on the north bank of the river, which had been carefully entrenched, but they did not think it advisable to defend it when they heard that Gen. Buller's force was at Helibron, and that our cavalry, which had crossed the Rhenoster some miles lower down the stream, were threatening their right and rear."

"The bridge over the Rhenoster, several culverts, and some miles of railway were destroyed. "Gen. Buller's force drove the Boers under Piet de Wet before them found Lindley to Helibron. "The passage of the Rhenoster was stoutly disputed. Our loss might have been heavy but for a well concerted plan which brought Smith-Dorrien's brigade, including the Canadian infantry, on the enemy's flank just at the right moment. "The officer in command at Rhenoster reports that upwards of 350 Free Staters have surrendered during the last few days and that they have given up 300 rifles, 100 horses, and a large amount of ammunition."

"Kelly-Kenny reports that three companies of yeomanry, who were sent to repair the telegraph line, and to clear the country between Bloemfontein and Beaufort West, having returned to Bloemfontein, having performed the duty exceedingly well."

BOERS NOW WILLING TO CALL IT SQUARE

If Britain Will Leave Them Independent and Give Them Back Their Territory, They Will Grant the Reforms They Refused.

New York, May 25.—The Herald's Washington correspondent says the Boer envoys will take every opportunity to press President McKinley's non-interference attitude upon the American people, and they will make it one of the prominent issues of the campaign. The West is reported to have taken up over the refusal of the President to intervene, and it is proposed to keep the discontent alive.

Appreciating that ultimate victory will rest with the British troops, the Boers are willing to surrender all that the British demanded before hostilities commenced, and will be satisfied with the recognition of their independence and the restoration of their territory and immunity from punishment of their foreign relations.

An official of the Administration said the policy which had been adopted had been carefully considered, and there would be no deviation from it, no matter how great might be the pressure applied by Democratic platforms.

HURT IN THE HOLIDAY FETES.

A Series of Accidents at Sarnia to the Celebration and Six Persons Injured.

Sarnia, May 25.—The celebration of the Queen's Birthday of 1900 will be a memorable one in the history of the town, especially to the number who suffered by the discharge of cannon crackers.

Harry Woods, a commercial traveler, of Port Huron, picked up a cannon cracker that he thought had exploded and before he could drop it had all but the little finger of his right hand blown off.

Twelve-year old Clara Crawford had his thumb split open, and Joe Greany had his right hand split up between the thumb and forefinger by the discharge of a cannon cracker.

Alexander Murdoch, proprietor of the Chapman House, had his right arm and left hand severely burned by the premature discharge of Roman candles.

A. V. Minifie lost the hearing of one ear by the noise of exploding cannon crackers.

Fred Jennings was badly injured by a runaway accident.

ON THE EVE OF HIS WEDDING.

Bankrupt New York Broker Hurriedly Called Off a Farewell Bachelor Dinner

New York, May 25.—The morning papers discuss the probability of the postponement of the wedding of Theodore Price, head of the firm of Price, McCormick & Company, which failed yesterday. The wedding had been announced for next Monday, and the prospective bride is Miss Eugenia Dyer, of Baltimore. Last night Mr. Price was to have given a farewell bachelor dinner, but it was suddenly called off.

The return of Mr. Stuart Wortley, one of the partners in the firm, from Europe, which was expected to-day, had been timed so that he would not miss the wedding, for which the entire office force of the firm had made the most extensive preparations. The office staff had collected $575 for their gift and had paid it to a silver-smith company, and in order to pay cash several of the clerks had borrowed money to pay their subscriptions rather than wait until to-day, the regular pay-day.

Price announced to-day that his marriage to Miss Eugenia Dyer, which was to have taken place on Monday next, in the Church of the Epiphany, will occur to-morrow.

LORD ROBERTS NEARS THE VAAL.

The Next Few Days Will Probably See Him on the Other Side of the River

London, May 25.—Another advance along the railroad towards Pretoria has brought Lord Roberts' troops to Vredfort Road Station, a few miles north of Prospect, where they arrived at noon on Thursday. In the meantime Gen. Methuen is progressing along the southern bank of the Vaal River, with the object, possibly, of making a dash at Klerksdorp, when he arrives opposite that railroad terminus.

Gen. Hutton's column is apparently in the neighborhood of Vredfort, fifteen miles west of the railroad, whence it threatens the Federal right flank.

The following despatch from Lord Roberts was previously received, under date of Horing's Spruit, May 22:—"Ian Hamilton reached Helibron this morning, after a series of engagements with a Boer force under De Wet, who is retreating before him. Broadwood has captured fifteen Boer wagons."

"There have been 15 casualties in Hamilton's force to yesterday evening."

FRENCH AT PROSPECT STATION.

Boers are Falling Back Straight Upon the Vaal.

London, May 24.—General French has reached Prospect Station, about five miles north of Horing's Spruit. The Boers are retreating straight on the Vaal.

A despatch from Rhenoster, dated Wednesday, May 23, 7.45 p.m., says:—"The general opinion in that we will arrive at Pretoria as fast as we can march, though the Boers announce to all the countryside that they intend to fight to the death." "General Ian Hamilton is co-operating in the advance on the right, thus Lord Roberts will probably reach the Vaal before the end of the week."

Natives report that the Boers have buried two guns in the Rhenoster River.

REBELS SURRENDERING.

Major Poole Receives the Surrender of 1,500 of Them.

Kroonstad, May 21, 9.30 p.m.—Major Poole, of the 1th Lancers, who is also connected with the South African Police, has been busy from morning to night since his arrival here in receiving the arms which are being turned in by the burghers and in issuing passes. Major Poole must have issued at least 1,500 passes up to the present time. Several of the Boers who surrendered were sent to Cape Town.

THE LATE MR. CAHILL.

Citizens of All Classes Attend the Funeral Yesterday.

The funeral of the late Mr. Thomas Cahill took place yesterday morning, and was attended by hundreds from town and county. The societies represented were the local branches of the Catholic, Mutual Benefit Association, the Emerald Benefit Association, the Emerald Benefit Association, St. Vincent de Paul Society, Catholic Literary Association, and

The next couple of days out to settle whether Lord Roberts will encounter serious opposition south of the Vaal. But the best opinion believes the next big engagement will be fought just south of Johannesburg, and that the fight there, and possibly at Laings Nek will prove the last pitched battle of the war. The latter being the most stubborn of the two. It is hoped that Gen. Buller will delay until Lord Roberts is able to detach a force to seize Heidelberg and sever railroad communication between Johannesburg and Laings Nek.

Catholic Order of Foresters, attended in a body, as did the members of the Peterborough Town Council and the town officials. A rare tribute of appreciation was paid the deceased through the attendance of a delegation from the local Orange Lodge, composed of Messrs. J. B. McWilliams, Past J. G. of Ontario East; Robert Weir, Past County Master; W. A. Kindred, District Master; J. Hetherington, Past District Master, and G. W. Hall, Director of Ceremonies. In this connection it might be mentioned that Mr. Cahill's last appearance in public was when he addressed the Town Council a few weeks ago in behalf of a grant for an Orange Demonstration in Peterborough on July 12th next.

At St. Peter's cathedral Ven. Archbishop Casey celebrated mass, Rev. Father Conway officiating as deacon. Rev. Peter McGuire as sub-deacon, and Rev. F. J. Lordship as master of ceremonies. ### A PRETTY WEDDING.

Marriage of Mr. Fred Robertson Toronto and Miss Mary Hetherington.

A very pretty wedding was celebrated at 623 George St., on Wednesday afternoon, May 23rd, when Miss Mary Hetherington, was united in marriage to Mr. Fred G. Robertson of Toronto. The ceremony was performed by Rev. Mr. Shorey in the presence of a number of relatives and friends.

The bride was charmingly attired in white organdie, trimmed with insertion and lace and carried a bouquet of roses. The bridegroom was Miss Nellie Hetherington, sister of the bride. She was nicely dressed in white organdie trimmed with lace and insertion and blue silk and carried a bouquet of pink roses. Mr. Chas. H. Mann attended the groom.

The presents received were numerous and extensive. After a wedding breakfast the happy couple left for Toronto where they will reside. The groom's gift to the bride was a handsome gold bracelet to the bride a beautiful diamond ring. The Times extends its hearty congratulations.

THREE DYNAMITERS ON TRIAL AT WELAND

Dullman, Nolin and Walsh Are Shown to Have Had Dealings Before the Explosion.

STRONG CHAIN OF EVIDENCE AGAINST PRISONERS

Custom Officer Latta Gives Important Evidence as to a Conversation Overheard Between Dullman and Walsh—Case for Crown Practically Concluded.

Weland, May 25.—Thirty-three witnesses were examined yesterday, giving the Crown's case on the trial of Carl Dullman, John Walsh and John Nolin, and to-day the chain of evidence against the latter two there seems little doubt but that Dullman will be connected with the other two. Not a word was said about the secret society connection of the men, notwithstanding this, the Crown is believed to have considerable evidence along this line, both from England and this country. But the only evidence the Crown is using is the actions of the three previous to their selling foot on Canadian soil and their doings while in Canada.

The early part of yesterday was taken up by the Crown in calling the witnesses who had seen Walsh and Nolin and their doings. E. F. B. Johnston, Q. C., who was the Crown prosecutor had the witnesses all arranged and called in the order in which the chain of evidence would be identified by plenty of witnesses. Later in the day Mr. Johnston began to call the witnesses with which he intended to prove the complicity of Dullman to the crime. W. H. German, Q. C., had many objection to questions, on Dullman's behalf.

After tracing Nolin and Walsh to Buffalo, on to the falls, and then to the hotel where the attempt was made to destroy lock 24, Dullman's movements were taken up, and according to the evidence submitted, showed that he was an ally of the first pair. There was evidence that twice Dullman had called at Nolin's hotel and asked for him under the name of Doyle, and later Nolin had gone to Dullman's hotel. Dullman was called who testified to having heard Dullman say to Walsh that if Nolin "was not sober he would not be able to do that job."

It took an hour to get a jury. G. R. Burton, who appeared for Nolin and Walsh, challenged 24 his limit. Then Mr. Johnston for Dullman challenged ten, and the Crown had 20 stand to one side. Nearly all the jurors were fruit-growers and farmers from the surrounding country.

Mr. Johnston opened a very strong address with the sentence, "There is no crime in Canada for dynamiters, if they are proven guilty." He said the Crown proposed to show that the blow was struck at the public interest, and was no crime like larceny or forgery. The motive was no concern of the jury. They had to do with the definite acts of the prisoners. Speaking of the publicity given the case, Mr. Johnston said that as a blow had been struck at the state, reasonable newspaper discussion was not out of the way. After telling the jury their duties and reading portions of the indictment, Mr. Johnston went into the evidence, narrating what the various witnesses had said. He explained the acts charged against Nolin and Walsh, and what connected Dullman had with the pair. Mr. Johnston said a man who was an accessory before the fact was now regarded by the law as a principal in the crime, and this he would try and prove against Dullman.

Weland, May 25.—The trial opened this morning at 9.30 when the jury was brought in from their quarters in the Dexter House, where they were placed under guard during the adjournment.

The Crown this morning continued its case against Dullman, being satisfied that there is already sufficient evidence to convict Nolin and Walsh. The witnesses yesterday afternoon told a story which is particularly damaging to Dullman's defence, and although his counsel made strong efforts to break it up they were unable to do so. The story was that Dullman, Nolin and Walsh registered at the same time in the Stafford House, Buffalo, where they had drinks together and left together. Next they were around Niagara Falls in each other's company and were suspected by the United States officers of being smugglers and proved against them, overheard a conversation in which Dullman said "man sober," meaning Nolin, "we will never be able to pull that job off. The witnesses took them up to the Rosli House, where Dullman and Walsh registered, leaving Nolin on the United States side.

This morning was Jos. Spencer, a hack driver, who, one day a few days before the explosion, drove the three prisoners from the upper to the lower bridges on the Canadian side. On their way down he walked with them, and Dullman asked what kind of a place Merritt was. The witness also drove Nolin and Walsh to Thorold on Thursday and going into Thorold they met Dullman driving from Thorold to Niagara Falls. The three spoke to one another as they passed.

George Thomas, a clerk in a grocery store at Niagara Falls, swore that on Saturday, the 21st April, he sold a clothesline similar to that found in the damaged lock, to Walsh.

George Waters, who had been treated by Dullman two or three times saw Dullman and Walsh walking up

Erie avenue on the Saturday, and saw Walsh go in the grocery store, where the latter bought a rope, and coming out followed in the direction Dullman had taken.

Officer Mairs, of the Ontario police force the man who arrested Nolin and Walsh and then captured Dullman at the Rosli House, made a strong statement as to the connection of the three with one another. He saw them frequently together, and on the Saturday he saw Nolin come over the bridge from Niagara Falls, N. Y., and walk up the river bank, where he was joined by Dullman, and the two.

Officer Lewis, of the United States Customs, was also following them. When Mairs took Dullman in charge after the explosion, Dullman refused to tell his name or address. Among the papers found in Dullman were two receipts for cash fares on the Buffalo and Niagara Falls. One was dated March 23, going from Buffalo to Niagara Falls, and the other was dated April 18 from Niagara Falls to Buffalo. This witness was closely cross-questioned by Mr. German as to the time of various dates, and the defence will put in evidence to contradict some given.

On Monday before the explosion Mrs. Constable, the mother of the young lady who was an eye witness to the crime, saw Dullman, Nolin and Walsh pass her house within a few feet of her house and stand on the canal bank overlooking locks 23 and 24. She stated that Dullman was wearing a light hat and the defence will produce evidence claiming that Dullman taught them that several days later. Mrs. Constable also saw the three men there on Monday and identified one of them.

Edward Walker, a quarry man, of Merritt, swore that on the Wednesday he met the three prisoners within a hundred yards of the Merritt quarry, which are about five hundred yards from the canal. Dullman was dressed in a light coat and light hat. Dullman addressed him and asked the way to Niagara Falls. He directed them by train, but they preferred to walk a distance of eight miles.

The witness told the court how dynamite was packed, its composition and strength. He told it a telescope such as was described by the witnesses would hold about fifty lbs. of dynamite, but that was not sufficient to blow up the lock because it was not confined to tight enough quarters.

The fuse in the court room was recognized as a waterproof fuse, which would burn under water. On the end of the fuse would be a cap from which came the shock to explode the dynamite.

LAKEFIELD CEMENT WORKS.

The Villagers Rallying to the Support of the Scheme.

(Correspondence of The Times.)
The agreement and by-law have not yet been published, but the delay is not caused by any lack of diligence on the part of the council as the documents have not yet been returned by the Village Solicitor.

Several sites have been examined and finally a block of ten acres belonging to the G. T. R. has been selected as the most suitable and an option on the same has been secured from the R. R. Co.

At a meeting held on Wednesday evening the following gentlemen were appointed a deputation to go to Owen Sound on behalf of the ratepayers and examine and report on the Shallow Lake Cement Works via: Messrs. R. C. Strickland, J. R. Fraser, A. R. Kidd.

In addition to this deputation Reeve Hull who has to go to Ottawa on business, will extend his trip in order to inspect the Cement Works of the Rathbun Co.

The reports of the above named gentlemen will be heard with great interest and will probably be decisive in determining the vote on the by-law.

MASTER FRED WINS.

A Peterborough Horse Takes First Place in Race at Toronto.

Toronto, May 24.—Master Fred, a horse owned by Mr. Fred Jones, Peterborough, won first place in the 2-1/2 mile race to-day. This was a surprise to all the sportsmen present, as the horse was not regarded as a probable winner. A number of Peterborough backers of the animal have made some money.

Wandered from Home.

Mr. William Snyder, an old and esteemed citizen, who resides with his daughter on MacDonnell street, went out for a walk last night and did not return. It is feared that after he left home he got bewildered and lost his way. Searching parties were scouring the town for him, but up to the time of going to press had not been successful. When last seen Mr. Snyder was going down George street, near the market.

Hutch Cures Phil Davey of Sour Stomach.

Toronto for some time past has not been favorably regarded by the travelling public in the matter of hotel accommodation, but it is safe saying that with a few men like Phil Davey of the Tremont House to look after a guest's comfort, this state of affairs will undergo a change.

Phil for many years ran the Walper House of Berlin and is a born hotel man. An old-timer wouldn't know the old "Bay Horse" in its present modern dress of the Tremont House, or for that matter its class of customers either. It's all different now, and all owing to Phil's splendid management. Phil knows about Hutch, by the way, and has an interesting story to tell about how Hutch cured him of stomach trouble.

"For quite a long time before I left Berlin," said he, "I was troubled with a sour stomach and indigestion. Sometimes I couldn't eat my breakfast, and a disagreeable flatulency was always present. I was up to that time a very healthy man and got very impatient under my illness. When I came to Toronto I had an idea that after consulting some of the specialists here I could get relief. Well, I spent money, but I could only get free from the discomfort for a while. Had the same thing back on me in a very short time. Then Hutch was advertised. Your representative, whom I know well, called my attention to it, and I started taking the tablets. Well, sir, I got such relief that I kept on taking them, and I believe I am cured now. I wouldn't permit my name to be used in connection with any other medicine, and I only do so in this case because Hutch has given me so wonderful a cure. I recommend Hutch to everybody. It's great.

Shoes in Olden Days.

Early Britons wore shoes of raw cowhide, with the hairy surface outward. The Anglo-Saxons showed an advance, for they wore black and laced by a leather thong. Then came what might almost be termed the bag shoe of the Merovingian period, tied round the ankle, a similar sort of covering obtaining in Germany, and so by gradual stages from the medieval shoes to the pointed shoes, a queer early German specimen, the band round the ankle being of engraved brass. The Irish shoe of early date is worthy of note, as for many years the Irish went not only barefooted, but barelegged, while their bodies were most gorgeously arrayed.

IN THE OLD RIVER DAYS.

Stories of Steamboat Racing on the Mississippi River.

When one steamboat comes alongside another on the Mississippi, each tries to pass the other. That is an invariable rule of the road.

It is as much a rule on the river as it is in driving. A man is out in a light rig, and has before him, far as he can see, a smooth, wide, unobstructed dirt speedway. He has a good, fresh, spirited horse that wants to go, and needs muscle to hold back.

Another outfit, under precisely similar conditions, comes up alongside, and tries to whisk by.

The man is not living who will keep his pull on the lines and let the other outfit throw the dust in his face. He will give his horse his head and there will be a race.

Neither driver will have started out with the intention of racing. He may have made up his mind to eat dust sooner than race, but let the other rig whisk by and he's after it "hotfoot," as they say.

It is the same way in steamboating. No pilot likes to take the wash and broken water of another boat, especially if the other boat is slower or more heavily loaded. Why, when the procession of steamboats escorted the U. S. gunboat Nashville up the river last spring, one of the steamboats showed the poor taste to lead the Nashville on the way to the harbor. The engineer and the pilot of the Nashville, an old trouble keeper themselves, from letting themselves out after her and putting her down. They did show their heel in first-class shape to one river boat that tried to pass them down below Memphis.

It is in the human blood and no amount of danger from overtaken boilers, narrowness of channel, sandbars, shoals or snags will deter the fast boat from showing its heels to the slower boat.

I have seen passengers in the olden times, when everybody knew a good deal about the river and its dangers, come up to the captain of the boat they had taken passage on and say to him politely:

"Now, captain, I want you to assure me one thing, that you are not going to race. I've got my wife and children on board, and I don't want to expose them to needless danger."

"Of course we won't race," the captain would answer, and he would mean it when he said it.

In a little while a long would come a slow, heavily loaded scow of a boat and try to pass us. The captain would get busy and so would the pilot, the engineer and the fireman.

And as the competing boat would shade down to a small speck on the rear horizon, the passenger who was so anxious to keep his family out of needless danger would come up from below, wiping a pair of bruised and dirty hands and, inflating his breast proudly, say to the captain "She never touched us."

That passenger had been down on the boiler deck during the race, passing cord wood to the stokers to put under the boilers.

UNCLE SAM CAN'T LOSE

WITH HONOLULU AND MANILA HE COMMANDS THE GATES TO THE PACIFIC.

France Well Placed at Tahiti, in a Country Abounding in Beautiful Scenery.

(From Alfred's Magazine.)
"If it be westward that the Star of Empire takes its way, Uncle Sam owns the upper and perhaps the best, and France the lower and less useful, gateway into this new world. At Hawaii is the natural midway between the warm and genial Pacific coast and the hot and luxuriant districts of the tropics wherein most of the Pacific islands lie. At Tahiti is the radial place below the equator, a little less removed from the centre of heat and farther from the origin of travel than Hawaii. Both abound in beautiful scenery. In temperature alternatingly equable, in life and habits half indolent, half industrious; in products both tropical and semi-tropical. Both form an admirable preparation for the things beyond. The soldier boys who stopped in Honolulu on their way to Manila had their first taste of bananas and pineapples as they came directly from the field. They wished that they might stay in the soft and luscious air forever; that is to say, those who did not remain long enough to be down with the fever or to be sent home in the hearse ship. For there are fevers in Hawaii, and in almost all of the islands of the Pacific.

"On the other hand, travelers who have passed the exquisite lochs of Tahiti harbor have lingered in the rhapsody until little of the English language was left to them with which to extol the virtues of Samoa and New Zealand.

THE OTHER GATEWAY
"If civilization is to work backward from the East to the West, as the Chinese and the Russians seem inclined to force it to do. Holland and Britain divide with the United States in opening the gateway. Dutch Sumatra closes the portals to the passengers from India; British and Dutch Borneo and the American Philippines close it to the passengers from China and Siam. And in these territories there is even a more apt and conclusive introduction to what lies beyond than there is in Hawaii or Tahiti. In Sumatra and in Java are footpaths of the ancient civilization which entered the Pacific islands centuries before European navigators went in quest of spices and jewels. In the same islands are the crude savages who have never yielded to the advance of the civilization; and in the extreme northern point of Sumatra are the Archimedes, who are still the pirates they have always been, preying upon the shipping and wealth of the more cultured nations across the Malacca Straits. In Borneo, although driven back far into the interior now—are the head-hunting Dyaks, the most typical of the many head-hunters of the Pacific. In Sumatra, on the Eastern coast of Borneo, are the comparatively independent natives that have been held in control for more than two-thirds of a century by the lone an extraordinary Britisher, the Rajah Brooke and his nephew. These are types of numerous rugged fellows who have immured themselves in marine wildernesses, and practiced such cunning and strength as might belong to the nomadic and curious natives."

ACROBATIC COOKING.

MIRACLES DONE IN THE GALLEY OF AN ATLANTIC LINER.

Connecting Dishes While the Kitchen Is Trying to Turn Somersaults and the Pots and Pans Are Dancing Jigs With the Cooks.

Cooking on the high seas isn't so exciting a profession as it was in the old days, but even now it presents problems and situations that would drive a landsman chef to despair. It is one thing to sit down in dignified calm in a hotel kitchen and compose a symphonie entree, and it's quite another thing to clutch a rope swung across a kitchen that is trying to turn turtle and to master an entree that is attempting to dance a cancan on top of a plunging range. It would be a happy thing for stewards and cooks if every disgruntled passenger on a transatlantic steamer could, in rough weather, be forced to pay a visit to the galley and watch the efforts by which the meals with which he has been finding fault are prepared. The chances are that two minutes amid the fumes and heat of the galley would reduce him to a state of seasickness which would rub him of all latered in meals of any sort, but if he could wait long enough to receive a few mental impressions he would climb the galley stairs a humble and contrite traveler and accept food fit to eat as a miracle wrought in his behalf.

On the modern steamers galley arrangements have been improved to a degree that would make an old time sea cook open his eyes in amazement, but even under such conditions the cooking is difficult work. In the first place, room is necessarily limited, and every inch of space must be made to count, yet a large number of cooks and assistants are employed. One of the large steamers will have 30 men at work in its galley, and 50 men playing temptress about a microscopic kitchen and doing juggling feats with pots and pans and knives and rolling pins while the ship stands on its beam ends is a sight to bring tears to the eyes of a lover of a quiet life.

In these narrow quarters cooking is done on a scale larger than the ordinary saloon passenger realizes. The crew must be fed in port and out. So the cooks have from 500 to 600 men on their hands every day of the year. Then during the voyage the stowage, second cabin and first cabin must be provided for. The stowage passengers do not have an elaborate bill of fare, but about 3,000 small loaves of bread are baked for the crew and stowage every day, and that in itself is no small task.

The very sight of the baker's dough trough is enough to discourage a faint hearted cook, for flour is dumped into it by the barrel. One hundred and fifty barrels of flour melt away on a voyage like spring snowflakes, and 20 tons of potatoes dance merrily up the galley stairs to table land in hand with 20,000 pounds of beef, while 10,000 eggs, more or less, seashell, follow wearily. Then 150 gallons of fresh milk scum the 1,000 gallons of condensed milk stored beside it and advise the 1,000 pounds of coffee to have nothing to do with it. The ghosts of countless chickens, turkeys, ducks and fishes haunt the larder where their slaughtered bodies hang in hundreds at a time. As for the incidentals, no one but the head steward knows the tale of them. Imagine all this food prepared in an apartment house kitchen added to handspins, and you have the steamer galley situation.

Along the end of the room run the ranges. The ovens are divided into compartments which will hold firmly pans of varying sizes. On top of the stoves a steel bar runs along the front and back, and separate crossbars may be clamped to these at convenient intervals. Pots and kettles are hung in in this way, and to add to their firmness each is clamped to a crossbar with what looks like a large iron clothespin. All cooking utensils are made much deeper than would be necessary in ordinary cooking in order to avoid spilling of the contents in case of rough weather. The huge copper stock pots in which wholesale boiling is done are heated by steam, and all broiling is done over an immense charcoal fire. The bakers have a separate cubby hole and ovens for themselves, and beyond them is a cold room where confections and pastry are made.

Everything is sweet and garnished in a fashion to satisfy the heart of a Dutch housewife. The copper shines resplendent—but the smells! Ye gods, the smells! Let the seafaring man who has held his breath and plunked madly up the companion way to escape the deadly whiff of air coming from the galley imagine that gust of odor in the midst of the range, mixed with steam and smoke and multiplied by four, and he may have some idea of the atmosphere down in the galley.

A steamer kitchen is no place for any one with a tendency toward seasickness, and the first few voyages of a young cook's assistant are tortures. There isn't any fine glow of majesty about his martyrdom, and he doesn't get an atom of sympathy. His galley mates guff him, and his superiors bully him. He sounds a depth of seasickness beside which the state of the groaning passenger on deck in a steamer chair is rose colored and agreeable. Often one voyage is all that he can stand, and he bolts incontinently when the ship reaches port, but if he has the courage to suffer until he is thoroughly seasoned, he overcomes his qualms and is ready to laugh at the next green hand.

Few accidents occur in the steamer galleys nowadays, when innumerable patients and safeguards are employed. Once in awhile a stock pot blows up from too much steam pressure, or a careless or unskilled cook is cut or burned or scalded, but such cases are rare. Ropes are stretched across in front of the ranges, and when the ship is plunging badly the cooks hold these ropes while working over the fire. Fortunately for the workers in the galley, when the weather is very rough a large percentage of the passengers lose their interest in food, so the work of the cooks is lessened, and this fact offsets the added difficulty in the preparation of the food. The gale is separated from the rest of the boat by water tight doors and can be shut off so securely that it is practically impossible, except in case of serious accident, for water to reach the fires and put a stop to culinary proceedings.

PEN, PENCIL AND BRUSH.

Now that John Ruskin is dead a "Ruskin union" has been formed in London for the purpose of studying his works. Emperor William has commissioned William Pape, the artist, to paint the scene of Archbishop Simar reading homage. The name of Samuel Smiles has been so long forgotten by the reading public that many will probably be surprised to learn that the author of "Self Help" is still alive. He lives in London.

Winston Spencer Churchill, the British war correspondent now in the Transvaal, has published his first novel. It bears the title "Savrola" and depicts the political intrigue and revolution in the imaginary republic of Laurana.

The clay model for the bust of the late Joseph Medill of Chicago has been badly damaged in some way in the studio of the sculptor, Richard H. Park of Chicago, and he will have to reproduce it from memory.

Pretty Hot Stuff.
Colonel Bob Simmons manages to keep his eyes open by consuming a plentiful supply of birdseye peppers, which a superintendent of one of his numerous Louisiana plantations sends him weekly. Did you ever eat birdseye? It is a quarter inch in diameter, shaped like a double convex lens, with a black pupil and dark brown iris. The hottest sauce known to man is made of it.

The colonel delights in offering one to an acquaintance and watching furtively to see the tears come. He tried three on me. I bolted them and smiled, for there was no present heat. In an hour, after they had scorched the walls of my stomach and their fierce fire had crept up my esophagus to the roof of my mouth, I was crying as a baby. Quantities of milk but increased the torrefaction. The throat was a crematory. Water cold as ice scalded. My sufferings lasted a night, and I prayed that the colonel might never go to as hot a place as I was.—New York Press.

A SUMMARY OF THE BRITISH-BOER CAMPAIGN

CANADIANS WOUNDED.

Ottawa, Ont., May 23.—A cable was received to-day announcing that the following non-commissioned officers and men belonging to the Canadian contingents have arrived at the Herbert Hospital, Woolwich, from South Africa: Pte E. D. Craig, Pte. W. Maratello, Corporal A. Lohman, Pte. A. Brach, Lance Corp. F. D. Rne, Col. Sgt. C. Thompson, Pte. J. Johnston, Pte. R. B. McFarlane, Pte. Carew, Pte. H. Durant, Pte. McConnell, L. F. Finch, Pte. Fradham.

REBELS SURRENDERING.

Kimberley, May 22.—About 800 rebels have surrendered at Vryburg, north of Kimberley and a little more than half way between that place and Mafeking. The road is all clear from Mafeking and all opposition in this district is practically ended.

WARREN'S PROGRESS.

Cape Town, May 22.—Gen. Warren has occupied Douglas after heavy fighting and without sustaining any loss. The Boers have retreated to the north.

FRENCH ADVANCING.

Honing Spruit, Orange Free State Tuesday evening, May 24.—General French has crossed the Rhenoster River, northwest of here. This movement combined with Gen. Ian Hamilton's occupation of Heildron, renders the Boer position 20 miles in our front untenable, but the latest reports received say the Burgers are prepared to make a strong resistance and possess 15 guns. Fifteen prisoners were taken to-day.

KRUGER FEARS THE WEST.

London, May 23.—The Times has received a despatch from its correspondent, Hofmeyr, who was released by the Boers after having been a prisoner for seven months in Pretoria. He quotes a high Government official as saying that President Kruger dreads an invasion from the west. He says that if an attack is made from that quarter the Boers will be done for. They can check the British on the east, but have not enough men for the west.

DESPATCH FROM LORD ROBERTS.

London, May 23.—The War Office issues a despatch from Lord Roberts under date of Honing Spruit, May 22, announcing the receipt by him of the following message from Major-Baden-Powell:

Mafeking, May 17.—I am happy to inform you that Mafeking was successfully relieved. The Northern and Southern columns joined hands on May 15 and attacked the enemy yesterday, and after a small engagement entirely defeated them with loss. The British casualties were three killed and 22 wounded. The relieving force marched into Mafeking at 9 a.m. and the relief and defence forces combined and moved out and attacked the enemy's head laager. We shelled them out and nearly captured Snyman and took 1 gun, a flag, and a large amount of ammunition, stores, etc. Five dead and 15 wounded Boers were found. The enemy appeared to be retreating in all directions except one commando, which is lying low, possibly to cover the retreat of the remainder. Capt. McLaren and Corp. Murray were found in the Boer hospital. They are doing well. The town people and the garrison of Mafeking are heartily grateful for their relief. Lord Roberts' despatch further states—Ian Hamilton reached Heildron this morning after a series of engagements with a Boer force under Dewet, who is retiring before him. Broadwood has captured 15 Boer wagons. There have been 75 casualties in Hamilton's force to yesterday evening. He marched here this morning.

NOT SINGING FOR PEACE.

New York, May 23.—President Kruger of the South African Republic has sent a cablegram from Pretoria to the World, dated yesterday, saying in four words that the report that the Transvaal Government is suing for peace, is untrue.

ADVANCING IN FORCE.

Lord Roberts Again Moves Upon the Boer Positions.

London, May 23.—2.06 p.m.—Once more Lord Roberts is advancing in force. The wait at Kromstad is over and already the main British army is about twenty miles north of its former resting place. Lord Roberts is at Honing Spruit Station, while flanking him on either side of the railway are General French's cavalry and General Ian Hamilton's mounted infantry, both slightly in advance of Lord Roberts and threatening to envelop the Boer position, which extends for twenty miles due north. Gen. French probably crossed the Rhenoster River near its junction with Honing Spruit, which runs thence to Honing Spruit Station. The main British army will probably advance along the railway, while General French converges from the west and Gen. Hamilton from the east. Against this overwhelming force the Boers will probably follow their usual tactics of retreating to positions which, doubtless, have been prepared in advance for their occupation.

Gen. French and Gen. Hamilton are separated from each other by about forty miles, while Lord Roberts is within twelve miles of Gen. French and thirty miles of Gen. Hamilton.

Since the last despatch left Honing Spruit yesterday, Lord Roberts has doubtless still further advanced and by now is either engaging or following the retreating Boers.

Despatches to the Associated Press from Heildron says that the Boer general De Wet had 4,000 men posted on the adjacent hill, but that he retired when Gen. Hamilton approached. President Steyn fled from Heildron May 20, and his destination is not known.

BOERS AT HARMONIA.

Five Thousand of them May Make a Strong Stand.

London, May 22.—A despatch from Maseru Basutoland reports that there are 5,000 Boers with ten guns at Harmonia, where they are expected to make a stand, the country there being rugged and most favorable to them.

GENERAL BULLER ANNOYED.

Col. Bethune Lost His Men Through Disobeying Instructions.

London, May 23.—General Buller's annoyance at the capture of a squadron of Bethune's Horse near Vryheid is revealed in the inclusive summary of the orders which Bethune had received from him. The squadron had gone well armed into the Vryheid district, instead of halting at Nqutu and then marching to Newcastle. The success of the Boers in reverting to their hunters' stratagems and luring a mounted force into ambush will serve to convince their leaders that guerrilla warfare is their strongest resource during the remainder of the campaign. Among the wounded in this affair is the Earl of Albemarle. He is a nephew of Lord Sackville, whose diplomatic adventures in the United States will not be forgotten.

FOUR YEARS FOR MINTYRE.

Sent to Mimico Industrial School for Needed Discipline.

Arthur McIntyre will spend the next four years of his young life in the Industrial School at Mimico.

This was the punishment meted out to him today for the crime of killing his father, the jury having found him guilty last evening on the charge of manslaughter.

The lad too this sentence with the same coolness that characterized his conduct throughout the trial. He left the court-room still smiling, while his broken-hearted mother was tendered womanly consolation in the witness-room.

Mr. Justice Street told the boy he had behaved very badly. While he had certainly not intended to kill his father, his conduct in the affair had been very wicked, and merited severe punishment. He was a wilful, perverse boy, and would have to be taught that he could not always have his own way. He would get this instruction, as well as be restrained from the perusal of bad books, at the Mimico Industrial School.

Marvellous Developments

THE ROB ROY MINES

Are taking place at the property. Matters are in such a state that we really cannot see how it is possible for us to fail now. A practical miner of 33 years' experience told one of our shareholders this week, that where ore was found scattered as ours is it was an unfailing indication of an immense ore body—he had never in all his experience known this sign to fail.

We have found ore in several new places, and our Superintendent writes us this week, "I feel it in my bones that we are on the eve of a strike."

The special issue of stock at fifteen cents (15) per share is being taken up freely, orders coming in from all over by mail. Orders for about 18,000 shares have been received this week so far.

This stock is one of the safest investments at this price that you can get into and offers opportunities for making large profits very seldom met with, and for a thoroughly safe and remunerative investment we recommend these shares. As soon as we strike the Ore Body the property will develop itself and no more shares will be offered. Get a copy of the Ferguson "Eagle" from our office if you haven't seen one and see what the Rob Roy is thought of there.

GREAT PANIC AT PRETORIA.

The Boers Said to Be in a State of Terrible Disorder.

London, May 24.—A despatch from Bloemfontein states that the Boers are sending all their valuables to Portuguese territory. The rush from the doomed city has begun in earnest, thousands of women and children being sent away to a place of safety. The Boer army will concentrate in front of Johannesburg, where the great battle of the war will be fought. President Kruger, assisted by President Steyn, is personally directing the movements of the troops. Entrenchments are being thrown up in all directions, and are being so constructed as to make it difficult, if not impossible, for cavalry to advance.

A Curious Lake.

A curious phenomenon is that metal never rusts in the waters of Lake Titicaca. You can throw in a chain or an anchor or any article of ordinary iron and let it lie for weeks, and when you haul it up it will be as clean and bright as when it came from the foundry. And, what is stranger still, rust that has been formed upon metallic objects elsewhere will peel off when immersed in its waters. This is frequently noticed by railway and steamship men. Rusty car wheels and rails and even machinery can be brightened by soaking them in the waters of Lake Titicaca.—Chicago Record.

Just where the large crowds that suddenly fill the galleries of the senate and house when a notable speech is being made come from is a puzzle. They spring up, however, and as strangely disappear into nothingness.

MAKING'S LONG SIEGE.

Making has been in a state of siege since October 9. Colonel Baden-Powell had under his command about 500 irregulars. At the first intimation that there might be war the colonel began preparing for an attack on Making by the Boers. He constructed a thorough system of entrenchments and shelter trenches and completely surrounded the town with a strong wire netting. Immediately upon the declaration of war Gen. Cronje, with 4,000 Boers, appeared in the vicinity of Making and began to throw up earthworks around the city. On Oct. 14 the first battle took place. An armored train was sent out of Making for the purpose of repairing the railroad, which had been torn up by the Boers. The burghers attacked the train, and Col. Baden-Powell immediately sent reinforcements. The Boers were prevented from capturing the train, but the British were driven back into Making. The following day Col. Baden-Powell loaded up two railway trucks with dynamite and had it pulled out of the town with a locomotive. He was afraid that when the Boers got their large guns in position they might explode the stuff if it was kept in Making. He also hoped that the Boers would make a close attack on the train and during it explode the dynamite. The attack was made, and the British claimed that the Boers suffered casualties to the number of 300. No such reports have ever been made by the Boers. On Oct. 20 Col. Plumer made a determined attempt to relieve Making with an armored train from the north. The Boers drove him back. He continued these attempts until late in December, when he returned to Fort Tuli. On October 24 the Boers seized the water works after a sharp fight with the British, who had made a sortie. The next day the Boers tried to follow up their advantage, but were again repulsed. With the defeat of Gen. Methuen, Col. Baden-Powell gave up hope of being relieved for many months. The soldiers and the residents were placed on short rations. On Nov. 29, the British made another sortie, and there was sharp fighting, but the Boers drove them back into the town. After that the fighting around Making became routine. The Boers had about 2,000 men stationed there. Each day Making was bombarded, and almost every day the men under Col. Baden-Powell made a diversion in the hope of catching the Boers napping. March 3 news reached the outside world to the effect that fever was rife among the garrison. The information left Making Feb. 19. The sickness was caused by the absence of vegetable food. The women as well as the men were stricken, and in addition there were many deaths among the children. The hospitals were crowded to overflowing. The natives were in the worst plight, hunger and want being plainly discernible in their gaunt faces. At this time there had been 292 deaths from Boer bullets or disease. The garrison was still determined to resist the siege until relief came. After receiving reinforcements from Rhodesia Col. Plumer resumed his march, but definite advices as to his progress have been very meager. He was within a day's march of the town for a long time, but the Boers prevented his further advance by concentrating forces beyond the line of siege. There had been recently almost daily shelling of the town, and the imprisoned people have been reduced to horse sausage and food not generally desired by delicate palates. With hope almost abandoned of Col. Plumer reaching Making from the north, Gen. Hunter was sent from Kimberley, and while one part of his army hurried towards the besieged town, another diverted the attention of the Boers by crossing into the Transvaal. It was this force that raised the British flag at Christiana.

HIGH EXPLOSIVES.

Making Them Is a Very Dangerous Trade—Favours That Boost the Manufacture of Nitroglycerine.

Nitroglycerin and its peculiarities are little known, even in localities where it is made. People generally give it a wide berth, and even a less number know how it is manufactured. Probably in no place in the United States is there such a great amount of the explosive used as in the Indiana oilfields, says The Philadelphia Press. Indiana has four nitroglycerin factories, and they are seldom visited by curious people.

The explosive is made from a composition of acids and glycerin. It is generally pale yellow in color, and quite colorless when pure. It is odorless, and has a sweet, pungent, aromatic flavor. If touched by one's tongue, or even brought into contact with the skin, it will produce a severe headache. A large tank, called an agitator, is where the fluid is mixed, and the mixture is composed of equal parts of nitric and sulphuric acids. Inside the tank are several paddles, like those of a churn, and it is here that the real danger exists. The paddles are put in operation and a steady stream of sweet glycerin is turned into a vat until 250 pounds are thoroughly mixed with the 1,500 pounds of acid. The chemicals coming in contact produce an intense heat, and in order to obviate the danger cold water is run through pipes encircling and running through the vat. At 85 degrees F. a red vapor, almost like fire, arises. If cutting off the supply of glycerin in the agitator does not lower the temperature, it is time to say farewell. Before 90 degrees are reached nothing but atoms of the structure and its contents are left.

Colonel William A. Meyers, of Bolivar, N.Y., was the man who made and exploded the first round of nitroglycerin in an oil well. He built the first factory in the United States, near Titusville, Pa., in 1868. Up to that time powder had been used to torpedo oil wells. It was then that an explosive that could be discharged under water was found in nitroglycerin. Colonel Meyers' father was a Philadelphia chemist and taught his son how to make it.

The first well torpedoed was on Colonel Mills' lease, near Titusville, and the charge consisted of only two and the charge consisted of only two pounds. Oil was worth $9 a barrel then, and a torpedo that would double the production of a well was worth almost what the maker chose to ask for it. Colonel Meyers built 12 different factories in different parts of the oil regions from 1868 to 1888, when he retired from the business. Only one of the original factories stands intact to-day. Meyers made several fortunes and spent his money like a prince, but, fortunately for him, he still has a snug sum laid by.

SCRAPS OF SCIENCE.

Water boils and vaporizes at 212 degrees F. above zero, while liquid air boils and vaporizes at 312 degrees below zero. It is estimated that in the streets of an average city there are about 3,000 bacteria to the cubic yard of air and in a hospital ward or where there is sickness as many as 80,000.

It has been observed that artesian wells have a daily period of ebb and flow as well as the ocean tides, only the process is reversed. The time of greatest flow of an artesian well is the period of low tide in the ocean.

PROSPECTUS

The Canadian Portland Cement Company has been formed for the purpose of acquiring the cement business carried on by the Rathbun Company at Napanee Mills and Marlbank in the Province of Ontario; the business of the Beaver Portland Cement Company at Marlbank and the business of the St. Lawrence Portland Cement Company at Montreal, in the Province of Quebec.

The assets are to be turned over to the new company free of all encumbrances and comprise the following: 1. The factory of the Rathbun Company at Napanee Mills, with ample factory site and clay lands, and with all buildings, plant, etc., in full running order, having a capacity of 325 barrels of completed cement per day.

The factory of the Beaver Portland Cement Company at Marlbank, controlled by Messrs. James Dobson and Chas. J. Webb of Philadelphia, with all lands, buildings, and plant used in connection therewith, having a capacity of at least 500 barrels of completed cement per day.

The leasehold factory and premises of the St. Lawrence Portland Cement Company, of Montreal, used in the manufacture of Silica Cement.

MARL PROPERTIES. The Marl deposits at Marlbank, with dredges, plant, and appliances connected therewith, and owned and used by the Beaver Portland Cement Company and the Rathbun Company in connection with their cement business, containing altogether about 53 acres of land.

The report of Mr. M. J. Butler, C. E., shows that the supply of marl upon these properties is practically inexhaustible, the survey showing 19,535,718 cubic yards of marl, sufficient to produce at least 69,225,000 barrels of Portland Cement.

STOCK. Supplies, cement manufactured or in process of manufacture or cash to the amount of $50,000.

TRADE MARKS—PATENT RIGHTS. The "Star" brand and other brands and trade marks of the Rathbun Company and the Beaver Company, the Silica Cement Patent Rights for the Dominion of Canada owned by the Rathbun Company, and the goodwill and businesses, including all the trade marks and rights of all the Companies above named.

Silica Cement is manufactured from Portland Cement and sand, by a patented process exclusively controlled by this Company for the Dominion of Canada, under the patent rights above referred to. This product has been most favourably received by consumers, and forms a growing and profitable trade.

The above-mentioned trade marks and brands have taken a long time and great expense to establish, and are an asset of great value. The whole output of the new Company will be manufactured from the same materials and under the same management and staff and sold under these brands.

MARKET

The Cement business of the Rathbun Company has been established for a number of years, and the "Star" brand of Portland Cement and the "Citadel" and other brands of Silica Cement have been thoroughly established as first-class, being accepted by the Government of the Dominion of Canada, by the Grand Trunk Railway Company, the Canadian Pacific Railway Company, the Intercolonial Railway Company, by the City of Montreal and Toronto, and by other steam and electric railways and municipalities throughout the Dominion.

Prior to the incorporation of this Company the Rathbun Company had contracted for the sale of their whole output for the year 1900, and no difficulty is anticipated in disposing of the entire product of the new Company in view of the extent and character of the demand for the brand of cement of which that product will consist. The confidence of the railways, municipalities, and the principal purchasers of cement throughout the country in the brands of this Company having been gained, not only as a result of scientific tests, but by years of actual use, such cement has become a staple article of commerce, the demand for which has increased each year, and is certain to increase in even greater proportion in the future. No important engineering or architectural work can be undertaken without the use of cement. Every steam and electric railway annually uses large quantities in the construction and maintenance of its works. It is used to an increasing extent in replacing masonry, being much more easily moulded to the required form. The foundation of every permanent pavement laid upon the streets of our cities is constructed with it, and not only in the larger cities, but also in the smaller towns and villages throughout the country it is gradually displacing wood in the construction of sidewalks.

RAILWAY FACILITIES

The marl beds, clay banks, and works of this Company are situated directly on the line of the Bay of Quinte Railway, midway between junctions with the Canadian Pacific Railway at Tweed and with the Grand Trunk Railway at Napanee. This affords to the output of this Company competing lines for railway freight, while access to water communication is obtained at Deseronto and Kingston over the Bay of Quinte railway.

The location of their works will enable the Company to manufacture the larger portion of their output without railway transport of either clay or marl, and to load the finished cement direct from the works upon the railway cars.

PROFITS

The Toronto General Trusts Corporation have made a special audit of the cement business of the Rathbun Company at Napanee Mills for the year ending 31st December, 1899 and their certificate shows a net profit of $84,623.80.

This result was attained with a plant producing an average of 325 barrels of completed cement per day.

The plant and equipment of the Beaver Company are only now being completed, but that Company undertake to deliver to the new Company by 1st June their plant and equipment, completed in every respect, and of the most modern design, capable of producing 500 barrels of completed cement per day.

It will be seen by the above that the profits from the business of the Rathbun Company alone were largely in excess of the total amount of $450,000 Preference Stock dividend on the Preference Stock of the new Company, and it may reasonably be expected that the earnings of the combined Companies will be such as to enable the new Company to pay the additional 1 per cent. dividend on this stock. It is also anticipated that by the consolidation of interests the cost of production and sale will be considerably reduced.

As has been already pointed out, the Company do not anticipate any difficulty in disposing of their entire output, and in this connection it may be mentioned that last year the Rathbun Company found it necessary to buy a considerable amount of imported cement which was used in the manufacture of Silica Cement, their own factory not being able to supply the demand in sufficient quantity.

DIVIDENDS

The Preference Stock is entitled to a first cumulative dividend of 7 per cent. per annum, payable half-yearly, and after the Common Stock has received a like dividend shall be entitled to share with the Common Stock in any surplus profits up to, but not exceeding, a further 1 per cent. upon the Preference Stock.

RESERVE FUND

The By-laws of the Company provide that after payment of the 7 per cent. dividend upon the Preference Stock, and before any dividend shall be declared and paid upon the Common Stock, the Company shall set apart out of any profits earned, as undivided profits, an annual sum of not less than $15,000 and not more than $25,000 until a Reserve Fund of $150,000 has been accumulated, which fund is to be used by the Company, or invested, as may be directed by the Board. The By-laws of the Company also provide for the election of two directors by the Preference stockholders to represent them on the Board.

AUDIT

The Toronto General Trusts Corporation have undertaken the yearly audit of the Company's affairs, and will certify that the proper amount has been set aside for the Reserve Fund, as provided by the By-laws, before dividends are declared on the Common Stock. They will also act as Transfer Agents of the Company, and will countersign all certificates of stock.

DISPOSAL OF PREFERENCE STOCK

Of the total amount of $450,000 Preference Stock, $200,000 has already been taken at par by Directors and others interested in the Company, $50,000 remains in the Treasury, and the balance of $200,000 is now offered for sale at par by Messrs. Osler & Hammond, 18 King Street West, Toronto, the right being reserved by them to accept the offers of applicants for the whole or any proportion of the amounts applied for.

A deposit of 10 per cent. is payable on application, and the balance on allotment, which will be made not later than the 5th June prox. If no allotment is made deposit will be returned, and if a partial allotment is made the surplus deposit will be applied towards the amount payable on allotment.

In making allotments regard will be had to the order in which applications for stock are received.

Application will be made in due course to have the Preference stock listed on Toronto Stock Exchange.

Report of the Auditor of the Toronto General Trusts Corporation on the cement business of the Rathbun Company, and report of Mr. M. J. Butler, C. E., on the marl properties, may be seen at the office of the undersigned, where forms of application, together with copies of Prospectus, may also be obtained.

Grim Stories of the Gold Fields of Alaska

(From Ainslee's Magazine).

HIS is the story of Alexander McDonald, one of the best known characters in the Yukon Valley. He is a great lumbering, Scotchman—born in Nova Scotia, who up to the time of the Klondike discoveries never had an idea of winning a greater fortune than that of a day laborer. He worked from mining camp all along the Northwest. So slow was he and so awkward in his work—his feet entirely in his way and his bulk a misfit for the size of prospect holes—that he was reputed never to be able to hold a job for longer than three weeks. He was at Dawson shortly after the first locations were made on the Klondike. He went out with numerous stampedes, but never arrived in time to locate a paying claim. Finally he stumbled across a newspaper man named Hunt, who had a claim on Bonanza Creek. Hunt had become discouraged because he had not the funds necessary to develop it. This claim McDonald purchased for three hundred dollars and set about developing it in his usual slow and aimless fashion. Finding the claim fairly rich, he put on a force of laborers and in a few weeks had taken out eighty thousand dollars. This sum he used immediately to purchase other claims. All that year, he bought right and left everything of any promise that was offered to him, often mortgaging the claims thus bought to buy still other ground. Many of the ventures came to naught, but a few gave such phenomenal returns that he speedily took the rating of a millionaire. Out of one claim on El Dorado Creek he shored twenty thousand dollars in twelve hours. To-day he is probably worth between two and three million dollars.

ON THE VERGE OF MADNESS.

"Here is a typical illustration of the extreme hardships of the life in Alaska. Middleton was a young Englishman, slight and small, and accustomed to all the refinements of civilized life. He had enough money to buy a modest outfit, but had never camped out or roughed it before this time. He and his partner went in by the Chilkoot Pass in 1897 and tramped the whole way. They had a sledge and four Irish setters, with twelve hundred pounds of freight. The partner being the stronger, busied himself into the harness and pulled as leader of the team. Middleton's duty was to walk behind the sledge and push. There are no roads, properly speaking, in Alaska. Except in winter the trails are sloughs of icy mud worked soft by the feet of the gold seekers. The snow is always over the shoes and an unguarded step will plunge the walker to the waist. The Canadian Government has done nothing to better the condition of the trails. This fact, coupled with the exorbitant fees charged the miners by that government, have led the prospectors, at more than one point on the trails, to set up boards with this derisive motto—

"Millions for tribute, but not one cent for roads."

"The gold seeker himself carefully refrains from doing anything more to the trails than will serve to help him out of present difficulties and to carry him on his way."

"The first important thing Middleton learned was to swear. Everybody swears in Alaska. There is a belief that nothing of moment can be accomplished there without profanity. It is the safety valve that keeps men from madness when the pressure of the conditions becomes exasperating. Only Swedes do not acquire the habit, and perhaps it would be better if they did. Their natural slowness of speech keeps them quiet under trouble, but the feeling is there just the same. The stress of bitter hardship is on all alike, and the effect is cumulative when it is not worked off. A story to illustrate the virtue of swearing concerns a Swede who had struggled through a long half day of small disasters. His patience was marvellous. He was wet and chilled. He righted his sledge after ups and downs of better luck. But along in the afternoon, where the trail skirted a hill, some sudden freak twisted his dogs off to one side and sent the sledge and its load rolling down into the little valley beneath. It was nothing worse than had happened before, but somehow it snapped the last cord of his resistance. He stood for moment, his hands above his head and his features working as if in a convulsion, then with a yell he dashed after the team, pulled an axe from the leashes, killed the dogs one after another, and smashed the sledge and load into little pieces. Suddenly reason returned. He sat down in the snow beside his ruined outfit and cried like a child.

"To rejoin Middleton at the time of his learning to swear. The whole life goes on at such high pressure that everybody is on the verge of madness. It is the strain of the thing that counts. Middleton had his turn with the rest. Once, when slipping, he saved his footing by hanging to the sledge. His partner feeling the drag, promptly cursed him for adding to the load. When Middleton got down and pushed harder to make up for lost time, his partner snarled and his head reared with the added effort. When one of the dogs dropped on the snow to rest, the sledge stopped and each man turned furiously on the other. The words came hot and fast. Middleton noticed all at once that he was not talking, but simply screaming, and that he could not help it. Then things went away from him. When he came to himself his partner's arms were around him, and his partner's voice, as tender as a woman's, was saying to him—

"There! there! Take a brace, old man. In a minute you'll be all right."

"By ten minutes Middleton was all right, and they were both laughing and plodding as before. It is this sort of thing that makes up the daily tragedy of the trails."

CHANCES IN ALASKA.

"If, then, there is gold in Alaska that will take years in the finding, and the population at present and to be indicates permanent white occupation of the country, it is extremely pertinent to inquire whether or not it is worth while to try under the existing conditions to get this gold. This is not so easy a question to decide as would appear. Most writers on the subject have been inclined to take a pessimistic view. The waste of health, energy and money resultant from the unreasoning haste of gold seekers, the rigorous conditions of climate, the natural inaccessibility of Alaska limiting the search to the people fitted to undertake it, have all combined to make prophets gloomy and advisers sour. It must be admitted, too, that the proportion of success to failure has been pitifully small. It is probably a large estimate to allow that one in ten of the gross number of the adventurers has taken as much out of the mines as he put in. This would seem to show conclusively that mining in the Yukon does not pay. But a careful consideration of the conditions of the case will reveal that this is not necessarily true. The general argument against runs somewhat thus: 'The output of gold from a given camp amounts to the given figure for a given time. A stated number of people has been in the camp during this period. It has cost each one of these people a certain sum for transportation, outfit and maintenance during the time allowed. Divide the total return by the number of people and thus get the return per man. Compare this with the cost per individual, and the result will determine the question of gain or loss.'

FAILURES LESS THAN ONE IN TEN.

"The individual cost in these instances was rightly reckoned at from $600 to $1,000. It will be seen readily that the output of the camp must have been fabulous even to have equaled the aggregate of expense. The fallacy of this method of reckoning lies in this—that it is not fair to measure against the output of a camp the total expense of all the people in it, or to assume that, because the output of an individual cost $1,000 at the beginning of the rush it will continue to remain at this figure. Again, as a matter of fact, the output of the camp increases steadily as compared with a fixed amount of labor because of the increased efficiency of that labor through better understanding of conditions and through the introduction of better methods."

"In any business enterprise we expect a large number of failures as a matter of course. The figures of the commercial agencies show that but one of ten enterprises is carried to success. As a cold-blooded business proposition, therefore, Alaska mining is as good a business venture as merchandising or farming. What is more, the proportion of success to failure in Alaska is really greater than one in ten. It is estimated that at Dawson only one in six of the inhabitants is engaged in mining. The five are carpenters, keeping saloons, working for others, or waiting for something to turn up. The failure or success of the five should not be included in the miner's account. It is evident that with the smaller number to add items to the expense account the ratio of expense to return would be materially lessened in the miner's favor.

"Another fact against the statement that the Alaska mines do not pay is the shortness of the period on which estimates are based. No man in ordinary business expects to make a profit of one hundred per cent, the first year on the capital invested. Usually a much longer time before profit is reached. The conditions of mining in Alaska are such that no man can expect a material return from his claim until he has been in the country two years. As a rule, it takes a year to learn to prospect and to find a paying claim. This accomplished, at least a season must be spent in developing and getting the pay dirt into the dumps. At the beginning of the second season the real clean-up begins, and the miner finds his ultimate return. It is obvious, therefore, that the returns from a single year—especially as the mines have been operated less than three years altogether—are too incomplete to constitute a correct basis of estimate."

HOW LUCK RUNS IN ALASKA.

"At first sight it would seem that the like good luck might fall to any man, but the reality runs much the other way. The man of quick intelligence, of judgment and decision is not the man who ordinarily achieves this sudden wealth. It is the man who is too stupid to know the risks he is taking, and it is the reckless man who plunges wildly and misses no desperate chance, who seems favorites of the gods of chance. Nor do all good luck stories have pleasant endings. Often after the 'pile' is made, accident, disease or death steps in to prevent its legitimate enjoyment. One man dropped dead when at the weighing of the first clean-up he found himself a rich man. There was something wrong with his heart. He had the physical strength to make the fight against bad food and water, to endure the back-breaking toil of developing and working out, and all the strain of the uncertainty that went before. The supreme moment of success was more than he could stand, and the use of the gold passed from him with its acquisition. A certain James Macdonald lay down with typhoid fever in an outlying camp just as he was starting for home with the accumulations of the year, and he and his bag of loot entered Dawson together on a

Cheap Fireworks.

The Times Bookstore has a supply of fireworks purchased direct from the manufacturer, and can therefore be sold at greatly reduced prices as compared with other places. Will be open at noon to-day and this evening from 6.30 to eight.

Lost at West.

The remains of William Lush, third son of Mr. N. Lush, who died on Wednesday night, last place yesterday. The deceased was only 21 years of age, and had been ailing for some months with lung trouble. The parents and family have the sincere sympathy of the community in their great affliction.

Building Lots for Sale.

A number of superb building lots, beautifully situated in the town of Peterborough, for sale. This property belongs to the estate of the late Mr. John Tagney, and comprises lots No. 12 and 13, south of Main street and west of George street, directly opposite the residence of Mr. T. Bradburn. The property is divided into nine building lots, which will be sold cheap, as the estate must be wound up. For further particulars apply to P. J. Tagney, or John Trombley, Peterborough, or to S. Tagney, administrator, Lindsay.

They Miss the Times.

The Times helped to celebrate the Queen's birthday on Thursday, hence there was no issue of the paper yesterday morning. There were scores of enquiries for this paper as a result. The people miss the paper, and the children cry for it.

Wanted.

A second hand bedroom suit and a single bedstead. Apply at Times office for address.

Railway Notes.

The C. P. R. will start their Imperial Limited, which crosses the continent in four days, on January 11.
The C.P.R. will on and after June 7th, handle no cars that are not fitted with automatic couplers.
The Grand Trunk is handling large quantities of grain by way of Midland.
Mr. Wm. Dunlop, G. T. R. ticket agent, is in Toronto on business with the Passenger Department.

Should be Sprinkled.

Albert street, which leads to the Roman Catholic cemetery, should be sprinkled. The people have asked that this be done, and no attention was paid to their request. At the funeral of the late Mr. Cahill yesterday, at which the Mayor and Council attended in a body, that dust was stifling, and forced many to leave the procession. We think water should be given this street as well as other streets in this rapidly growing section of the town. People are willing to pay for it, and let them have it, we say.

Died in the States.

Mrs. P. Roche, 787 Water st., received the sad news of the death of her son, Mr. Thomas Roche, which occurred in the hospital at Baker City, Oregon. The deceased left Peterborough about 16 years ago, and went to the other side, where he followed the business of contractor. He was well and favorably known to many of our residents. The family have the sincere sympathy of very many in their great bereavement.

THE DAY IN PETERBOROUGH

HOW HER MAJESTY'S BIRTHDAY WAS CELEBRATED IN TOWN

A Synopsis of the Day's Proceedings—Large Crowds Take in the Various Events.

There being no issue of the Times yesterday we will merely give a synopsis of the day's proceedings. Peterborough is noted for the loyalty of its inhabitants, and Thursday's demonstration did not prove an exception. The weather was superb, and at an early hour the streets were filled with people, mostly from the town and neighboring villages. The decorations of the stores and dwellings gave the town a gala appearance.

The Morning.

The event of the morning was the military parade, which formed at the drill shed at 10.30. First in line came about 30 members of "C" squadron of cavalry, under Lieut. Bradburn, followed by the 57th and 58th Regiments, including the Veterans and the High School Cadet Corps. The marching of the men was good, especially the cadets. At Victoria Park a feu de joie was fired at noon, and the men gave hearty cheers for the Queen. The singing of the children was rather weak, but was offset by the splendid music of the band.

The Afternoon.

The bicycle parade was an event which attracted much attention and interest. The parade was not large, but was good. Mr. S. J. Kessman won the prize for the best decorated lady's wheel, and Master Kingscote took third prize. The prizes were three high grade wheels donated by Messrs. Thos. Barrie & Co., F. McPherson and Fred Davidson.

LACHESSE MATCH

The lacrosse match on the Ashburnham grounds between Toronto and Peterborough, resulted in a tie. It attracted a large crowd.

In the Evening.

The evening's events consisted of a "book parade," by the non-coms, of the 57th and 58th Regiments. The parade was exceedingly well gotten up, and the men who participated were heartily cheered. The fireworks were regarded as the leading feature of the day's programme. They were not, however, up to what the public had been led to expect. However, the entire town turned out to see the display, and everybody appeared in good humor. The music of the band was much appreciated, every selection being loudly applauded.

THE SMOKING CONCERT.

The smoking concert, which took place at the conclusion of the fireworks, was a decided success. The non-coms, deserve much credit for the way they assisted in the events of the day. An excellent programme was rendered.

DOWN THE RIVER.

The Salvation Army, under the auspices of their Sunday School, ran an excursion down the river, per steamer Beaver, where a delightful time was spent. A splendid programme of sports added to the pleasure of the excursion.

In Norwood.

Norwood, May 25.—The 24th of May was celebrated here, and nearly every town, village and city in Canada. Many from here spending the day elsewhere, as there was only a small celebration here, mostly for the young. A procession was formed of the school children and citizens, headed by the band and High School Cadets, which paraded the principal streets to the park, where sports were carried out, such as bicycle races, foot races, jumping, obstacle and menagerie race, bus ending contest, tug of war.

At Lakeside.

The annual picnic in aid of the Roman Catholic church at Lakeside attracted a large number. Owing to the popularity of Rev. Father Fitzpatrick many Peterborough people made it a point to spend the holiday always at his picnic. Addresses were delivered by Rev. Father McGuire, Hastings, Messrs. D. O'Connell, O. LePlante and others. The affair broke up with cheers for the Queen, Father Fitzpatrick and the Hastings band, who furnished music for the occasion.

Anniversary Services.

Rev. Mr. Bastow of the Murray st. Baptist church will present and address to the Sabbath school at Cold Springs, Ontario, to-morrow afternoon in connection with the school anniversary. On Monday there will be a tea and entertainment in the evening.

Wright is a son of Mr. Stewart Wright of Ashburnham.

GETTING READY.

Feeding Ahead of Hot Weather
"Not quite so much meat in spring-time; use the cereals, as they heat the blood less." Seasonable advice from an old practitioner.

If one uses some care as to food, the coming hot weather will be passed as comfortably as any season. In fact, a person possessed of a perfectly balanced set of nerves can be happy and comfortable under most any conditions.

The truest food for building up the nervous system to a perfect condition is Grape-Nuts. The makers are skilled in their art, and knowing that nature fills the brain and nerve centers with a soft gray matter which is based up more or less each day and must be replaced, (or nervous prostration sets in), and also knowing that this gray matter is made by the combination of albumen and phosphate of potash, they select the parts of the field grains that contain the needed materials, manufacture them into a delicious food, ready cooked, predigested, and of a fascinating flavor.

The use of Grape-Nuts quickly proves that it really does rebuild and strengthen the nervous system in a most certain manner. It is sold by all grocers and is in daily use in hundreds of thousands of the best families in America.

"Honesty is the Best Policy."

Never was a more pointed saying put into print, and yet to be honest only because it is policy is a poor kind of honesty. Better change "policy" to "principle" and the world will like you better. In the medical world there is one medicine honest for principle's sake—and that is Hood's Sarsaparilla.

It is the specific of the age for all blood troubles. The liver, kidneys and bowels are all toned up by its action as a cleanser and thus good health ensues. It never disappoints.

Rheumatism—"I believe Hood's Sarsaparilla has no equal for rheumatism. It has done me more good than any other medicine I have taken." Mrs. PATRICK KERR, Brampton, Ont.

Bad Cough—"After my long illness, I was very weak and had a bad cough. I could not eat or sleep. Different remedies did not help me, but Hood's Sarsaparilla built me up and I am now able to attend to my work." MINNIE JAGGS, Oshawa, Ont.

Biliousness—"I have been troubled with headache and biliousness and was much run down. Tried Hood's Sarsaparilla and it gave me relief and built me up." A. MONAGHAN, 50 Deane Street, Toronto, Ont.

Heart Trouble—"I had heart trouble for a number of years and different medicines failed to benefit me. I tried Hood's Sarsaparilla and three bottles completely and perfectly cured me." Mrs. C. A. FLEMING, Wallace Bridge, N. B.

A Safe-guard—"As I had lost five children with diphtheria I gave my remaining two children Hood's Sarsaparilla as they were subject to throat trouble and were very strong. They are now healthier and stronger and have not since had a cold." Mrs. W. H. FLUCKER, Pembroke, Ont.

Varicose Veins—"I have been a great sufferer from varicose veins, which swelled my foot and limb, discharging watery matter. I took Hood's Sarsaparilla faithfully and the sores healed." Mrs. A. E. GIBSON, Hartland, Vt.

The Hamilton Herald seems sorry that Sam Hughes has broken off in his correspondence. He has made worse breaks than that, however.

While this sudden weather is nothing to boast of for the season, some are doing a good deal of puffing and blowing on account of it.

The Boer delegates are not the only guileless foreigners who have taken the eagle's discordant shrieks for freedom seriously, and got rudely disillusioned.

A country which cannot run two by-elections honestly has no particular business to reach for a share in the job of bossing the British empire.

Of course, it's very clever of bicyclists to ride down street three or four abreast, with arms interlocked, but it has its risks. A Brantford girl tried to play or so ago and sustained concussion of the brain in the fall she got. Ride your wheel, oh cyclist, as much as you like, but put off your whirl dances till you're on the tight rope or some other safe place than the middle of your bicycle.

We suppose that as long as people's patriotism finds satisfactory vent only in fireworks, and similar explosives there will continue to be accidents. Accidents happen in every line of business, and in every form of fun-making, but there is one kind of accident usually caused by a fool that should be prevented from occurring by the suppression of the fool who throws fireworks at people for the purpose of seeing them jump. He generally throws them at women and children, and the result is that an occasional thug catches fire and on occasional girl gets burned to death.

Puzzled His Pap.

Questions That Made the Boy's Father Take a Day Off.

"Going to take the day off, eh?" said the chief of division to the clerk when the latter reported at the office at 9 o'clock and put in a slip for a day's leave. "Nothing the matter, I hope? No sickness at home, is there?"

"No," replied the clerk cheerily, leaning heavily on the chief's desk. "No sickness or anything like that. But I've got to put in a day of research. It's this way. That 10-year-old boy of mine sprung a lot of 'em on me when he was going over his lessons after dinner last night that stumped me and put me temporarily out of business. This was one of the questions:

"Three-eighths of a pole stands in the mud, one-fifth in the water, and the remainder of the pole, 21 feet, is above the water. What is the total length of the pole?"

"Sounds dead easy, doesn't it?" went on the clerk. "Well, it just stumped me on my head, that's what it did. Yes, I took my civil service examination over ten years ago, and I've tried earnestly and prayerfully to forget all the digging I had to do to squeeze through that. Then he asked me how old George Washington was when he died, how old the Polish Kosciuszko was when he offered his sword to the Revolutionary commanders, the date of the battle of Bunker Hill, the nature of the Missouri compromise, and 10 or 15 little ones like that. I had to extinguish him by telling him that I was reading my paper, but I promised him that I'd give him all the answers tomorrow, Sunday, in time for him to be right on them at school on Monday. Now, that kid thinks I'm 'it.' He thinks I know 'em all. He's big to let the other kids in the neighborhood that his dad can give their dad cards and spades and big cassines and beat them to death when it comes to brains with an upper case B."

"Well, I want to be sure you go right on thinking that. I wouldn't lose that young one's exalted opinion of me for a house and lot. It'd be a solar plexus finish for me to have him direct the blighting of my business. So I'm going up to the library, yank out a bundle of books of reference, get the answers to that list of questions, and tonight I'll spring 'em on the kid in an offhand sort of way, as if I knew 'em all the time, but just didn't have time to give 'em to him. I couldn't stand it to have that kid get on to me; not just yet anyhow. He'll have time to do that when he grows up."—Washington Post.

The Superstitious Camel.

There are few things more interesting in north China than the great Mongolian camel trains. The two humped Bactrian camel of central Asia is a magnificent beast, quite throwing his African brothers into the shade. When clothed in his new winter coat of rich dark brown fur, which even covers his knees, he is doubly imposing. A string of 15 to 20 camels is fastened together by a cord, attached to the nose of the first and the tail of the second, and so on to the last one, which wears a large bell around his neck so that the Mongol, who is perched on the leading camel, can easily discover when the connecting cord breaks.

A madman and a camel are the most suspicious creatures upon earth. The former, wrapped in rich silks and furs, as he is carried along in his sedan chair, glances at the European with pitying disdain. But the camel ignores you at all, and with a snarl on his mouth pulls slowly along, not deigning to look at anything that is not on a level with his eyes. It is therefore necessary to give a camel train a wide berth, for the great beasts would calmly walk over one, and, finding some obstacle in the road, would probably give a kick which would silence one for ever.—Cornhill Magazine.

Mr. Goodnight's Retiring Act.

London possesses one of the cleverest trained hounds in the world. His specialty is a retiring act, and to be entirely in accord with it he is named Mr. Goodnight. The costume in which he appeared for his act was checked trousers, dark jacket, boots on his hind feet and a straw hat. These clothes he took off leisurely and then sat down in an armchair and removed his boots.

He then left the ring and wheeled in his bedstead by pushing it along with his head. One by one the bedclothes followed, and, with a little help from the attendants, he was careful to place the bolster and pillow in the right position. A light was next brought in by the horns, but, as he raved around the ring, it went out. He promptly fetched another and lighted a candle by his bedside. After putting out the match or torch by kneeling down and knocking it on the sawdust, he laid down to rest, first of all putting his hind feet by knocking over the washstand on which he rested. When lying down, the hound pulled the quilt over his head and proceeded to be asleep.

LATEST MARKET REPORTS

PETERBOROUGH.

MR. ENGLISH'S REPORT.

The market for the past week has been the best one for the spring. There was a good supply of all kinds of produce and as a natural consequence prices were a few points easier. Market vegetables are in good demand and prices were good for this time of year.

The prices current for the week were as follows:

Wheat.—Very few loads were offered owing to the low price. The best quotations for the week being 6c.

Oats.—There is still a good demand for oats for general use around town. Prices 24c. with 7c. paid for local consumption.

Peas.—Peas declined in price in sympathy with the other grains. Best quotations were 60c. and 75c. for Canadian Beauties.

Barley.—There were no loads offered this week but quotations were given by the buyers at 40c. to 42c.

Rye.—There is no demand in town and there are no quotations being given.

Lucerne.—A few more loads were offered but sold at lower prices than quoted last week.

Hay.—There was an overplus of hay on the market this week, and as a result prices declined. Where tender exceeds 10,000, two and one half per cent on the excess must also accompany each tender.

The lowest or any tender not necessarily accepted.

JOSEPH FORSTER, WARDEN.

EGGS AND BUTTER.—There was lots of butter and eggs offered all through the week. Prices remain unchanged, quotations for butter 15 to 17 and eggs 30 to 35c. per doz.

LIVE STOCK.

There was quite a large movement in live stock during the past week. On Saturday Mr. McFarlane shipped nearly 100 head of yearling calves to American points and there was also a lot of stock as has been sent out of town for some time. He is loading again on Saturday week. Messrs. W. Stahler, R. Howden, and W. Morris are assisting him in buying the stock.

There were only a few hogs weighed on the market this week owing to the drovers being dissatisfied with the market weights. They claim that a heavier up beam should be allowed them. If they want anything further than ordinary up beam, arrangements will have to be made as between them and the sellers as the market ticket must show the correct weight as the scale gives it. Whether stock is sold to be weighed at the market or not, it will be to the farmers' interest as well as to the satisfaction to them to have their stock weighed on the public scales.

Mr. J. D. Fowler sold 5 very nice steers to Mr. J. H. Howden.

Mr. John Armstrong sold two very fine heifers to Mr. James Ruth for shipment to the Toronto market.

Mr. A. Garbutt sold five excellent steers to Mr. J. H. Howden. They averaged about 1200 each.

The price paid for hogs this week has been far below what the farmers should have got for them.

The ruling price on Wednesday was $5.75 for select while the Toronto price was $6.37 1/2. Why there should be 62 1/2 cents difference between Toronto and Peterborough is a puzzle.

The local quotations for next week are $6 per hundred for select while the market showing much firmer.

The price for heavy steers for export show an upward tendency. Export quotations for extra select steers reached 5.10 in some instances on Tuesday. Butcher's cattle are also firmer although prices are unchanged.

LORD ROBERTS NOW ARRIVED AT KLIP RIVER

The British Commander-in-Chief Only Eighteen Miles From Johannesburg.

KRUGER HAS MADE ARRANGEMENTS FOR FLIGHT

A Special Train, Provisioned, With Steam Up, Is Always Ready for the Transvaal President—Kruger Warns All to Leave Johannesburg at Once.

London, May 28. Lord Roberts announces his arrival at Klip River, 18 miles from Johannesburg.

London, May 28, midnight. The War Office, just before midnight, published the following despatch from Lord Roberts—Klip River, Transvaal, May 28, 5.25 p.m.—“We marched 20 miles to-day and are now 18 miles from Johannesburg. The enemy had prepared several positions where they intended to oppose us, but they abandoned one after the other as we neared them. We pressed them so hard that they had only just time to get their five guns into train and to leave this station, as some of the West Australians mounted Infantry dashed into it. French's and Ian Hamilton's forces are apparently engaged with the enemy about 10 miles to our left, as firing has been heard since noon. The farmers near our line of advance are surrendering with their arms and horses. Rundle occupied Senekal on May 24. No report of what took place has reached me yet.

A correspondent has just returned to Johannesburg from Pretoria, where he was disguised. He writes that Kruger has all the arrangements made for flight, presumably to Holland. A special train, provisioned, is always ready with steam up. The train waits some distance from Pretoria.

London, May 29. A despatch to the Daily Mail says—“The demoralization of the Transvaal is remarkable, panic and confusion prevail everywhere. Everyone is weary of the war and full of fear as to the coming of the British. Operations are being carried on for encircling Pretoria with telephonic communications. Fourteen points on the line of defence are connected with headquarters and with the State Artillery. But this apparently is the only defensive measure adopted. There are no other visible preparations. Around Johannesburg a few trenches at Parry's on the Queen's birthday to cross practically unopposed. The Boers were again outnumbered, having been led to concentrate the bulk of their forces at Englebrach drift to the right in expectation of an advance in that direction from Heilbron. The advance was made, but stopped short at Boschbank, leaving the Boers who defended the Englebrach drift to hear that French had easily crossed the river at Parry's and was threatening Potchefstroom and that Roberts' advanced patrols had surprised the defenders of the railway bridge at Vereeniging so that they had no time to completely demolish the structure. Prior to the accomplishment of these manoeuvres Roberts' army was drawn up a straight front of thirty miles—French at Parry's, to the left, the commander-in-chief in the center at Voelvloek, and Hamilton to the right at Boschbank. Both the right and left rested upon the Vaal, which in this locality formed a bend, the outer portion of which, containing the bridge, faced the British center. From the British headquarters at Vereeniging, notable only as a mining center, to Elatol, a distance of 41 miles, and from the latter place a branch railway ten miles in length runs westerly to Johannesburg, which is therefore only 51 miles away by rail and somewhat less when the crow flies. The most important function of Lord Roberts' despatch is that in which he states that his scouts crossed the Vaal only just in time to prevent the enemy from time to time carrying out his destructive work. It scarcely seems likely that this can be done, for the Boers have ample time in which to act. There is a strong probability, as indicated in their despatch on Friday, that the British advance upon Pretoria may be a detour around Johannesburg, thus avoiding the mines and depriving the Boers of the pretext which an attempt to seize the town would furnish. The burghers are quite justified according to the rules of war in destroying any property which might fall into the hands of the enemy. It is questionable whether such a course would be like cutting off the nose to spite the face, for the Boers would undoubtedly groan for years under the weight of another high time for the indemnity which would be demanded. As they have hitherto shown themselves to be influenced by an unreasoning hatred towards the rand capitalists who they blame for the war, the probability is that they will not miss the opportunity of striking a blow at the pockets of those capitalists who are the destruction of mines may not be far distant.

London, May 29, 5 a.m. The Morning Post has the following despatch from Johannesburg dated Monday:—“President Kruger has issued a public proclamation warning all people to leave Johannesburg, or to remain there at the peril of their lives, as it might become necessary to destroy the town and the mines. Hundreds of winter clothing for the prisoners at Pretoria have been sent by the Relief Association to U. S. Consul Hay as well as a thousand pounds in cash.

London, May 29. A despatch from Mafeking, dated May 23, says the total casualties since the commencement of the siege were 803. Among the white combatants out of 44 officers, 22 were killed, wounded or missing, and 190 men out of 975 were killed, wounded or missing.

London, May 28.—Lord Roberts entered the Transvaal yesterday morning, taking advantage of the flank movement effected by General French

BOER PLANS UPSET.

Enemy Expected the Passage of the Vaal at Another Point.

London, May 28.—A despatch to the Times from Taitsoach describes the successful passage of the Vaal river by the advance guards to Gen. Roberts' strategic redistribution of his front, which was the result of the calculation of the Boers, of whom thousands of whom were expecting Gen. Hamilton's advance. The Boers pushed across at Viljoen's drift.

The correspondents describe the ship which followed this move, and which accounted for the four casualties mentioned by Gen. Roberts. It was an affair apparently of only a few minutes. The chief opposer of the British was Blake's Irish brigade.

The Times' correspondent says it is rumored that Gen. Christiaan de Wet was seriously wounded.

RUNDLE REACHES SENEKAL.

Boers to the East Have Fallen Back on Bethlehem.

Senekal, May 27.—General Rundle, with artillery, the Voernary, and the Wilts, Middlesex, and Leicestershire regiments, under Major Labiche, has occupied Senekal, which is a field corner driven by a few shells. A number of other Boers were killed. The British casualties numbered eleven.

The Boers are believed to be concentrating near Bethlehem.

Revolutionists 29 Miles From the Capital.

Who the Society of Boxers Are.

Tien Tsin, May 28.—The Boxers burnt railway, 29 miles from Peking last night. They also wrecked the track, destroyed a number of cars, and murdered several Chinese employees. The Belgian engineers in charge of the work are safe at Fengtai. The Boxers are marching on towards Peking.

British Have Left.

Later.—The British and Belgians have left Fengtai, and the Boxers are expected here to-day. A relief train is bringing the refugees to Tien Tsin. The train service between Peking and Tien Tsin has been suspended since noon to-day.

The United States Cruiser Newark and a French man-of-war have arrived at Taku.

Affairs are critical.

Shanghai, May 28.—Reports received to-day indicate that affairs around Peking are extremely critical owing to the defeat of the Government troops by the Boxers. It is now regarded here as certain that foreign troops must be sent to Peking to protect the Legations, while the withdrawal of the British from the interior is considered imperative. Large portions of the Province of Pe-Chi-Li and Shanghai are in a state little better than absolute anarchy, and disorder is spreading in the Province of Shantung in consequence of the encouragement received from the Empress Dowager.

Who the Boxers are.

Originally They Were a Society for the Doing of Good.

Washington, May 28.—Eleven millions of men are said to belong to the great Chinese Society of Boxers, against which the great European powers may soon direct armed force. The Society of Boxers, which now stands for lawlessness, robbery and murder, was once respectable. It is a good influence gone wrong. Originally it was organized as a protest and a union of defence against the landlords with which the Province of Shantung was infested. It was, in fact, a law and

Mr. Menier has Asked for a Warrant for the Arrest of a Methodist Minister

Chicago, May 28.—The Tribune publishes the following special from Montreal—There is a crisis approaching in the affair of the Island of Anticosti, recently purchased by a French millionaire, and it is stated that preparations are being quietly made for an armed expedition to evict the settlers by force.

No trouble is feared with the settlers themselves, but it is feared that the fishermen and smugglers from the Labrador coast, who are usually well armed, will interfere, because Mr. Menier, the French owner of the island, has virtually driven them out of the waters surrounding Anticosti by charging them

CROSSED IN THREE PARTS.

Curve in the Vaal Made the Work of Roberts Easy.

London, May 28.—When Lord Roberts wrote his first despatch on the Transvaal territory yesterday, shortly before 2 o'clock in the afternoon, he was 51 miles from Johannesburg, 77 from Pretoria. His immensely superior forces had passed the Vaal river their last great natural obstacle, at three points. The Vaal forms a curve in the shape of a '3' and the west to east drift on the east. The curve of the curve is toward the Free State. Thus Lord Roberts, advancing along the Vaal river, was in a position to strike any party of the enemy by shorter lines than those by which the Boers could reinforce the threatened points. The Boers retreated almost without a fight. The French and Gen. Hamilton apparently did not fire a shot.

Of Lord Roberts' immediate force 11 men belonging to the 8th Mounted Infantry were the first to ford the river. They came upon a Boer patrol looting at Viljoen's drift, and a skirmish lasting ten minutes followed. Two hundred Boers tried feebly to hold the Vereeniging colliery, but they were dislodged.

The Boer rear guard is at Moyerton, ten miles north of Vereeniging. Their main body is being driven toward the Klip river hills that cover the south side of Johannesburg.

MOB BURN THE BRITISH FLAG.

An Evidence of the Strong Anglo-Saxon Sentiment That Exists in the United States.

Spring Valley, N.Y., May 28.—All the countryside is talking of the seizure and burning of the Queen's Birthday of a British flag at Munsey village. Pro-Boers did it. Thursday was the Queen's Birthday, and Robert Knox Sneed, 65 years old, a veteran of the war of the rebellion, flung to the breeze his Union Jack in celebration of the day. He knew his neighbors were antagonistic towards his flag, but he had a loaded shotgun ready. The veteran was up bright and early, and as his neighbors sat down to the breakfast table they saw the Britisher upon his roof unfurling his flag. In the afternoon there was a village confab regarding Sneed's banner. It was decided to storm his house and seize and burn the flag. The invading force, about twenty strong, got a long ladder and a number of American flags and marched to Sneed's home. Their leader, Charles Starr, summoned the veteran to the door. “We are here, Mr. Sneed. To tear down that flag,” said Commander Starr.

Sneed said he would get his gun, but in an instant several of his visitors had made him a prisoner. He struggled like a madman. The ladder was quickly placed against the side of the house, and up went the pro-Boers, with a shout of victory. The flag was ripped from its fastenings and a match touched it. Soon it was ashes. Then Sneed's enemies cheered “Old Glory,” bade the Arcturion old soldier a courteous good-bye, reminding him that the day's performance would be repeated if he ever hoisted the British symbol again under their noses. Sneed declares he intends to promote and to appeal to the British Consul in New York.

IT STIRRED THE WHOLE CITY.

Entire Police Force of Chicago Armed for a Battle, Which Proved a Fiasco.

Chicago, May 28.—With an armed body of men, two rapid-fire guns and some barbed wire for making entanglements, Captain George Streeter on Saturday took possession of 16 acres of land here. He claims to own the land, which, were the title clear, would be worth between thirty and forty millions of dollars.

In 1885 Captain Streeter and his wife were stricken on a little sandbar a few yards from shore, at the foot of Superior street. As the years passed by the dumping of all sorts of refuse and earth washed up by the lake formed a large tract, and Captain Streeter became a man of import. The tract became connected with the shore, and owners of adjoining property resented the presence of Captain Streeter and the retainers he had gathered about him. They carried the matter into the Supreme Court of the United States, which decided that the land was within the jurisdiction of the State of Illinois. Streeter thereupon offered the district to the Federal Government, and moved away.

At dawn Saturday the police found Streeter entrenched on the land. The Stars and Stripes gaily floated above him. About noon a policeman and two park officials came along, bent upon finding who was “encroaching upon their ground.” A volley from the pickets rifles quickly put to flight the investigation, however, and one of the bullet struck a fourteen-year-old boy in the right knee, inflicting a severe wound. The park officials fled to a patrol box and turned in a riot call. A force of 30 or 35 policemen, armed with revolvers and clubs, hurried to the scene. When the officer in command saw the display of force—Galling guns being pointed his way over the outcrops—he ordered a retreat to the station, where arrangements were made to arm them with Winchester rifles, in an endeavor to capture the Streeter forces.

Measures were being taken by the police department to meet what they expected to be the greatest battle between the police and opposing forces since the Haymarket riot. In every section of the city, patrol men were called from their beats wherever practicable and placed on reserve in the police stations. Then orders were issued to bring up the police battery, consisting of one Galling gun and two coach-boxes.

The impending conflict ended in a fiasco in the afternoon. When Streeter and his four men, all that was left of his army, heard that they were to be cased, they surrendered, and were escorted to the police station.

CANADIAN CASUALTIES.

Two of the Contingent were Injured at Mafeking.

London, May 28.—The War Office has issued a list of casualties among the Cape Colony regiments during the relief of Mafeking. A lieutenant and seven men were killed and six officers and 15 men were wounded. Among the wounded were W. Patton and W. McCollum, of the Canadian artillery. The War Office also issued a list of 35 deaths by fever between May 10 and May 25. Among the number are J. Raseberry and H. Clements, of the Canadian contingent.

Gunner William Patton was a member of the 4th Field Battery, Hamilton, and is a son of Mrs. A. J. Patton, of that city. Gunner W. McCollum is a son of Mr. H. McCollum, Fort William, Ont. These men were wounded in advance to the relief of Mafeking.

Pte. J. Raseberry, whose death is reported from fever, was a member of C Company of the first contingent and was formerly a member of the 5th West-Lothian Battalion.

De Hochevooght came from Cleveland to join the Toronto Company of the Mounted Infantry at Vereeniging. An exciting race took place for the bridge. The Boers succeeded in getting across first, and immediately proceeded to blow up the structure, but Col. Henry was quickly on the spot and he succeeded in seizing the southern portion of the bridge. The Boers were only able to destroy one span of the northern portion of the structure before they were obliged to retire. The British, it is said, also

HE STRUGGLED WITH A BEAR.

Thrilling Fight Which Took Place Between a Farmer and Bruin in Quebec

Sherbrooke, May 28.—The story of a thrilling encounter with a bear comes from Chatham, Que., 18 miles from Sherbrooke. It occurred on May 10. Mr. Chabonneau, who had a number of sheep killed by bears, set a trap near his barn, hitching it with a chain. On the evening of the 10th, Mr. Chabonneau went to the barn to look after his stock and found that he had caught Mr. Bruin. Getting his gun from the house he fired at the bear, but only wounded him. The bear was wild with rage and broke the chain which held the trap. The animal then gave chase to Mr. Chabonneau, who ran for the house. When within a few feet of the house he tripped and fell, and in an instant the bear was upon him, seizing him by one of the arms. Chabonneau's father, an old man, came to the rescue with an axe. He struck the bear one blow, when with a swing of his paw, bruin sent the axe flying and then attacked the old gentleman, knocking him down and tearing his arms and face in a terrible manner. Mrs. Chabonneau now appeared on the scene, when the brute turned its attention to the third antagonist. With a sweep of his paw he lacerated her arm from the shoulder to the wrist. In the meantime neighbors were attracted by the cry for help, and one brought a gun. It was some time before he could get a shot for fear of hitting old Mr. Chabonneau, who was under the bear. The chance came, however, and he fired with the muzzle of the gun close to the bear's head. The animal rolled over dead. The old gentleman was found to be seriously injured, and it is feared he will not recover. His body was very badly torn about the chest. Mr. and Mrs. Chabonneau's injuries were not so serious. The bear weighed 800 pounds.

The recapture of Heilbron by the Boers, which Gen. Roberts' unexpected decision in his despatch to the War Office, was probably foreseen, but in any case, in view of the disposition of the British forces, the recapture of Heilbron is hardly to be expected.

Gen. Hamilton has invaded the Transvaal, having crossed the Wonderboom drift.

President Kruger, according to a claim from Newcastle, has been clamoring asking the Boers to notify him of any movements.

ROBERTS WILL ENTER JOHANNESBURG TO-DAY

He is at Present Bivouacking in the Suburbs and Will Make Victorious Entry at Noon.

PORTION OF FORCE 20 MILES FROM PRETORIA

Boers Stood Their Ground Near Van Wyks and Met French's Turning Movement, Fighting Continued All Day, But Result is Not Yet Known.

London, May 30 3 a.m. Lord Roberts' bivouacking in the suburbs of Johannesburg, and intended to make a victorious entry at noon to-day. Judging from his despatches he has private information regarding the disposition of the garrison in the fort, as he does not seem to expect opposition.

Lord Roberts' cavalry have flanked on beyond Johannesburg. A portion is understood to be at Zandfontein, seven miles north of Johannesburg, and within twenty miles of Pretoria. Lord Roberts, although with a broken bridge at Vereeniging and a wrecked railway behind him, has somehow managed to forward sufficient supplies for his large force. As he has been able to do so much it is considered possible he will be at Pretoria Friday. The rapidity of the advance is thought an extraordinary achievement by grudging continental critics. The Boers were expected to fight along the line of hills known as Klip river, which runs between the eastern end of the range near Lord Roberts' advance line but they stood their ground on the extreme right near Van Wyks where they met Gen. French's turning movement. The fight continued all day and the result is as yet mere conjecture. Probably the Boers near guard succeeded in keeping General French off, and is now in the hills northwest of Johannesburg.

The Standard has the following advice from Pretoria, under Monday's date.

The Transvaal Government has opened or is about open peace negotiations. It is called a final inquiry to its agents abroad asking whether any hope exists of aid. Without doubt the presence of Lord Roberts with 40,000 men at Johannesburg has beaten the Transvaal decision.

Despatches from Lord Roberts yesterday described President Kruger as "wavering, but demanding a guarantee that he will not be exported to St. Helena." The fighting Boers still continue to desert, and the total collapse of the Boer military organization is not far off. Mr. Hume Durling writing from Lord Roberts' headquarters at Vereeniging, on Sunday, says: "I doubt if President Kruger can muster 15,000 men, as many of the Boers have gone to their homes."

The staunch Boers are sending their families with wagons and stores to Johannesburg district. Whether Pretoria will be defended or not is a question, although a Pretoria message dated Sunday, pictures the work of defending the capital as going on with ferocious activity.

Pretoria is situated in a wilderness of kopjes and ranges, and is provided with defence that require at least 20,000 men to properly. There may still be

The significance of this movement is that it prevents the Boers from retreating to the almost impenetrable mountains of the Zoutpansburg district, if they have not already occupied such mountains. Moreover, with Carrington's force advancing from the north, as it will probably do very shortly, the Boers will be hemmed in by three British columns and will have no opportunity of tracking into other portions of South Africa.

The formal annexation of the Orange Free State by Lord Roberts settles definitely the fate of the Transvaal, which is, of course, bound to be treated in like manner. It is interesting to note that the formal annexation was deferred until the British had practically occupied the State and crossed the Vaal.

TRANSVAAL INVADERS

Pretoria, Monday, May 29.—A British force marching from Mafeking occupied Zoutpansburg this morning, and a large force is marching on to Lichtenburg.

LAING'S NECK OUTFLANKED.

London, May 29.—The Times says: Without being unduly sanguine we may hope to hear within twenty-four hours that our vanguard has actually reached Johannesburg, where its presence will be exceedingly useful, if only to put an end to the threats of destroying the mines. It may be noted that even from the present position Lord Roberts controls the railway to Natal, since the nearest point cannot be more than nine or ten miles from his headquarters. This fact will unquestionably exercise a great influence over the Boers now fortifying the position at Laing's Nek.

LAST TRAIN NEARLY CAPTURED.

Boers had a Narrow Escape in Leaving Klip River.

Klip River, Transvaal, May 28.—The Boers, after preparing a good position, fired early. The train leaving the station was nearly captured by the Boers. The train was a passenger train, and the Boers were firing at it from the hills. The train was nearly captured, but the Boers were driven off by the British forces.

ANOTHER DAY OF HUMILIATION.

President Kruger Proclaims a Time of Public Prayer.

Pretoria, May 29.—An official bulletin states that the British entered the Vaal River on Saturday. Gen. French had a severe fight at Klip River, the Boers were wounded and the British were victorious. The Boers were five thousand strong, and the British were five hundred strong.

THROUGH THE BOER LINES.

British Scouts with Bullets Accomplish a Great Feat.

London, May 29.—A correspondent writing from Ladysmith, describes a brilliant action of British scouts with General Buller as follows:

"This week's most serious task was accomplished by two of the Mounted Infantry. Last night at present at Johannesburg, the Boers were firing at the British scouts. The scouts were firing back, and the Boers were driven off. The scouts were victorious, and the Boers were defeated."

HAS THE LINE BEEN CUT.

Rumor that French has Served the Boers from Johannesburg.

Cape Town, May 28.—It is rumored that French has served the Boers from Johannesburg. The rumor is that French has been seen at Johannesburg, and that he has been seen with the Boers. The rumor is that French has been seen at Johannesburg, and that he has been seen with the Boers.

Two of Them Were Provided With Funds by the Clan-na-Gael—Four Were Sent Away From Ireland by Moneys Raised by Maud Gonne—Striking Chain of Evidence.

New York, May 29.—It is reported here that the three men, Carl Dillman, J. The Clan-na-Gael is a secret society, and it is reported that it has been active in the Fenian dynamiters' cause.

Two of them at least—If not the whole three—were accredited agents of the Clan-na-Gael. The Fenian dynamiters were provided with funds by the Clan-na-Gael, and it is reported that the Clan-na-Gael has been active in the Fenian dynamiters' cause.

Despite this denial, the assertion is true in every respect. So much as the matter of the dynamiters' cause, it is a striking chain of evidence. The dynamiters were provided with funds by the Clan-na-Gael, and it is reported that the Clan-na-Gael has been active in the Fenian dynamiters' cause.

THE CRISIS IN CHINA IS APPROACHING A CLIMAX

Russia is Sending a Floatilla of Gunboats and Twenty Thousand Men to Tahn.

BOXERS ENLISTING, HORDES OF DESPERADOES.

They Declare Their Intention to Drive All Foreigners Out of China.

Boxers Assert That They Are Confident of Receiving Support of Empress.

London, May 29.—All indications point to the landing of troops by the European powers to quell the Boxer Society, whose anarchistic movement threatens the lives and property of foreigners in danger, and which the Chinese government has proved entirely unable to suppress. The crusade of the Boxers has now assumed great magnitude and has resolved itself into a war for the expulsion of all foreigners from the Celestial Empire. It is said by authorities that the Dowager Empress of China, who has long represented all that is a retrograde and against civilization, is a sympathizer with the Boxer movement, and there are those who whisper that she is to give her secret aid the Boxer to fight the Great Wall and enables its adherents to worst the Imperial troops. It is clear that the moment has now come for the entry into China for foreign troops, and as history has more than once shown such an event will in all likelihood prove the beginning of the end of the Manchu dynasty, for it is scarcely likely that those troops will never be recalled. Russia would regard the opportunity to obtain a foothold in China as much too valuable to be thrown away, and the Bear, once upon the territory of the Chinese, would not relinquish his grasp, which would of course, compel the other powers to act likewise. Hence the announcement that Russia is sending a floatilla of gunboats and 20,000 men to Tahn is significant as showing that the Czar intends to be first in the rush for Chinese territory, upon which he has for long cast a longing glance.

From the other side. Ultimately the enemy found themselves in a tight corner, their position being fully commanded by the British guns. In great dismay, it is alleged, that they actually cried, helplessly asked the imprisoned lieutenant what they had better do to get out of there. He promptly advised them to surrender, but they declined to do so for a moment. Ultimately they hoisted the white flag, and sent the lieutenant with a message to the British lines in regard to their surrender. On the other side, another party of Boers made him prisoner, and released him on learning his mission. He then proceeded to where he had seen some British cavalry, only to find that it was cut off through their treachery, while the white flag was flying, and here he was wounded and again made a prisoner. Subsequently the Boers sent him to Ladysmith, promising to meet him again there when they captured the town.

GENERAL GATACRE INTERVIEWED.

Possible Defence Against the Charges That May Be Made Against Him.

London, May 29.—The correspondent of an English daily interviewed General Gatacre recently, and thus details the result of his conversation with the General, who was superseded after the Boers made him prisoner, and released him on learning his mission. He then proceeded to where he had seen some British cavalry, only to find that it was cut off through their treachery, while the white flag was flying, and here he was wounded and again made a prisoner. Subsequently the Boers sent him to Ladysmith, promising to meet him again there when they captured the town.

A YONGE STREET BARBER.

A barber of Toronto, whose chair in a fashionable hair-cutting studio on Yonge street is in constant demand, told an interesting story of the manner of his illness and subsequent recovery from it by means of Hutch. In effect, he said that he had been indulging—overly much—and his entire system, stimulated by the potency of "John Barleycorn," reeled not of the morrow. But, alas, time is inexorable, and the after-effects follow surely, and when he awakened from a sound, if not refreshing, slumber, his sickness was—frightful. "I had such a headache that I was fairly blinded," he said. "My stomach seemed full of a sour, bitter, fermenting mass, that filled my mouth with its nastiness. My tongue clacked against the roof of my mouth as though it were metal, and my nausea was rendered more nauseating by not being able to get relief. I had to work, so came down looking like a corpse. When I entered the 'boss' said 'Hutch!' I thought I was discharged and turned to go, when he said 'Hutch' again and held out something towards me. I took a small tablet and he told me to swallow it. I did so. It was only about six minutes before I became relieved—the headache stopped, the saliva in my mouth produced a clean, sweet taste, and my whole stomach seemed to be relieving itself of the rotten stuff which caused my distress. When I went to my lunch at noon I was good and ready for it, and I don't do a thing now but carry a vial of Hutch Tablets with me."

The Woodward Medicine Co., Limited, do not publish the name of the barber herein described. His name and address will be furnished at their office, 11 Colborne street, on application.

Short Story of the Day

Courtship of Hod and Jason.

By Hayden Carruth.

It was probably the biggest lie extant at Hawleyburg, the home of many experienced and intrepid lars. It is doubtful if the Hawleyburgers themselves believed it all, though of great capacity in this line. But the widow Gilbert certainly did exist, though now married in accordance with the tale; she also had a farm on which was a likely hollow where the chief occurrence might have taken place. Perhaps it was the simple truth after all. Truth is stranger than fiction—more of a Hawleyburg it was very much more of a stranger.

There were several versions of the legend known; let us take that of "Old Dad" Highbottle, who maintained a saloon at Binger's grocery store.

"When the widder Gilbert was a-running her farm," Old Dad would say, as he munched a dried apple and looked at the new corner with a flash of eye, "she used to have to keep a couple of hired men, that there boy o' her'n not being able to do much work beyond hooking my watermelon and raising the old Harry generally. The widder was a pretty little looking woman, lemme tell you—blue eyes and a fetching way. Abe Trotter and Jim Buck was going to fight a duel about her, but they compromised on picking each other's dog and sowing pusley seed in each other's garden. Used to think in those days that the widder part a sort of a soft-appearing eye on your trou, but I fit shy."

"The summer the widder had her usual two hired men. One was Hod Bickley and the other Jason Dobbs. Well, now, you know how it is with hired men—always lay as if they got out of more so. Bound to soldier on you, no matter what you do. The only way to get anything out of 'em is to work right alongside of 'em and prod 'em along. Leave 'em of 'em working alone and he'll just naturally lay right down and never wiggle a wiggle."

NOTE.—Weekly report will appear under this head.

"cause the widder wouldn't discharge Jason, and he shot about bringing ridicule onto his head. First he knocked down the rail fence and left Jason without its natural means of support. But he knew this wouldn't do, with old Deacon Thorp's cows ranging about seeking out they might devour, so he put up a wire fence—not barbed wire, 'cause it wasn't invented yet, but old-fashioned smooth fence wire. Strung up five wires from post to post down long the side of the per-ater patch, and 'cross the holler, where Jason was 'customed to rove. 'There,' says Hod, 'I reckon that will fetch him. Leastways he'll have to lay down on the weary side ground now and get the chills and I'll get rid of him, anyhow.' But did it fetch him? Not much; Jason just put his coat on the top wire, clumb up, set down, hooked his heels on the second wire and went plumb for sleep soon as the widder wasn't looking. In fact, I think he sleep better, 'cause he awayed a little in the breeze and a sort o' rocked him and made him dream he was a child again in his mother's cradle."

"At first Hod was dead beat. 'He's too many for me,' says Hod. 'This widder might just as well put a spring bed up there and let him regularly turn in and sleep till meal time.' But Hod got a-thinking, and one day hit on another plan."

"It was about the middle of a warm afternoon, and Jason was a-sleeping quietly on his wire at the bottom of the holler. This holler, you know, is mebbey forty feet below the tops of the hills. Hod knows each side of it. Well, Hod went down along the fence and pulled the staples out of the posts that held the two top wires all the way across the holler, leaving them fast on the further side. Then he hooked the widder's team on the ends up by the barn and drew them top wire up tight and fastened 'em solid to the posts by the barn. Of course Jason went up with the wires, and when Hod got through there Jason was, swinging gently in the summer breeze thirty feet from the ground, his face buried in his hands and his nose balanced across his lap."

"Well, it being near the road, the un-yoosical sight 'tracted 'tention, and soon a parcel of us was a-waiting below to see how Jason would do when he woke up, we reckoning he would be some fluster-gated when he seen where he was. After quite a spell, there being no sign of his waking up, Hod went to the house and got the doaner horn and come out and tooted it furiously. When this welcome sound struck his ears Jason sort o' towed up his head and opened his eyes. Then he looked off and seen the blue sky, and the white clouds, and felt himself floating in the air. 'There,' he says, sort o' all'guzing to himself, 'that there foot was old Gabriel's tramp, just as I spected, and I'm an angel, like I ought to be. Poor old Hod, I guess he's down in 'cether place.' Then he sort o' worked his head around and caught sight o' the ground and partly missed the situation. 'Hello,' says he, 'passa 'arf I came by tele-graph. Always 'lowed if I was a-sleeping working so like a house a-fire that I'd get caught by something fast.' Then he studied the lay of things a little more and says he, 'Se here, Hod; if I'm going to labor and slave and do my own work and half o' yourn any longer the widder's got ter give me a patch o' perlaters to work in where the ground ain't liable to drop down like a trap door. Spoken I hadn't a-been on the fence—I'd a-had my pecky neck broke by that dog-goned yearthquake. Now you just send that supper up ter me by telegraph or tell the widder I'll quit and go back to working in the broom factory."

"Then Hod seen it wa'n't no use, and we r'ared up a ladder and took Jason down, and he made a bee-line for the house, and called for a smack to eat, though it wa'n't more'n 4 o'clock. And that ended Hod's trying to make Jason work."

"But Hod got the widder, didn't he?" asked the new-comer.

"Well, you don't know much about women, seems to me. Not much, he didn't. The widder was so mad about the way they had used the poor fellow that she fired Hod then and there, and in two weeks married Jason."

"But what did she want with such a no-account husband?"

"No account? Well, there you show that you didn't know the widder. She had a soft blue eye, but I forgot to mention her tongue. Under her influence Jason in the house working man in the county. Works harder than Hod that summer. Hisn't got a better worker and the best provider that ever looked through a shirt collar."

Canada's First Boy Baby.

How many people know the name of the first white baby born within the limits of what now comprises the Dominion of Canada, or can even give the date of his birth? According to the chief Statistician of Canada, Mr. George Johnson of Ottawa, the first white baby born in the territory that now comprises the Dominion was neither French nor English. He was born of Icelandic parents who had settled at the base of Greenland's icy mountains and had sailed to the shores of what is now Nova Scotia, to form a settlement in what they called Vinland. The baby, who was named Snorro, was born about the year 1,007, and became the progenitor of a long line of eminent men. Mr. Johnson, to whom we were indebted for our facts, says of Snorro, in an admirable article in the initial number of North American Notes and Queries, just issued at Quebec: "Any Canadian, who visits the Province of Newfoundland will be all the more enthusiastic over the colossal lion carved out of living rock there to be seen, if he recalls the fact that Thorvald, the great explorer to whom we ## LAKEFIELD CEMENT WORKS

ANOTHER PUBLIC MEETING ENDORSES THE PROJECT.

It May Mean a Big Thing for the Village—An Industry That Will Always be Growing—Report of the Deputation Which Visited Owen Sound.

A public meeting was held on Monday evening to receive the report of the deputation sent to Owen Sound to report on the Shallow Lake Cement Works. The full Council was present with Reeve Hill in the Chair as a Court of Revision. The business being ended the Reeve announced that the committee appointed to visit the Shallow Lake Cement Works were now ready to report to the ratepayers and called on Mr. W. H. Cassment to read the report.

Mr. Cassment said that on arrival at Owen Sound the party were met by Mr. Kilburn and driven out to the works, and on approaching the place they were first struck by the thriving appearance of the village which has grown up around and which is entirely supported by the Cement Works.

In the last five years the growth has been from one solitary house to a village of some population, supporting eleven places of business, besides a $1-500 hotel now in course of construction. The most of the buildings are frame, but there are a few of brick. The buildings at the works cover some 1-3-4 acres of ground, the main building being two stories in height. The engine room contains five boilers and furnaces, driving two double expansion Corliss engines of 30 and 50 horse power, or a total of 80 horsepower.

The machinery presented a very imposing appearance and its costly nature is indicated by the amount of insurance carried on it, viz., $30,000. There are now in operation 13 kilns and two more of an improved type are to be erected this year.

The delegates were invited to inspect the pay roll and counted the names of 35 men, the wages paid varying between $1.25 and $3.50 per diem. The men all wore a contented and prosperous appearance. The wages paid out last year were in the neighborhood of $45,000, and the output of cement was 50,000 barrels. There is no nuisance from the works, the surrounding grass and foliage being green and flourishing.

The mail and clay is taken out during the four dry months of the year, when an extra force of 75 men are employed for the purpose.

The committee also visited the North American Chair Company's Works, where some 80 hands are employed, and it was clear to them that the establishment of Cement Works, employing only skilled men would have a tendency to increase the number of their hands, to take advantage of the labor to be obtained among the families of the men.

Finally, the committee unanimously recommended the Cement Works as an industry in every way to be desired as a factor for the future prosperity of Lakefield.

Mr. A. R. Kidd, the special representative of the laboring men upon the occasion, while thoroughly endorsing the report of the delegates as a whole, he had had a special opportunity of mixing and conversing with the men employed at the works, and in reply to his enquiries he stated that the work was healthy, and if anything, too steady, as with the exception of Sundays, the men were kept busy the year round. The wages paid were $1.25 to ordinary laborers, and in the speaker's opinion the work would compare favorably with that on the canal works here, with the advantage of being under cover, and consequently not so hot time. The work at the kilns was paid at the rate of $1.50 per day, and while undoubtedly a warm job, was not dissuaded by these so employed. In conversation with a bricklayer who had been employed since the inception of the works, Mr. Kidd learned that his opinion was decidedly that the bonus asked from Lakefield was comparatively small matter to the advantage to be derived by the working men and the whole community, and that they would be well advised to vote in favor of the by-law. Personally, Mr. Kidd was satisfied that if the works came to Lakefield he would give up his intention of seeking pastures new, and would be satisfied to remain where he was.

Messrs. R. C. Strickland and J. R. Fraser, the remaining members of the deputation, also spoke endorsing the report. The speaker was fully satisfied from what they had seen from the homes of the gentlemen interested in promoting the new Company that they were men of means and of good character. A letter was read from an outside party to a citizen of the village, stating that in his opinion, there was no industry so desirable than cement works for any town to secure. The writer being able to speak with authority, having for six years been employed at the Rathburn Co's. Cement Works at Napawan Mills.

The meeting then closed with a hearty vote of thanks to the deputation.

AN EMPLOYMENT BUREAU.

The Times has endeavored to supply a long felt want.

For a long time Peterborough has been in need of an employment bureau, where those who require help and those who need situations can be accommodated. We will advertise in many papers in the neighborhood, as well as in The Times, for domestic help, and will supply our customers with these as required.

We make no charge to those requiring situations, but to those wanting help we make a charge of 75 cents each, which will entitle the applicant to an advertisement under "Help Wanted," in The Times, and six other newspapers in the district.

Patriotism and Loyalty.

Editor Morning Times.

In these days of progressive ideas one hears a great deal about patriotism, but the word loyalty is so little used among us that it seems almost obsolete.

Patriotism means love of one's country; loyalty, fidelity, to one's country. The words are not strictly synonymous, and if we consider the use of the word of Montreal we shall find it an element of the impulsive. It calls up at once an aggressive, fiery spirit, blind to the faults of his own country, and refusing to see merit in other people or in other forms of government.

There is a strain of the jingo in your patriot. He loves to hear the lion roar, in fact, he would prefer to keep him roaring all the time. He is willing to die for his country, but unfortunately, he is not willing to live for it, and so some market has been made "Lying for a principle" requires a greater degree of heroism than dying for it.

The patriot's impulse prompts him to do noble deeds in time of war, but when peace follows he is to be found in the ranks of those seeking political preferment. As a consequence patriotism, politics and pensions have become almost synonymous terms. When the war is over your patriot stands as a victor, and demands his share of the spoils; and, it must be admitted, his love of country does not always cause him to seek honorable means of attaining his end.

Loyalty, on the other hand, means serving one's country from principle, whether in war or peace. It is a constant flame which burns with a steady blaze. It implies all that is good in patriotism, and rejects what is impulsive, blatant and bombastic.

Patriotism begets politicians; loyalty, statesmen. Perhaps this will explain why we have so many politicians and so few statesmen. How little we hear of statesmen nowadays, and how badly we need them! We could well exchange a score or more of politicians for one good statesman.

A loyal citizen will do as much for his native land in time of war as the patriot will, and in time of peace he will be a much more important factor in promoting the welfare of his country. A country can flourish without patriotism, but it could not exist without loyal citizens. Loyalty is the solid foundation upon which a country rests. Would it not be better for our magazines and newspapers to emphasize loyalty, and allow patriotism to sink to the level of its implied meaning?

THE CHEAPENING TELEGRAPH

Twelve words to Chicago cost $2.00, now Forty Cents.

(From Ainslie's Magazine.)

"The increase in the use of the telegraph for business purposes has been accompanied by a steady reduction in the cost of messages. When the first Atlantic cable was laid the price of a twenty word message between London and New York was $100, or $5 per word. Now the commercial rate between the two cities is twenty-five cents a word.

Telegraphing to different parts of the world is still an expensive business. The rate for a message from San Francisco to Auckland, New Zealand, for example, is $2.37. From New York to Manila the rate is $1.65. The charge rate per word in ratio to the distance. The rate from New York to some South American or West Indian ports is nearly two dollars per word, but in reaching those points the messages travel twice across the Atlantic."

"To Do Ill Costs More Than to Do Well."

This "wise saw" might properly read, "It costs more to BE ill than to BE well." The source of all health is rich, strong blood.

It is to the body what the mighty streams are to the earth. If the blood is pure, the body thrives; if the blood is weak or impoverished, then every pulse-beat carries weakness instead of strength.

Why make the cost of living more than it need be? Purify your blood and give your constitution a chance to do its level best. The only perfect blood purifier and vigor-maker in existence is the world-famed Hood's Sarsaparilla. It brings good, perfect health. It never disappoints.

Erythema Sore.—"After scarlet fever a running sore was left on my nose. Took Hood's Sarsaparilla and it cured me. My brother was also relieved by it of erysipelas in his face." ELLA COUSSEAU, Burden, N. B.

Bowel Trouble.—"My mother, Mrs. John Ainslie, suffered with bowel trouble for four years and tried different doctors, but obtained no relief until she began taking Hood's Sarsaparilla. Three bottles of medicine entirely cured her." LIZZIE RIZO, Tracy Station, N. B.

A Good Medicine.—"We have taken Hood's Sarsaparilla in our family as a spring medicine and used Hood's Pills for biliousness and found both medicines very effective. For impure blood we know Hood's Sarsaparilla is a good medicine." R. S. FALZOR, publisher Bee, Alwood, Ont.

Loss of Appetite.—"I was in poor health, troubled with indigestion, tired feeling and loss of appetite. I was completely run down. I took Hood's Sarsaparilla and after awhile I felt much better. Hood's Sarsaparilla built me up." LIZZIE A. RUSSELL, Old Chelsea, near Ottawa, Que.

Dyspepsia.—"For twelve years I was dyspeptic and broken in health, had terrible pains in my back and was unable to work. When I had taken three bottles of Hood's Sarsaparilla I recovered my health. I always recommend it." J. B. MAISON, 928 8th Street, Oswego, N. Y.

Short Story of the Day

Mr. Bowser's Tribulations.

Mr. Bowser had about half finished his cigar and his evening newspaper when Mrs. Bowser looked up from her sewing and said:

"I wish you'd stop at some furniture store in the morning and see if you can't get a man for an hour or two. I want the things moved out of the spare bedroom and the carpet taken up."

"That's a fair specimen of your economical way of doing things," answered Mr. Bowser. "There's about ten minutes' work to be done and yet you'd pay a man $10 or $12 instead of asking me."

"You ought to get a man for $1 and the last time you took down a bedstead you—"

"The idea of paying out enough money to buy two tons of coal for ten minutes' work!" he interrupted. "When I sit down and think over your reckless extravagance, I wonder we have a dollar in the bank. What is it to take down a bedstead, to yank a bureau out into the hall, to rip up a carpet? I'll have the room empty in five minutes."

"But I thought I'd have the bureau brought down stairs."

"Well, that may take two minutes longer."

"And you know the bedstead is big and solid, and once when you started to take it down you—"

"I know nothing about it. If I ever started to take it down, then down it came. I don't propose to pay out my hard earned money for somebody to come up here and loaf around. It is not exactly 7 o'clock. In five minutes the room will be empty and one minute later I will be back here again."

"I'll pay a man out of my own pin money," protested Mrs. Bowser. "You'll pay nothing," he replied as he started up stairs, followed by the family cat.

No preparation had been made for removal. Mr. Bowser entered the bedroom to find the bed undisturbed, but with one wide sweep of his arm he gathered up blankets, sheets and pillows and carried them down the hall. Then he returned and gave the mattress a twist and a whirl which flopped it off the bed and out of the door, and the springs came next. Mr. Bowser was working on ragtime. No man can pick up a set of bed springs to the tune of "Yankee Doodle." The way the impending calamity and leaped to the top of the bureau. As Mrs. Bowser heaved up the springs and gave them a bounce he lost his balance and went down with a crash, and, having nowhere else to go, the springs followed him. He was fighting them off with hands and feet when Mrs. Bowser looked in at the door and exclaimed:

"Thank heaven that the life has not been crushed out of you!"

"Crushed be banged!" he yelled as he got rid of the springs and stood up. "If you imagine that I'm the sort of man to be crushed under a bedstead set of bed springs you don't know me!"

"I know you'd have trouble, and that was the reason I wanted you—" "There's no trouble about it. The darned cat tripped me up. I'm big enough and old enough to boss this job, and you get right back down stairs and attend to your knitting."

There were two ways of taking down a mahogany bedstead weighing a ton or two. Mr. Bowser's way was peculiarly his own. His first move was to grab the footboard and wrench and twist and draw the whole bed across the room and push it back again. Then he stood off and kicked at the rails until the heels flew off his slippers. It was a sudden inspiration which caused him to lift up the ends of the rails, and to his great surprise they were loosened from the head and footboards. The footboard he managed to move down the hall without accident, but when he came to the headboard, which had been brought over in the Mayflower to ballast the ship, he realized that a desperate struggle was at hand. So did the cat and in her wisdom she retreated to the hall to await events.

"Why in thunder my great-grandfather didn't use this lumber to build a house here is more than I can make out," growled Mr. Bowser as he surveyed the massive structure and waited for his second wind.

It had to be moved, however, and there was no time to call up the Coast Wrecking Co. or figure on the hydraulic power. Mrs. Bowser crept up and sat on the stairs and shivered and the cat walked to and fro in the hall and had nervous tremors, while Mr. Bowser moistened his hands and looked furiously about for a point of advantage. Suddenly he jumped forward and made an attack. His object was to take the bedstead by surprise and run it down the hall before it could make a move in defense. He succeeded to a degree—that is, he got the cumbersome mass clear of the wall and on the move for the door, and Mrs. Bowser was beginning to breathe easier and the cat feeling more hopeful when there was a yell of terror and a crash which shook things clear down to the cellar bottom. The headboard had buckled. Mr. Bowser thought the whole nest side of New York wall coming over him for a moment, and the jump he made as he yelled out ought to be preserved in the history of athletics. He struck his head against the wall with a bump which made him see stars but he had saved his life.

"I knew it," said Mrs. Bowser, as she looked into the room and saw the headboard flat on the floor and Mr. Bowser wiping the dampness off his bald head.

"Has anybody asked for your opinion?" he replied as he tried to assume a careless air.

"I thought you were surely killed. I hope you will now let the rest of it go and send up a man. You see, you don't know how—"

"Oh, I don't, eh? But I'll show you that I do. I'll clear this furniture out if I break both legs and drive my head through the wall."

Mrs. Bowser went back to her seat on the stairs and after lifting her eyes in appeal the cat got as far down the hall as she could. It was Mr. Bowser's plan to juggle the headboard into a feeling of security by giving it a brief rest while he tackled the bureau. To get the bureau out he must move it over the headboard. He had no statistics at hand to consult, but he had great confidence in his lifting powers. Mrs. Bowser heard him suddenly rush upon the bureau and haul it away from the wall. Then

FIGHTING THE CODLING MOTH.

Regulations Adopted for the Suppression of This Destructive Pest

One of the most destructive of the insect pests which assail the fruit crop is the codling moth, the larvae of which detract greatly from the profits of apple raising. At the recent session of the Ontario Legislature an act for the prevention and destruction of noxious insects was adopted, in pursuance of which steps are being taken which, it is anticipated, will greatly lessen the evil. The act provides that such regulations as may be issued by the Lieut.-Governor in Council on the recommendation of the Minister of Agriculture for the purpose of suppressing the force of law in those municipalities which have adopted the Act by-law.

On the 24th of May an Order-in-Council was issued under the act embodying the regulations for the suppression of the codling moth. It is made the duty of every occupier of a lot, or that owner in case of non-occupation, within one week after receiving notice, to place bands upon all bearing apple trees and also upon all other orchard trees of bearing age within forty feet of them. The bands are to be of "burlap," muslin or other suitable material, not less than four inches in width and of three thicknesses, and are to be fastened on at a convenient point between the crotch of the tree and the ground. The occupier or owner is to have the bands removed and inspected, all larvae destroyed, and the bands replaced at intervals of not more than two weeks, during June, July and August.

Municipalities adopting the act are required to appoint inspectors, who will see to the enforcement of the regulations. In case the occupier or owner does not comply with the regulation the inspector may cause the work to be done, and the cost may be charged up against the owner in the collector's roll and collected as taxes.

LORD ROBERTS.

The Friend of the Canadian Soldier

Lord Roberts has on more than one occasion expressed his admiration for the Canadian boys who are taking such an active part in the South African war. In all the correspondence from the front it is also pleasing to note the esteem in which the boys hold their friend "Bobby." Lord Roberts has the Canadian boys with him all the time. This is a great compliment to Canada. There are thousands of Canadians who have friends or relatives in the Canadian Contingent and who would be glad to have a portrait of the great general under whom they are fighting and fighting successfully. The Family Herald and Weekly Star has published a really handsome colored portrait of Lord Roberts and we have completed arrangements with them by which all our readers and residents of this vicinity can secure a copy. It is a true picture of the famous general. It is 12x12 inches, an exact reproduction of a painting by one of the best European artists.

We will send the Weekly Times and the Family Herald and Weekly Star from now until December 31st, 1900, including Lord Roberts' portrait 12x12 for the small sum of 30 cents, and if any person feels that the picture alone is not worth more he can have his money refunded. It is not fair?

To any subscribers whose subscriptions are already paid we offer the Family Herald and Weekly Star, until December 31st, 1900, including the Lord Roberts' picture for 60c. The above offers are open for a limited time only.

DOESN'T BUY A DUKE.

New York May 30.—Miss Katherine Cluff Clark, daughter of Senator Clark of Montana is to be married to-day, in St. Thomas's church, to Dr. Louis Rutherford Morris. Miss Clark has surprised society by the simplicity of her trousseau. Mr. Morris and his bride will go to Paris shortly after their marriage. Miss Clark already has a fortune of $500,000 in her own right.

LOCAL NEWS LETTERS

COBOCONK.

Wednesday morning last the people of Cobocconk were shocked by the news of a lamentable accident, the four year old son of Mr. John Hall, a resident of the village, having been picked up from the family well, into which he had no doubt fallen while at play. The little fellow had been missing for about an hour, but it was supposed that he was with neighbors' children. Much sympathy is felt for the bereaved parents.

LAKEFIELD.

(Correspondence of The Times.)

Everybody appears to favor the Cement Works scheme.

Mr. F. J. Lilliecrapp, who has been engaged in the planing mill business since 1894, has diagnosed of his business to Messrs. Baple & Moore. Mr. Lilliecrapp will devote his entire attention to his wholesale lumber trade.

HALL'S GLEN.

Miss Lydia Crowe, of Peterborough, spent the 24th in this place with her mother.

Mr. C. E. Slason, who teaches school in this neighborhood, has just returned from a visit home in Ontario.

At a meeting of the Zion Sabbath school executive on Tuesday evening last it was decided that a grove social be held on Wednesday evening, June 6th, for the benefit of the school and more particularly for the encouragement of the children.

The Queen's Birthday was celebrated by a number of the young people of this neighborhood, at McCracken's Landing, where they passed a very enjoyable day in boating and various amusements.

Mr. P. Payne, while attending to his farm duties the other morning, in attempting to stop some colts as they approached him at full speed, was instantly run over, being very seriously injured, but it is expected he will recover, after perhaps some weeks of care.

DENSFORD.

The high-water men were viewing the Trent waters again on 24th and 25th.

The 24th was honored in the usual way, singing being one of the chief local attractions.

Messrs. D. Graham and H. Walker have joined the local cycling association. Mr. Andrew Kent will build a new wharf soon on the north shore, about a mile west from Campbelltown, for ready facilities for the disposal of passenger and freight from that part of Ontario.

Mr. W. R. Morrison has recently erected in front of his residence a large pole, tall, handsome, and neatly painted. At the top is placed a miniature pony, elegant in appearance and continually exhibiting the finest qualities of a high jumper.

Messrs. Ross and Watson did a good season's work manufacturing shingles during the winter on the Walker farm, Ontario, near Campbelltown. About seventy thousand of the cut will be used in Manitoba. Cuts number have already been used, and it is found they lay truly and make a handsome and durable roof.

The old traction engine which has been for a number of years in use near here in the manufacture of lumber, shingles, chopped grain, etc., will be removed by Mr. Oscar Craig to Hiawatha, to be employed in use there making shingles. Mr. Craig intends to build a new bridge, but the carlars have advised transportation by scow, owing to unevenness of the weight, when the engine is traveling.

Smith has replaced the whole of the sawmill outfit by another set of the same, and intends placing a new wharf there also for the convenience of steamers.

According to appearance there will be a vigorous growth of apples. There will also be a fine showing in cherries, but in plums nothing; most of the small fruits show at least prospects for an average. Clovers and grasses grow very slowly during the first half of May, but are making good advancement since, showing a thrifty color. Fall wheat generally stood the slow growth of early spring very poorly, and many places show plain evidence of backward tendencies. The spring crops, though a little late to begin, are making rapid progress, and so far show unusually well. The weather being quite favorable, seedling was completed in good time.

Marvellous Developments

ROB ROY
MINES

Are taking place at the property. Matters are in such a state that we really cannot see how it is possible for us to fail now. A practical miner of 33 years' experience told one of our shareholders this week, that where ore was found scattered as ours is it was an unfailing indication of an immense ore body—he had never in all his experience known this sign to fail.

We have found ore in several new places, and our Superintendent writes us this week, "I feel it in my bones that we are on the eve of a strike."

The special issue of stock at fifteen cents (15) per share is being taken up freely, orders coming in from all over by mail. Orders for about 18,000 shares have been received this week so far.

This stock is one of the safest investments at this price that you can get into and offers opportunities for making large profits very seldom met with, and for a thoroughly safe and remunerative investment we recommend these shares. As soon as we strike the Ore Body the property will develop itself and no more shares will be offered. Get a copy of the Ferguson "Eagle" from our office if you haven't seen one and see what the Rob Roy is thought of there.

Lord Roberts Describes the Ceremonies Formally Annexing and Renaming Free State.

COMMANDANT BOTHA AND 100 BOERS CAPTURED

Imperial Yeomany Are Attacked by Boers Between Kroonstad and Lindled and Some Casualties Reported—Roberts

Four Miles North of Johannesburg.

London, June 3. Lord Lansdowne, Secretary of State for War has received the following from Lord Roberts, dated Orange Grove, June 2.—"Johannesburg is quiet, the people are surrendering arms and positions. Only three Boer guns were left in the fort. The Boers have captured May 29, a Command with eleven wagons of stores and ammunition.

"Commandant Botha of Zoutpansburg, his field cornet and 100 prisoners were taken in the fighting around Johannesburg, some belonging to foreign countries, and the Irish Brigade.

The 12th Yeomany were attacked May 29 between Kroonstad and Lindled. There were some casualties.

London, June 3. The War Office has received the following additional advice from Lord Roberts dated Orange Grove, June 2.—"Owing to the interruption of telegraph lines, I only to-day received a report from Col. Spry that his battalion of Imperial Yeomany was attacked between Kroonstad and Lindled May 29. Casualties being. The Boers in Johannesburg are being opened, and there seems to be a general feeling of relief at the peaceful occupation of the town.

"The proclamation announcing annexation of the Orange Free State, was made known at Bloemfontein, May 28, by Gen. Pretorius, Military Governor. The troops under General Kelly-Kenny formed a square, the Royal Standard was hoisted, the troops saluted. A loyal salute was fired, the Queen was cheered and the name 'Orange River Colony' was well received.

"Received a report yesterday that four prisoners had escaped from Pretoria."

London, June 4, a.m. There is no direct news from Pretoria of later date than Thursday evening. Gen. French's cavalry were then at Irene, eight miles south of Pretoria and firing was heard there. Lord Roberts' messages about secondary operations elsewhere, and the situation at Johannesburg, dated at Orange Grove farm, four miles north east of Johannesburg, show that on Saturday at 9.10 a.m. he was 25 miles from Pretoria. The correspondence with Lord Roberts have not got through a line about the operations after the occupation of Johannesburg. Official messages continue to come through, but press telegrams are held up, probably to avoid their giving a hint as to what may be the pending operations. From the other side their filters through Lourenzo Marques a mass of statements more contradictory, others obviously improbable, but the following purport:

AN ATTACK IN THE NIGHT.

One Canadian Killed and Eight Wounded Near Lougias.

Ottawa, June 2.—The Militia Department has received the following from the Major-General Commanding the Militia at Ottawa, June 1.—"I have the honour to report the receipt of a cable from Major Ogilvie, commanding 'E' Special Service Battalion, dated Douglas, 22nd June, reporting the following as killed and wounded in a night attack on Faber's Farm—

Killed. No. 42—Bombardier (corporal in nominal roll) W. LATIMER, 15th 'Sheffield' Field Battery.

Wounded. No. 408—Corporal H. M. BROWN, 'B' Battery, 'Cavalry' Co., severely.

No. 42—Bombardier J. M. SKILL, 'D' Battery, Sydney, Cape Breton, severely.

No. 411—Driver J. KANE, 'D' Battery, Quebec, slightly.

No. 455—G. H. ROSS, an American, 'D' Battery, slightly.

No. 52—Gunner H. B. TATE, 13th Field Battery, formerly of Winnipeg, slightly.

No. 53—Gunner C. WOLLARD, 13th Field Battery, formerly of Winnipeg, slightly.

No. 46—C. F. FLETCHER, Halifax, slightly.

No. 49—C. JACKSON, Pictou Garrison Artillery, slightly.

Signed, B. H. VICK, Colonel for Commanding Canadian Militia.

The engagement in which the Canadian lost their lives was evidently the one mentioned in recent despatches. Col. Sprague was reported killed and the losses amongst the men were heavy.

TONGA'S KING IS KICKING

Heater of the Islands Objects to the Protectorate Clause in Treaty With Britain.

Auckland, June 4.—The King of the Tonga Islands objects to the clause of the treaty between Great Britain and the island government relative to the British protectorate. The king desires a protectorate only against foreign powers and insists upon the kingship of himself and his descendants.

Commissioner Thomson refuses to make any concession, and a deadlock is the result, but hopes have been expressed that a solution of the difficulty will be found.

Montreal, June 3.—Rev. Charles Phillips of Johannesburg, who lectured on "The Transvaal War" this evening, in Emmanuel church, is one of the most interesting men among the delegates who from the recent International Conference brought to this country, having left Johannesburg last October at the beginning of the war.

Mr. Phillips will sail to-morrow for England, preparatory to a return to South Africa, as he is a practicing Mr. Phillips was born in the Cape Colony, and he is now in the public, including the wonderful manager which he has collected, and through his energy and generalship, the upstart of the Transvaal, is becoming a real danger. He seems to only value his money for the pleasure he can thus confer on others. On the other hand, the Transvaal, for which he was undoubtedly responsible, was an ugly blot on his career, and he avowed as his belief, on which he acts, that every man can be taught.

Mr. Phillips referred to the attack on Rhodes as a bad joke of the "independent" by a man named Mills, who claimed to be editor of the "Johannesburg Daily News," an "perfectly baseless" story, as he knew there never was such a paper, and the article, he believed, was purely a fabrication. He did not believe Rhodes was in any way responsible for the present war.

BLACKS WERE FOR ENGLAND.

The blacks were solidly for England, and they had been permitted to fight, and they fought gladly in defence of the flag.

Mr. Phillips thinks the defence of Kimberley, and particularly Mafeking, is the only thing that has kept the Transvaal from falling into the hands of the Boers.

Kimberley was quite open all round. Lady Smith was open to the east, and Mafeking was open to the south, but Mafeking was not a single shot to the garrison, but was totally without natural defence.

Mr. Phillips regards South Africa as a country with a great future. The climate, especially of Johannesburg, which is 5,000 feet above the sea, is delightful, but there is always a season of burning heat elsewhere in the country, and the garrisons at Kimberley, Lady Smith and Mafeking passed right through this period.

Mr. Phillips saw the first Canadian contingent land, and says the enthusiasm was great. He was in this country in the interest of his work.

MILITARY HOLD-UP DOWN IN CUBA.

American Officer Blackmailed Havana Business Men and it Was Hushed Up.

Havana, Cuba, June 2.—An army officer who was a member of General Ludlow's staff during the latter's term as military Governor, may be recalled to mind by Havana business men, who are all charged in the courts. He is accused of blackmail. The specific allegation is that he levied tribute to the amount of $4,000 on Havana business men, and that he enforced the military order requiring them to remove from the city to the country.

The charges made relate to his alleged acceptance of bribes from Havana business men, who were suspected of having given him, to petty extortions levied on persons whose houses were used as a headquarters for the military commander. The charges were made by a Havana merchant whose goods were subject to military inspection, and to various other extortions.

The officer was therefore quietly transferred, and his name was given out as a promotion. Before he left he turned over to the municipality $1,000 of money collected by him. This was the first intimation that his department had been levying and collecting fines. There was no record to show how much had been collected among Spaniards and Cubans.

But the honor of the American army is at stake, and efforts are being made by officers who feel that the entire military administration is under suspicion to have this misdeed brought to trial. It is certain that the scandal cannot be hushed up and will not die out.

Niagara Falls, N. Y., June 2.—Miss Florence Irene Leonard, of Arlington, Ga., a visitor here, is very ill from a shock she received while imprisoned 18 hours on the top of the observation tower on the Prospect Park.

MILLMEN STRIKE.

The Employees of the Dickson Company's Sawmills Quit Work

The Dickson Company's employees to the number of 25 men, quit work yesterday. On account of a difference between the employees and the officers of the company regarding hours of work and the staff of the sawing and shingle departments, are taking a rest.

The men have been working from 6 a.m. to 11 p.m. a day, and their demand is that from 7 to 8, or 10 hours, be considered a day's work. They point out that 10 hours constitutes a day in almost every field of labor, that it is generally recognized as a day's work. They seek to be put on the same footing as employees of other works.

On Friday evening last the men made a formal demand that their day be shortened by an hour, and received a refusal. Yesterday morning they went to work at 7 o'clock instead of 6 as usual, and were told that they must report at 6 o'clock in order to receive a day's pay. They all quit with two exceptions, a sawyer and a packer, in the shingle mill. These two decided not to stand out.

The officers of the company point out that the mill has been run 11 hours a day for years. This rule is long established, and they see no reason why it should be broken. They state that the wages of the men were increased this spring.

The campers and other employees (than those mentioned) are at work. The company state that they will easily fill the places of the strikers.

Paine's Celery Compound The Never-Dissappointing Banisher of Sickness and Disease.

The statement that Paine's Celery Compound builds up sickly, weak and run-down people is true in every particular. It is also true that Paine's Celery Compound is the only medicine in the world that can successfully grapple with obstinate and long-standing cases of dyspepsia and give to sufferers active limbs, pure blood, clear complexion, healthy appetite and perfect digestion. Scores of able and reliable physicians, prominent druggists, legislators, merchants and leaders in society can bear testimony to the wonderful cures wrought by Paine's Celery Compound during the past spring months.

Such facts and statements should be sufficient to convince all doubting and dependent sufferers, and inspire them with a determination to take the world's greatest health-giver. Mr. Chas. W. Ross, Department of Agriculture and Canada, Ottawa, writes thus—

"For a long period of time I suffered from the pain and tortures of neuralgia, and the effects to my general system were so serious and alarming that my doctor ordered an ocean trip. I went to England at considerable expense, but had to return to Canada almost as bad as when left it. After getting home I determined to commence the use of Paine's Celery Compound, as it was strongly recommended for such troubles. After using the medicine for a short time the results were most pleasing and gratifying. The attacks became less frequent and less severe, and soon the whole trouble was completely banished. I have not experienced a pain or ache for months. I take great pleasure in recommending such a marvelous medicine to all neuralgic sufferers. Paine's Celery Compound has not only banished my pain, but has also established virtuous and powerful, and certainly overcomes any form of neuralgia."
